"We shall happily still have an opportunity to prove that friendship in our daily attitude and actions towards the millions of men and women of German birth and native sympathy who live amongst us and share our life, and we shall be proud to prove it towards all who are in fact loyal to their neighbors and to the government in the hour of test. They are most of them as true and loyal Americans as if they had never known any other fealty or allegiance. They will be prompt to stand with us in rebuking and restraining the few who may be of a different mind and purpose. If there should be disloyalty, it will be dealt with with a firm hand of stern repression; but, if it lifts its head at all, it will lift it only here and there without countenance except from a lawless and malignant few.

"It is a distressing and oppressing duty, gentlemen of the congress, which I have performed in thus addressing you. There are, it may be, many months of fiery trial and sacrifice ahead of us. It is a fearful thing to lead this great, peaceful country into war, into the most terrible and disastrous of all wars, civilization itself seeming to be in the balance. But the right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest to our hearts—for democracy—for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own governments. For the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free. To such a task we can dedicate our lives and fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other."

Capital in War Spirit.

The capitol was arrayed in a war spirit as congress assembled. The pacifist delegates wearing white bands on their sleeves or white streamers across their breasts, paraded the sidewalks in numbers, filled the House and Senate galleries and made calls on their congressmen. They moved about with demonstration and there were few evidences of hostility against them.

The patriotic pilgrims were hard to distinguish among thousands of citizens who went about the day's work wearing American flags. The national colors fluttered and rippled from buildings, automobiles and almost every point of vantage. The street car companies placed them on their cars; every traffic policeman's "go-go" sign had a flag fluttering from its peak. The capitol was a wave of color.

Gardner Has Resolution.

A resolution to declare war between the German empire and the United States, as prepared by Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, republican, says "that war be and the same is hereby declared between the German empire and the United States of America and the president is authorized and directed to use the whole land and naval forces of the United States against the said German empire, its subjects and dependencies."

The preamble sets out that "the triumph of Germany would destroy the liberty of the world," that "the grandeur of the United States will not permit its share of the burden of war to be borne by other nations," and "that Germany has continued to destroy American ships and to take American lives."

Speech to Declare War?

President Wilson's address immediately will be sent to all the foreign embassies and legations here and will be telegraphed to American diplomats abroad. It was acknowledged today that foreign governments on receipt of it may interpret it as they think best, even to assume that it so closely approximates recognition of a state of war as to necessitate the issuing of neutrality proclamations. Whether such a step will be taken by any neutral prior to formal action by congress is not known here.

The House session opened with Clark South Trimble presiding until organization was perfected.

Prays for Patriotism.

The chaplain included in his prayer a plea for patriotism.

"Diplomacy has failed," he prayed, "moral suasion has failed. Appeals to reason and justice have been swept aside.

"We abhor war and love peace, but if war has been or shall be forced upon us, we pray that the heart of every American citizen may throb with patriotism and that a united people may rally around our president to hold up his hands in every measure deemed necessary to protect the lives of American citizens and safeguard our inheritance."

Jordan Denied Interview.

Delegations of pacifists held "war protest" meetings in their respective senators' offices. One such delegation was rebuked by Senator Wadsworth when one of several speakers said America had been a "false friend" to Germany.

"That's calling my country a pretty harsh name; I don't came to hear any more of it," said Senator Wadsworth in terminating the interview.

David Starr Jordan, chancellor of Leland Stanford university, and one of the leading pacifists, made an effort to see President Wilson this morning but the president was busy.

Cheers for Miss Rankin.

Miss Rankin's entrance into the House was signalized by uproarious cheering and applause. Every member of the floor and everybody in the crowded galleries rose as, accompanied by Representative Evans, of Montana, she walked to a seat in the rear center of the hall.

Miss Rankin carried one of the scores of boquets of flowers which had come to her office. She wore no hat and was attired in a dark dress. Members rushed from all parts of the chamber to congratulate her.

A second outburst of applause greeted Miss Rankin when her name was called on the roll and she replied "present," blushing furiously. The ovation continued until she rose from her seat and bowed.

BLEAKLEY STAYS AWAY.

Franklin, Pa., April 2.—Announcement was made here that O. D. Bleakley, congressman-elect from the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania district, who pleaded nolo contendere Friday to a federal indictment charging him with violation of the election laws, will not be present at the opening session today. Mr Bleakley is a republican.

REPORTS OF WAR PLANS CONFIRMED?

Washington, April 7—Persistent but hitherto unconfirmed reports of German submarines waiting in the Gulf of Mexico for the opening of hostilities with the United States were further supported today by advices to the government from Europe.

The full nature of the government's information is not disclosed, but it was received from one of the neutrals contiguous to Germany which has served as a clearing house for German information since the severance of diplomatic relations.

It was reported at the source of origin of the government's information that more than a score of German submarines were already in Mexican waters. Persons here, who have been investigating the subject, think the estimate of numbers is high, but feel no doubt that German submarines are somewhere on this side of the Atlantic, most probably in Mexican waters, and that some of them have been there since early in February.

There is no doubt here that if the U-boats are in the gulf they are being supplied from Mexican shore bases. Those who hold these views also are convinced that something closely approaching the arrangements proposed by Foreign Minister Zimmerman in his celebrated communication intended for General Carranza have been achieved and that the whole matter, including the supplying of submarines from Mexican shores, was arranged by Mexican Minister Zeubüran in Berlin.

SPARE ROOSTER, SAVE CHICKENS

Let Him Live at Any Egg Cost Illinoisan Pleads.

Chicago, April 5.—Arguing that the country's supply of poultry is threatened by an undue slaughter of roosters, H. B. Patton, of Bloomington, Ill., pleads for the monarch of the barnyard.

"I am not arguing which was first, the egg or the chicken," says Mr. Patton, "but the question does loom up before me, which is most to be considered, the chicken or the egg!

"Not many years ago central Illinois furnished a good supply of poultry until March 1, but of late by January 1 the harvest is past and but little poultry is left for the gleaners.

"I have a suspicion that 'swatting the rooster' has had no small part in bringing about this change in the late season's supply. In these days of under production and over consumption a full poultry crop is desirable and needed to help feed the world."

COMMONWEALTH OF IOWA EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

Des Moines, Ia., March 29, 1917

Mr. Gardner Cowles,
Register Tribune,
Des Moines, Iowa,

Dear Sir:

At our breakfast table this morning the following conversation took place: Mrs. Harding said, "I thought you sent a communication to the legislature yesterday in reference to the food shortage" "That is true, I did." She said, "I have been looking through the morning Register but find no mention of it." Later I took the morning Register and looked through it and found the following: "nobody will question that W. W. Marsh of Waterloo has rendered a substantial service by persuading Governor Harding to emphasize the importance of the coming food crop in Iowa," This is the only mention of the message in the morning Register.

Just why the Hon. W. W. Marsh, one of the leading citizens of our own state and the nation, should be thus insulted is beyond my power of comprehension to understand. Monday, the twenty-sixth instant, Mr. Marsh called on the Governor of the state of Iowa. He belongs to a different political party than the one with which the Governor is affiliated During the last campaign he was officially connected with his party in such a way that he had much to do with the campaign. His infltence was all with the candidates on his party ticket. The campaign is over. He came to the office of the Governor as a citizen of the United States and in a spirit of patriotiim offered to do any and everything in his power to assist in maintaining the rights and the dignity of our common country. His visit was of assistance to the Governor and, I am sure, beneficial to the State. He did not come to the office in a spirit to "persuade" nor did he "persuade," but in that larger and more patriotic spirit of being helpful and offering his service in any way or in any capacity that it might be required.

It has been suggested that you are unfriendly to me personally. I have thought that I could detect this cropping out in your paper from time to time. In this I am not interested. When I spoke to the legislature about the food shortage, it was as Governor of all the people of Iowa and in the name of humanity everywhere.

It is hard for me to conceive that your unfriendliness to me can cause you to be almost a traitor to your State and your country in an hour like this. Let me suggest that the man or the paper that hampers or makes it hard for those in authority and who have the burden of the responsibility of government at this time is just as much a traitor as one who tears down the flag of his country, I submit this for your consideration. Verly truly yours, (Signed) W. L. Harding.

A CALL TO PATRIOTIC SERVICE

By direction of the Governor, this appeal is made to the people of Iowa.

Our country is at war.

Not every citizen can render patriotic service in the actual conflict, but every citizen can be of material assistance to his country in some way

Iowa, the greatest of agricultural States, is especially called upon by National and State authorities to produce a maximum amount of food this year—more than ever before. The armies we are about to raise must have food and plenty of it; this is the great lesson which the war in Europe has taught us—the supreme importance of food. Every individual who joins in this campaign to produce more food performs a great and patriotic service to his country.

This appeal comes to every one who reads it as an appeal to patriotic DUTY.

Not only can every farmer respond to this appeal by working with greater energy and care than ever before to raise bigger field crops, but the boys and girls on the farm are called upon to plant gardens on the unused spots of ground, and the people in towns, young and old are called upon to plant portions of their lots in gardens, particularly for the raising of staple articles of food, such as potatoes and corn and onions and turnips and the like, which can be gathered and preserved for food purposes

By the way of practical and possible suggestion I offer the following

Farmers, plant good big patches of potatoes, not on your poorest land, but on the richest soil you have plowing and planting deep to avoid effect of possible dry weather.

Plant some good forage crop along the fences and a catch crop of rape in corn at last plowing; good for fall feed, as well as fertilizer for next year. Build up the land by saving every particle of manure The farmer who will really think about this and take a real interest can devise ar more and better means of increasing production than I or anybody else could suggest

Let Town Councils appoint committees to see that vacant lots and parcels of ground in the towns are planted in something and not let to run to waste and weeds.

Let all live stock be made to produce the maxiumum increase; breed all sows for fall pigs, and keep all heifers to raise calves.

I am anxious to see the Tenth District of Iowa the banner district of Iowa in this great service to our country, and I hope to visit every county during the year and see what is being done.

I should be glad to hear from anybody with suggestions as to what might be done, or with report as to what is actually being done This is a great work, let us realize its enormous importance to our country and her welfare.

LET EVERYBODY HELP

Yours for Greater Food Production
CHARLES G COCKERILL,
Jefferson, Iowa

EDISON AT WORK

What is Edison doing?

Discussions of America's part in the war are seldom prolonged among a group of men without that question being asked by somebody.

Immediately upon the severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany, the wizard among American inventors cast aside all other work and began to devote himself exclusively to research in the interest of the country's defense He had been giving considerable time to it for months previous, and presumably had a definite line of work to follow

The natural presumption is that Edison's efforts will be focused upon the submarine, either perfecting it or perfecting means to destroy it. The electrically guided torpedo, upon which John Hays Hammond, Jr, has been working for years, offers a particularly inviting field for the genius of an Edison

As an indication of what Edison may be doing, there is the co-incidence, or more than coincidence, that just after the break with Germany, Henry Ford bought a large acreage of water front on the New Jersey coast, at the nearest point to the Edison laboratories. Henry Ford and Edison are exceptionally close friends, and have been for years. Ford announced at the first breath of war that his fortune was at the disposition of the government, without charge It is probable, if not almost a certainty, that he has purchased the Jersey coast land in order to provide Edison with a working field for submarine and torpedo tests

This is particularly likely to be true because Ford himself, for a year past has had a submarine hobby. He has thought it practicable to construct a small undersea boat, carrying only a single man and one or two torpeoes, and to turn them out in such prodigious quantities that they would render any coast line impervious to attack

Whatever Edison produces will be kept a profound secret Even the general attributes of any discovery he makes will be concealed, for fear of duplication by the Germans

If the great American inventor succeeds in turning out a revolutionary weapon, the first inkling the world gets of its nature will be when it hits the Germans. It is to be hoped that whatever he does will serve to make war more difficult to wage and not [illegible]

A new record was made in the Chicago cattle market when one load of prime shorthorn Iowa steers sold at $13.15. This was 20c higher than any previous sale this season. The shipment was made by William Matthiesen of Bryant.

Brick building operations in Sioux City are practically at a standstill as the result of a demand for a 5 cent per hour increase on the part of bricklayers. It was announced by contractors that the men asked a boost from 75 to 80 cents per hour.

Mrs. S. F. Cheney, widow of one of the pioneer settlers of Polk county, passed away in Webster City recently at the age of 87 years. Mr. and Mrs. Cheney came to Des Moines in 1856 going by rail from Massachusetts to Iowa City and by stage the remainder of the way.

Passengers on an interurban car entering Cedar Rapids over the bridge recently had a rather thrilling experience when the car caught fire from a short circuit. The motorman shot the car across the bridge and brought it to a stop in time for the passengers to escape.

Gas in the engine of his car exploded and severely burned Dr. B. F. Copeland of Logan recently. A short time ago the doctor's car turned turtle and caught afire before it could be righted. Before that the steering gear broke on a cold day and the machine plunged off a bridge.

Reports from Washington say that the Iowa delegation in the house voted 8 to 3 in favor of the war resolution. Those who came out for it prior to the voting were Towner, Green, Good, Dowell, Kennedy, Scott, Sweet and Ramseyer. Those opposing it included Woods, Hull and Haugen.

Dunlap is to have a lot of work this summer. The contract for the construction of a new sewer system has been awarded. Workmen have started to tear down the old First National bank building, a new structure will soon occupy the site of the old one. A new $75,000 public school will be built this summer. A new one story creamery has just been completed.

Experts from the Iowa state college are at work upon a survey of the right-of-way of the Chicago Great Western railroad in Iowa in order to determine how much of the land will be available for cultivation. The railroad has offered to turn the land over to the farmers working adjacent farms, the ground to be cultivated by them and the proceeds to go to them.

The thirteenth annual reunion of the "Hornets Nest Brigade" comprising civil war veterans of the Second, Seventh, Eighth, Twelfth and Fourteenth Iowa infantry will be held at Maxwell, May 9 and 10. The Iowa Brigade participated in some of the most desperate fighting of the civil war and it was their fighting ability that won their name for them from the Confederates.

William J. O'Brien, aged 19, was so anxious to enlist in the army that he recently walked all the way from Boone to Marshalltown for that purpose. He asked the postmaster at Boone where he could enlist and was informed that the station at Marshalltown was the nearest. Being without funds, O'Brien walked the entire distance. He wanted to join the cavalry and was sent to Fort Logan, Colo., for final examination.

As a result of a conference of the Governor and about a hundred of the leading farmers, farm experts and business men of the state at the governor's office recently, a committee has been appointed by the governor to have charge of the campaign in Iowa to increase the food production as a measure of preparedness. All of the men appointed to the committee are actively interested in farming. The legislature has been asked to appropriate $100,000 for the expenses of the work.

To determine the nature of the soil types of Sioux county, in order that local farmers may be assisted in fitting crops to soils to best advantage, the Bureau of Soils of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, has made a soil survey of the county. The report of the survey, just published by the Department, contains a soil map of the county on which farmers may find the approximate location of their farms, and 37 pages of text describing the various soils and discussing their capabilities.

A gigantic patriotic demonstration was held in Des Moines recently and a resolution expressing the loyalty of the audience to the President was adopted by a unanimous vote. The recruiting of the national guard and the regular army and navy took a big jump following this demonstration.

H. B. McKee of Webster City received $2,800.20 for sixty-one head of hogs which averaged 300 pounds in weight or $15.30 per hundred on the Chicago market recently. The animals were raised on the McKee farm in Hamilton county and were fed corn now worth twenty-five cents a shovel full.

Agricultural extension inaugurated in Iowa about eleven years ago to "extend" the benefits of Iowa State college and its agricultural experiment station to all the people seems to be fulfilling that purpose, according to the biennial report of B. K. Bliss, director. In the year 1915-16 the total attendance at the extension meetings was 619,865 people.

Dr. John E. Howe, chairman of the state board of parole, died at his home at Greenfield. He had been ill since Jan. 31 with heart trouble. Deceased was born near Washington courthouse, Fayette county, Ohio, Aug. 1, 1847. He moved to Iowa in 1869. Dr. Howe was appointed a member of the board of parole by Governor Carroll in September, 1909, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Emmert. He was planning to retire on account of ill health.

Truth

As its advertisement---so the car. An honest announcement goes with an honest car.

Truth is the eternal test.

You will never read a Chevrolet statement making any extravagant claim.

True, we have claimed certain qualities for our car---superior motor-power, easy riding comfort, low cost of upkeep---but we have always been prepared to support our statement with the proof.

We claim that the Chevrolet model---now as always---stands for the highest motor value in its price class.

Test our statement---see the Chevrolet car, ride in it.

You will find---as thousands of others have---that we have spoken the truth.

OMEN! IT IS MAGIC! LIFT OUT ANY CORN

ply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without pain or soreness.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone, like here shown, for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Hard, soft or corns between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. If your druggist hasn't freezone, tell him to order a tiny bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND NED'S JOKE.

"You want to look out for yourself tomorrow, Uncle Wiggily" said Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, the muskrat lady housekeeper, as she gave the bunny rabbit his breakfast in his hollow stump bungalow, just before he was about to start out for his daily adventure.

"Look out for myself why?" Uncle Wiggily wanted to know. "Is anything special going to happen?"

"You never can tell," answered Nurse Jane. "You know tomorrow is the first of April, and——"

"Oh, now I understand" cried the bunny gentleman "Some one may play tricks or jokes on me"

"Exactly," said Nurse Jane. "So watch out."

"I'll watch out," promised Uncle Wiggily, and away he hopped through the woods, looking for an adventure But I am sorry to say, he had none worth writing about. True, he found some little violets just peeping up in the green moss, and he took them to Aunt Lettie, the nice old lady goat who had to have one of her horns pulled out But that was hardly an adventure

And about this same time Neddie Stubtail, the little bear boy, with Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow, the two puppy dog boys, were whispering together behind the cave where lived Mr Whitewash, the polar bear

"Won't it be a good joke" said Neddie, laughing

"It sure will," said Jackie "He'll be so surprised!"

"We'll have to do it when Nurse Jane isn't home," said Peetie for if she knew she'd be sure to tell him and that would spoil your joke, Neddie"

"That's so. Well, Nurse Jane is coming over to our house today to help my mother sew a bed quilt, so no one will be at the hollow stump bugalow We can crawl in the window, spread ourselves out on the floor, and when Uncle Wiggily comes in he'll think we're black fur rugs that Nurse Jane has bought as a surprise for him, and he'll be so astonished he'll jump over his ears."

"Oh, such fun as it will be!" barked Jackie. "You sure did think up a dandy joke, Neddie"

"Yes, I guess I did," spoke the little bear boy, but he was not at all proud "Of course," he said, "it won't be April Fool's day until tomorrow, but that will be all right"

"Sure!" agreed Jackie and Peetie and then the two little puppy dog boys and bear chap, set off for Uncle Wiggily's bungalow to play an April fool joke on him.

This was what it was to be Neddie thought that if he and the two dogs were to go in, stretch out flat on the parlor floor when Uncle Wiggily came in he would take them for new fur rugs such as you sometimes see in the moving pictures you know almost like real animals on the floor

"I only hope he doesn't step on us," said Neddie.

"Oh it won't matter much if he does," said Jackie Uncle Wiggily is very light on his feet since he learned to do the fox trot"

Soon the three animal boys were at the hollow stump bungalow Nurse Jane was not at home and Uncle Wiggily, as you know was out looking for an adventure A side window was open and through this Neddie Jackie and Peetie easily crawled Then when they were inside they thought they heard Uncle Wiggily coming, so without stopping for anything they gave each one a jump into the parlor and there they stretched out on the floor.

"Funny the floor hasn't rugs on it at all" said Neddie as he flattened himself out "I'd think they were expecting us."

"Yes, it is queer," agreed Jackie. "But, oh! what a good joke it is, Neddie! I'm sure——"

"Hush! Here he comes!" whispered Peetie

They could hear the tap, tap, tapping of Uncle Wiggily's red, white and blue striped rheumatism crutch on the front steps. Soon the old rabbit gentleman looked in the half-lighted parlor where the two puppy dogs and the bear boy had stretched themselves out as flat as they could

"Oh, Nurse Jane has been buying some new rugs," said the rabbit gentleman. "She wanted to surprise me."

"Ha! This is where we surprise him!" whispered Neddie to his friends. "Jump up now, and bark while I growl!" Oh, what a joke!"

Neddie tried to get up So did Jackie. So did Peetie. But they could not. They were stuck fast to the floor! Think of that!

"What's the matter?" cried Jackie, pulling and pulling.

"Oh, my goodness!" cried Uncle Wiggily, as he put on his glasses. "It's my friend Neddie Stubtail and Peetie and Jackie Bow Wow, and they are all stuck fast on the newly varnished parlor floor. Oh, they are stuck in the sticky varnish. That is too bad. Why did you come in here, little animal boys? Didn't you see the sign 'Paint' on the door?"

"No—we—we didn't," said Neddie, still stuck fast in the sticky varnish. "We were going to play an April fool joke on you—pretending we were rugs, but——"

"But now the joke is on you," laughed Uncle Wiggily But, never mind The painter man left some turpentine, after he finished varnishing the floor, so I'll soon melt you loisse," and the bunny uncle did, for turpentine softens varnish.

The fur of Neddie, Jackie and Peetie was quite sticky, even after they were loosed from the newly varnished floor, but it wore off after a few days. And they said they would not play any more April jokes. But if the animal crackers don't jump through the coffee strainer and make the egg beater sit down in the teapot next you shall hear about Uncle Wiggily and the rain.

Gruesome German Advertisement.

Paris—The Journal says that the technical paper, the Chemicher Zeitung, published on November 18, 1916, the following advertisement: "The Eckbolsheim Thermo-chemical company, Strasburg. On account of the departure of our manager, we require an engineer, free from military obligations, to direct, technically and commercially, our factory for the destruction of dead bodies." The name of the factory leaves no doubt respecting the nature of the work carried on in this thermo-chemical factory, which comprises the chemical treatment and utilization of dead bodies.

The statement in the Lausanne Gazette made by the American consul who left Germany at the same time as Mr Gerard fully confirms this The enemy is reduced to extremities in order to obtain explosives.

Democracy's Handicap.

From the New York Tribune.

It is essential for Americans to remember that France and England are both struggling with the same kind of politicians who are with us in Washington, politicians who at a moment of national peril think of their own political fortune and of the power and of the prestige which they deem their right. They do not represent the nation In France recent political maneuvers have discouraged both the army and the people and weakened to some extent the fine confidence excited by the recent victory at Verdun In Paris one hears it frequently said "We have two enemies the Germans at Noyon and the politicians at the Palais Bourbon"

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

She Qualified It.

The fortune-teller was sending cold streams of horror down her victim's back as she predicted the bad things in store for him in the immediate future.

"You will die in a year!" she hissed, at last "This line in your palm tells me so."

"Help!" gasped the victim. "It surely cannot be as bad as that?"

"As I said," continued the seer, "you will die in a year—but in what year I cannot say."

Rats and Fires.

At a time when everyone is complaining of the high cost of living it might be well to see if we cannot eliminate two great sources of waste—fires and rats.

Most fires are needless. All rats are so. Some years ago a study of the rat problem in Philadelphia arrived at the conclusion that the rodents of that city ate more than a million dollars' worth of food each year. At that rate, the disgusting creatures can hardly cost less than $100,000,000 per year to the whole country. This is a pretty high price to pay for the companionship of impish pests which, besides their other bad habits, undermine floors and carry the most dreaded of all diseases, bubonic plague.

Yet fires are more expensive than rats. In 1915—the last year for which figures are at hand—the American people paid out in premiums for fire insurance $419,361,346. Of this vast sum at least three-fourths could be saved by reducing our fire record to the rate prevailing in England, France or Germany; and even in our time and nation $300,000,000 per year is a saving worth noting, and one which would have a perceptible effect on the cost of living.

A Sport.

"How would you like to risk a little money in a game of chance?" asked the insinuating stranger.

"Don't mind risking 25 or 30 cents," answered Uncle Hiram Waybacker. "By gum, trot out your checkerboard!"

Steam railroad accidents in Pennsylvania in 1916 were fatal to 1,274 persons.

"There's a Reason"

The Toll of This War.

From the Pittsburgh Post

An Associated Press summary of the war in Europe says that 10,000,000 men are recorded as killed, wounded, captured or missing, the number of dead reaching nearly 5,000,000, and that of the wounded more than 2,500,000. It has been estimated by economists that if the war lasts another year its money cost will have reached $100,000,000,000. The anguish of the friends of the slain, the many homes from which happiness has been driven, and the increased burden of taxes—it is impossible to give an adequate description of the suffering imposed. The misery caused by the wars of Attila, Genghis Kahn and Napoleon combined does not equal that of the two and a half years of this struggle in Europe.

The pacifist may find in the awful toll of the war cause for renewing his protests against preparedness for such contests—how much better it is to settle things by reason! No one disputing that national differences ought to be settled by diplomacy, the cry of the hour being against the condition in which a few men can cast aside diplomacy and plunge millions into war, it is only a waste of time to argue that adjustments "ought" to be accomplished by reason. Of course they ought; but what better proof that there can be no certainty that they will be than the 10,000,000 casualties just announced? The people know before this struggle began that differences "ought" to be settled by reason—yet today we are forced to consider the greatest slaughter of human beings on record. And the fact that the losses of the central allies to date are only about half those of the entente allies presents an argument for preparedness that cannot be refuted. Had England and Russia been as well prepared for war as Germany, it is only common sense that the casualties of the entente allies would have been less—the war probably would have been settled long ago.

The course of wisdom for the American people is to heed the many lessons of unpreparedness, and without delay. Overlook nothing necessary to defense.

The Melting Pot.

There is trouble in Mexico.

A Brooklyn policeman was left $1,700 by an elderly spinster because of kindness he had shown her.

The Cudahy Packing company of Chicago reports that last year it made only a quarter of a cent a pound on its dressed beef.

The secretary of a prominent philanthropist in New York was arrested for stealing $20,000 and said he spent it "to lead a gay life."

An Olympia (Washington) man has been sentenced to four days in jail for printing a statement that George Washington was a drinker.

Nearly $20,000,000 was contributed to foreign missions by the Protestant churches of the United States during 1916.

The domestic science department of the Appleton, Wis., high school has adopted a 2-month-old baby as a live subject to work with in their studies.

Chief Magistrate McAdoo says there is in New York an idle army of slab-sided round-shouldered, fishy-eyed men open to any crime, that sponge on their mothers and sisters.

A Newark, N. J., policeman and two fellow keepers of the penitentiary were recently arrested for stealing, and the Chicago chief of police on the charge of grafting

A globe-trotter who, since he left Paris 27 years ago, has walked 180,000 miles and worn out 300 pairs of shoes, was arrested in New York because his dog was not muzzled

A prominent physician told the New York Academy of Medicine recently that "one or two members of every large family are inefficient and need help to get along in the world."

Suffragists posted sentinels around the White House to make it impossible for the president to enter or leave without meeting someone bearing a suffrage device. He passed them, unrecognized, but the next day during the cold snap, he invited them in to warm their feet.

Chicago secret service agents confiscated a Turkish towel four feet long, displayed in a store, because it was woven in imitation of a $5 bill and therefore was a "counterfeit."

Concerning Taxpayers.

From the Manson (Ia.) Democrat.

Not infrequently you hear someone sneer that somebody else should have nothing to say about public improvements and affairs because he "is not a taxpayer" Nothing could be farther from the truth A man does not have to hold property to be a taxpayer Every man, woman and child who works and earns is a taxpayer The loafer who owns nothing and does not work is not a taxpayer, neither is the savage, but the man who earns pays his share of the taxes and the upkeep of the country, just as well as the man who pays taxes on property holdings. The woman who raises children and keeps her home is as much of a taxpayer as the woman in business and in the professions who owns property and pays taxes on it. Every cent that is spent by people who do not own property, for the necessaries of life, goes into the coffers of people who do own property and, out of the profits of the money the man without property spends, the property owner pays his taxes. Never sneer at a man because his tax receipt is not as large as yours or because he has never had a tax receipt. God put him on this earth to do his part and the chances are that if you stop to inquire you will discover that he is doing his part as well as you are, or even better.

An Obvious Means.

From the Cleveland Leader.

There have been investigations and boycotts, grand jury indictments and arrests, special legislation and, official proclamations, and all sorts of explanations, foolish and profound, over the causes of the high cost of living. And still the cost of living keeps on going higher, and the attempted enlightenment has done little but confuse the people.

But there is every indication that the people are not confused about one thing—they know they can do a great deal themselves to lessen the burden of high food prices. This spring will see such a planting in back yards and vacant lots as has never been known. In city suburbs and small towns people will go back to the old American habit of raising chickens and in many instances "keeping a cow." Many who have been dependent for the raising of their food supplies upon others will by summer be more independent of the grocer, the marketman and the huckster than ever before.

This may not be pleasant for those who make the production of food their business or for the middlemen who stand between them and the customers, but it is the most obvious means of relief for the people, and a great number of them are going to make it.

Public Duty to the German-Americans.

From the Chicago Post.

Mr. Horace L. Brand, editor of the Illinois Staats Zeitung, speaks in almost exact words which the Post has been using when he says in his newspaper today:

"Americans not of Teutonic ancestry have a patriotic duty to perform toward those fellow citizens who are of that migration.

"That duty consists of showing their friendship for these, whose hearts are wrung by a war with Germany; to pardon with kindly forbearance the unguarded but otherwise unintentionally unfortunate remarks that a German-American might be guilty of; to help to erase the fear among German-Americans that spies surround them, ever ready to misinterpret innocent acts or words; to aid in increasing the love for and attachment to the United States on the part of citizens of German birth, and to assist, as far as possible, to bring back peace and contentment to the German-American element."

Americans, who can feel any proper realization of the tragic choice that may soon face their fellow citizens of German blood, must act in accordance with the plea of Mr. Brand. It is an American plea because it is for the good of America. So vital is it that America must prepare to enforce it by the strength of the common government, should the good sense of the people be insufficient for its voluntary observance.

Theory and Practice.

Mrs. Blough—I don't try to suit everyone. I always want people to take me just as I am.

Caller—Glad to hear it, for we're in a big hurry I'm the staff photographer for the 'Scarehead,' and the Sunday editor sent me out to get snapshot of you—

Mrs. Blough—Good heavens! Wait till I run and frill up a bit and put on some more powder.

Not Her Job.

He was a young subaltern. One evening the sister in the hospital had just finished making him comfortable for the night, and before going off duty asked: "Is there anything I can do for you before I leave?"

"Dear little Two Stars replied: "Well, yes! I should like very much to be kissed good night."

Sister rustled to the door. "Just wait till I call the orderly," she said. "He does all the rough work here."—London Opinion.

Old Looks?

(BY DR. L. H. SMITH)

Persons suffering from too much uric acid in the system frequently look older than they should. They age faster and the appearance of gray hair or baldhead in early years is, indeed, often a sign of uric acid. The face appears lean and haggard, lines and wrinkles appearing in young men or women.

The best way to combat this premature age and the obstruction to the arteries and faulty circulation is of the simplest: Drink copiously of pure water between meals. This will not make you fat, as it is only the water taken with the meals that fattens. Obtain at any drug store a package of Anuric, double strength, which is to be taken before meals, in order to expel the uric acid from the system. The painful effects of backache, lumbago, rheumatism, gout, due to uric acid in the blood should quickly disappear after treatment with Anuric.

Victim of the Law.

"Now, my lad," said the severe magistrate, "have you anything to say for yourself—any excuse to offer for such early depravity. Fourteen years old and caught picking pockets in the street. What started you on this road to crime?"

"You did, mister."

"I did? What do you mean, boy?"

"Well, mister, if you 'adn't given my old dad six months I wouldn't have had to start life so early to keep the home going."

More to the Purpose.

"Register gloom!" bellowed the movie director. "You look as if you were going on a picnic."

"I don't understand your meaning," answered the screen star, haughtily.

"Hang it! Try to look the way people do when they are coming back from a picnic."

A Marvelous Herbal Tonic for Women

Council Bluffs, Iowa.—"When I was going through middle life I became all run-down, was very nervous and suffered with severe pains in my back. A doctor advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did, and it brought me through in a strong, healthy condition. I have always used the 'Pleasant Pellets' and found them to be a splendid regulator of the stomach, liver and bowels."—MRS. MARY MORGAN, 186 16th Ave.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little Liver Pills. These tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules—the smallest and easiest to take. Made up of May apple, the dried juice of the leaves of aloe and the root of jalap. Almost every drug store in this country sells these vegetable pellets as well as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery. If not obtainable send 25 cents to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will mail a package of the Pellets.

Preparedness Unappreciated.

A city-bred child whose knowledge of the wild was very limited was walking through the woods with her governess. They chanced upon a porcupine. At the approach of two individuals whose intentions might be hostile the creature bristled aggressively, its weaponlike quills rising in menace.

"Oh, look!" exclaimed the little girl. "What a fright we have given that funny animal! Its hair is standing on end!"

Might Help.

No Eggs, Milk or Butter

The following recipe shows how an appetizing, wholesome cake can be made without expensive ingredients.

In many other recipes the number of eggs may be reduced one-half or more by using an additional quantity of ROYAL Baking Powder, about a teaspoon, in place of each egg omitted.

EGGLESS, MILKLESS, BUTTERLESS CAKE

1 cup brown sugar	1 teaspoon nutmeg
1½ cups water	1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup seeded raisins	½ teaspoon salt
2 ounces citron	2 cups flour
½ cup shortening	3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

The old method (fruit cake) called for 2 eggs

DIRECTIONS—Put the first eight ingredients into saucepan and boil three minutes. When cool, add the flour and baking powder which have been sifted together; mix well. Bake in moderate oven in loaf pan (round tin with hole in center is best) for 35 or 40 minutes. Ice with white icing.

RAILROAD SITUATION IS NOW LARGELY UP TO CONGRESS

Must Share Responsibility In Future Development.

ROBERT S. LOVETT'S VIEWS

"Unification of Regulation Is Essential." A Complete, Harmonious, Consistent and Related System Needed—Federal Incorporation of Railroads by General Law Favored.

Washington, March 26.—Responsibility for the railway development of the country, for providing necessary transportation facilities to care for the growing business and population of the country, now rests largely with congress and not entirely with the railroad managers. This was the statement of Judge Robert S. Lovett, chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific system, to the Newlands joint congressional committee when that body resumed its inquiry into the subject of railroad regulation this week.

In making this statement of the changed conditions of the railroad situation Judge Lovett undoubtedly had in mind the decision of the supreme court on the Adamson law, handed down last week, which establishes the right of the federal government to fix railroad wages and to prevent strikes. This decision is regarded by railroad men and lawyers as marking an epoch in the development of transportation in the United States.

"We have our share of responsibility," said Judge Lovett, "but it rests primarily on congress. When the government regulates the rates and the financial administration of the railroads, the borrowing of money and the issuance of securities it relieves the railroad officers of the responsibility of providing and developing transportation systems, except within the limits of the revenue that can be realized from such rates and under such restrictions.

"For a country such as ours, for a people situated as we are, to blunder along with a series of unrelated, inconsistent, conflicting statutes enacted by different states without relation to each other, instead of providing a complete and carefully studied and prepared system of regulation for a business that is so vital to the life of the nation, is worse than folly."

First.—The multiplicity of regulations by the several states with respect to the issue of securities, involving delays and conflicting state policies generally dangerous and possibly disastrous.

Second.—The state regulation of rates in such a manner as to unduly reduce revenues, to discriminate in favor of localities and shippers within its own borders as against localities and shippers in other states and to disturb and disarrange the structure of interstate rates.

Third.—The inability of the Interstate Commerce Commission, whoever the commissioners may be, to perform the vast duties devolving upon it under existing laws, resulting in delay—which should never occur in commercial matters—and compelling the commissioners to accept the conclusions of their employees as final in deciding matters of great importance to the commercial and railroad interests of the country

Fourth.—The practical legality that has been accorded conspiracies to tie up and suspend the operation of the railroads of the country by strikes and violence and the absence of any law to compel the settlement of such disputes by arbitration or other judicial means, as all other issues between citizens in civilized states are to be settled.

Sixth.—The cumulative effect of these conditions upon the investing public, to which railroad companies must look for the capital necessary to continue development.

"We believe that the unification of regulation is essential," said Judge Lovett, "and that with the rapid increase of state commissions in recent years congress will in time be compelled to exercise its power in the premises. To unify regulation there should be a complete, harmonious, consistent and related system. We believe the best, if not the only practical plan, is the federal incorporation of railroads by general law, which will make incorporation thereunder compulsory, thus imposing on all railroad companies throughout the United States the same corporate powers and restrictions with respect to their financial operations and the same duties and obligations to the public and the government, so that every investor will know precisely what every railroad corporation may and may not lawfully do."

Judge Lovett contended that the solution of these problems and difficulties rested with congress. He told the committee that under the constitution the authority of the federal government is paramount that congress has the power to legislate for a centralized control of railroads under federal charters and that it only remains for that body to exercise that power

Pioneer Is Called Home

Joachim Schuldt, Sr. one of the pioneer settlers of this community passed away suddenly of old age Monday morning. The deceased was 87 years of age. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon, services being held at the Ell townsflip of which he was one of the founders and interment made in the Ell township cemetery.

Obituary next week.

Raincoats and Riots

An itinerant Isrealite landed in Eagle Grove last Saturday and beheld with expansive smile our fine looking main street, and prosperous gullible appearing citizens. He knew of us by our reputation long before he reached our boarders. He had learned that we bought lots of oil stock, found out that even Henry Insel had framed and hung up in his boudoir, a certificate of ownership of 1000 shares of stock in an Arizona gold mine. He had also learned that we invested liberally in land owned by the state of Minnesota. He further learned that the Middleton Auto Co., paid real money to a stranger for a safe owned by the Eagle Grove Eagle. He was delighted when he was told that Joe Kist traded a phony diamond valued at $7.50 to Elling Weeks for the original Overland car. "Lemons" worth easily 10c per hundred at the Foss junk emporium. Somebody told him Burt Waddell sold real live horses for $35. Then he heard we had bought an electric church sign and said to himself, "Braised pe Abraham, Moses vas a pone-head, the bromised land, it vas not Canaan, it is here. It looks like rain. Dese beople need raincoats. I hab de coats. Raincoats it vill pe."

So he went to our mayor, took out his license and opened up for business on the bank square corner. He was doing pretty well and had attracted a big crowd. Bill Hinkley, up at Packman's corner heard the racket, and as trade was at a standstill and would continue to be so as long as the "wandering jew" was allowed to monopolize the crowd, Bill decided to join the bank square gathering and engage coat Kike in conversation. He did, and in thirty seconds all thoughts of buying or selling raincoats had vanished and the crowd was enjoying a spirited oral clash between the curb stone clothier and the orator from Packman's corner. The vitrolic verbal onslaughts were as violent as they were bloodless. The air in that vicinity became so blue, so charged with static electricity, that the bystanders began to think the stranger was a rain-maker instead of of a raincoat vendor. He became so enraged at some of Mr. Hinkley's remarks about his coats, his race and himself personally, that he so far forgot himself as to throw one of his coats at Mr. Hinkley who promptly gave it to an alleged enemy, remarking that "he would never give a coat like that to a friend." That broke up the meeting. The benighted son of Abraham demanded the return of his coat, packed up his grip and went on his weary way, his abiding faith in the teachings of his ancestors greatly strengthened, and murmuring to himself, that perhaps Moses was right after all and as far as he was concerned, the Promised Land might remain on the other side of the Red Sea.—Eagle Grove Eagle.

CMEAN UP NOTICE

The public is most earnestly requested and advised that all garbage, manure and waste of whatsoever kind shall be removed from yards, vacant lots, streets and alleys, and that constant persistent efforts should be made to keep the town clean.

Dumping refuse, manure or waste of any kind on vacant lots, streets or alleys is not permitted. The town dumping ground is maintained as a place for disposing of waste and for the burial of dead animals.

Attention should be given to this matter and your garbage cleaned up not later than May 1st, 1917.

All persons violating the above rules will be prosecuted.

For This Seasons Make

To Farmers and Patrons of Klemme Creamery:

We have received some inside information regarding this seasons prices for butterfat. A very reliable commission firm of New York City write us that the price of butterfat during the flush or storage season is expected to be 35c or better. You men know what this is going to mean to you in increased profits for the man who milks cows. Men, do not charge old Bossie up with the full price of feeds at the present time, as you all know it was not very much more expensive to raise your crop of 1916 than in former years. The prices you have received for butterfat are in keeping with the times. For instance, we are expecting to pay 46c for the last half of March butterfat. This same firm wishes to contract our full make of butter from the 15th of May to January 1st, 1918 at a stated price based on New York extras day of arrival. We can assure you the very best prices for this seasons make.

We are going to be forced to demand a good quality of cream from one and all. As the big markets are demanding good flavored butter and this is the only kind that we want to manufacture.

She Was Shopping

A lady had been sitting in a furniture shop for nearly two hours inspecting the stock of linoleums, says the Chicago Journal. Roll after roll the prespiring assistant brought out, but still she seemed dissatisfied. From her dress he judged her to be a person of wealth, and thought it likely that she would have a good order to give. When at last he had shown her the last rool, he paused in desperation.

"I'm very sorry, madam," he said apologetically, "but if you could wait I could get some more pieces from the factory. Can you call again?

The prospective customer gathered her belongings together and rose from her chair.

"Yes ,do," she said with a gracious smile, " and ask them to send you some with very small designs, suitable for putting in the bottom of a canary's cage."

That wrapping twines which give thorough satisfaction can be made from paper has been demonstrated by experiments made by the Forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis. Several hundred packages, each containing a medium sized book, were wrapped and fastened with the lightest weight paper twine and were mailed to various points throughout the United States Reports show that practically every package was received in good order, and that in no case was there a fault of the twine. In making twine, the paper is cut into narrow strips, which are then twisted tightly to form a cord. The strength of the twine depends on the character of the paper used in the process of treatment. It is well adapted to a number of purposes, but the foresters say that as yet no satisfactory means have been found for protecting paper twine from the action of water, and it should not be used where it will be exposed to moisture.

A steamer line between Savannah and Rotterham, principally for cotton export, will be established by the Imperial Steamship company, according to a recent announcement by Charlton G Ogburn attorney for the company The line already has a fleet of steamers running to the West Indies, South America and Cuba and recently through interesting, a group of foreign capitalists in the extension of the service, it was decided that the American terminus should be Savannah. The majority of the men interested in the project are Hollanders. The line will be operated independently of the Netherlands Overseas Trust.

Surveys made by the extension department of the state agricultural college show an alarming increase in tenant farming in Kansas since the bumper crops of recent years. The tenants now farm 40 per cent of the farms in the state The cause for the rapid increase is placed on the big crops of recent years The landowners have made enough from their farms to retire, but do not wish to sell their land because of the steadily mounting value of farm land The owners divide up their holdings and lease the tracts to tenants.

IOWA STATE NEWS.

NONPARTISAN JUDICIARY BILL KILLED BY SENATE

Des Moines, Ia. April 14 The Iowa senate late Thursday concurred in the action taken by the house Tuesday in repealing the nonpartisan judiciary law and restoring the party circle to the ballot

Only Governor Harding can now prevent the repeal of the nonpartisan judiciary act from becoming a law He can save the law by invoking his veto power, but it is not considered likely that he will do so

The Salinger supporters and the democrats fought to the last ditch against the repeal of the bill Despite the agreement reached in party caucus Wednesday to vote for the repeal of the law 13 of the senate republicans joined with the 10 democrats in opposing the repeal

The vote on a motion by Helmer to concur in the house amendment was passed by a vote of 26 to 22 Senator Kingland, who voted against the repeal, then changed his vote with the intention of filing a motion to reconsider The vote was first large enough to repeal the law

This effort to gain more time was defeated by the motion by Senator Wilson to reconsider and lay the motion of the table Lieutenant Governor Moore put the motion at once and declared it carried It would now take a two thirds vote to suspend the rules and reconsider the vote

CLAIM EGG DIPPING PROCESS WILL REVOLUTIONIZE STORAGE

Sutherland Ia April 14 J S Hockert of this place has discovered a process which will revolutionize the cold storage business if not eliminate it altogether, he claims After experimenting for a number of years and making more than a thousand trials he has discovered a quick dip process for preserving eggs The eggs after being dipped dry almost instantly, when they are ready to be packed in ordinary egg cases and be placed in a cellar or basement for storage until wanted

The coating on the shell is quite invisible to the naked eye and consequently the eggs preserved by this process have every appearance of being freshly laid The process will not make a bad egg good, but does preserve it in any kind of condition it may be in when dipped it is claimed Such eggs may be placed in a store room with potatoes, cabbage onions etc and will absorb no odors that may exist according to the inventor

Fighting Begins Today on T[illegible] Thirds of British Front of France With Early Gains Reported.

GERMANS ORDERED TO HO[illegible]

New Position Back of Hin[illegible] burg Line, Now Broken, [illegible] Completed, and Work Is Rushed

With the British Armies in Fr[illegible] April 14.—From a staff correspond[illegible] of the Associated Press.—Under [illegible] proved weather conditions there [illegible] fighting along virtually two-thirds [illegible] the British front today In addition [illegible] the gain made in the new attack [illegible] tween Hargicourt and Metz-En-C[illegible] ture, the British are making prog[illegible] further north

Another mile of the Hindenburg [illegible] southeast of Arras has been take[illegible] shown by last night's official comm[illegible] cation, giving a total width of t[illegible] and one-half miles to the tur[illegible] movement at the top of this fa[illegible] position.

New Line Incomplete.

In falling back the Germans are [illegible] ing in the direction of an emerge[illegible] auxiliary line to the rear across [illegible] Hindenburg line, called the Droco[illegible] Queant line. Work on this position [illegible] far from complete and the Germ[illegible] seem to have had no idea of using [illegible] except as a last resort They are [illegible] fighting under orders to delay the B[illegible] ish advance at every possible point[illegible] permit completion of the work of m[illegible] ing the new position defendable

On retiring from the Somme [illegible] month the Germans apparently [illegible] pected to hold all the Hindenburg [illegible] running southeast from Arras in fr[illegible] of Cambrai and through St Quen[illegible] and Laon. The important point at [illegible] northern end of this line was Vi[illegible] ridge. There is no doubt that the G[illegible] mans never expected to be driven [illegible] that ridge by a frontal attack, as [illegible] done by the Canadians on Monday.

Anticipating a northern offensive [illegible] possible out flanking of the Vimy po[illegible] tions, the Drocourt to Queant swit[illegible] running north from the Hindenb[illegible] line, was planned

Teutons Try to Dig In.

"In the meantime the Germans, dri[illegible] en back from their old positions, w[illegible] endeavoring to dig themselves in [illegible] various places, especially in front [illegible] Monchy Le Preux in which pro[illegible] they suffered heavy casualties fr[illegible] artillery and machine gun fire

It is rather difficult to explain t[illegible] exact situation, where the attacks on[illegible] ter on arbitratory German field p[illegible] sitions rather than on towns or v[illegible] lages. But in modern warfare the taki[illegible] of a bit of trench or a strong po[illegible] which is marked only by war maps may be of far greater importance a[illegible] significance than the capture of a w[illegible] known city.

More Than 160 Guns Taken.

"Toward the southern end of t[illegible] British line northwest of St. Quentin [illegible] attack was made today over an e[illegible] tended front and at some places t[illegible] British advanced more than a m[illegible] Various important places, includi[illegible] Gouzeaucourt were captured. In t[illegible] meantime the Canadians, further no[illegible] fought their way through the wood[illegible] cated on the eastern front of Vi[illegible] ridge. The Canadians, by the way, [illegible] loud in their praise of the Scott[illegible] troops that fought south of them [illegible] taking the ridge. The kilted men ev[illegible] where kept pace with the troops of t[illegible] Dominion, giving invaluable assistan[illegible] in winning the great victory. It [illegible] estimated today that the captured [illegible] number more than 160.

Bavarians Peeved at Prussians.

One interesting bit of information [illegible] advance has disclosed is that the G[illegible] mans were planning to shell Arras w[illegible] two of their 42-centimeter "big Ber[illegible] as," which first won fame about Li[illegible] and Antwerp. These guns had reach[illegible] Douai and it was planned to place th[illegible] near Fampoux, which now is in Bri[illegible] hands. According to gunner prisone[illegible] Prussic acid shells were to have b[illegible] used.

A large number of the German p[illegible] oners seem to be glad that they h[illegible] been taken, Bavarians who but rece[illegible] had come into the line that was [illegible] tacked complained rather bitterly t[illegible] they were invariably sent to the w[illegible] part of the front. They said they kn[illegible] something unpleasant was about t[illegible] happen when they relieved the Saxo[illegible] The Bavarians do not impress qu[illegible] tioners as being very fond of the Pr[illegible] sians.

London, April 13.—German positi[illegible] on a wide front have been captured [illegible] the British after severe fighting, [illegible] war office announces.

The front attacked extended from [illegible] point north of Hargicourt to the vill[illegible] of Metz-En-Couture.

It is nine miles from Hargicourt [illegible] Metz-En-Couture. This sector, is [illegible] the new front between Arras and [illegible] Quentin, where the Germans took [illegible] positions after their retirement.

Paris, April 13.—The French made [illegible] attack this morning on the front no[illegible] of St. Quentin. Today's official st[illegible] ment says the Germans resisted [illegible] perately, but the French captured [illegible] eral lines of trenches, taking prisone[illegible] and a considerable number of mach[illegible] guns.

TELLS OF COUNTER THRUST

Berlin, April 13.—"On the north[illegible] wing of the Arras battlefield," says t[illegible] official statement issued today by t[illegible] German army headquarters staff, "p[illegible] liminary successes of strong British a[illegible] tacks against Angres and Givenc[illegible] En-Gohelle were balanced by Ger[illegible] counter thrusts."

BILL GIVES WILSON RAILROAD CONTROL

Adamson Introduces Common Carriers Measure—Failed To Pass at Last Session

Washington, April 14 — Power for the president to order railway officials to operate any part of their rolling stock during the war time as he may see fit, without actually taking over railroads is given in the common carrier regulation bill of last session reintroduced in amended form today by Chairman Adamson of the house commerce commission Provisions to permit the president to control and operate all railroads telegraph and telephone lines, to draft their employes into the military service to use the military in protecting the operation of railway lines and to increase the personnel of the Interstate Commerce commission from seven to 11 members are included as in the previous bill

All property taken over by the president would be returned to the owners at the close of the war Attempts to evade service ordered by the government would be dealt with severely

No special provision other than permitting the president to use the military forces to guard the operation of trains is made against strikes

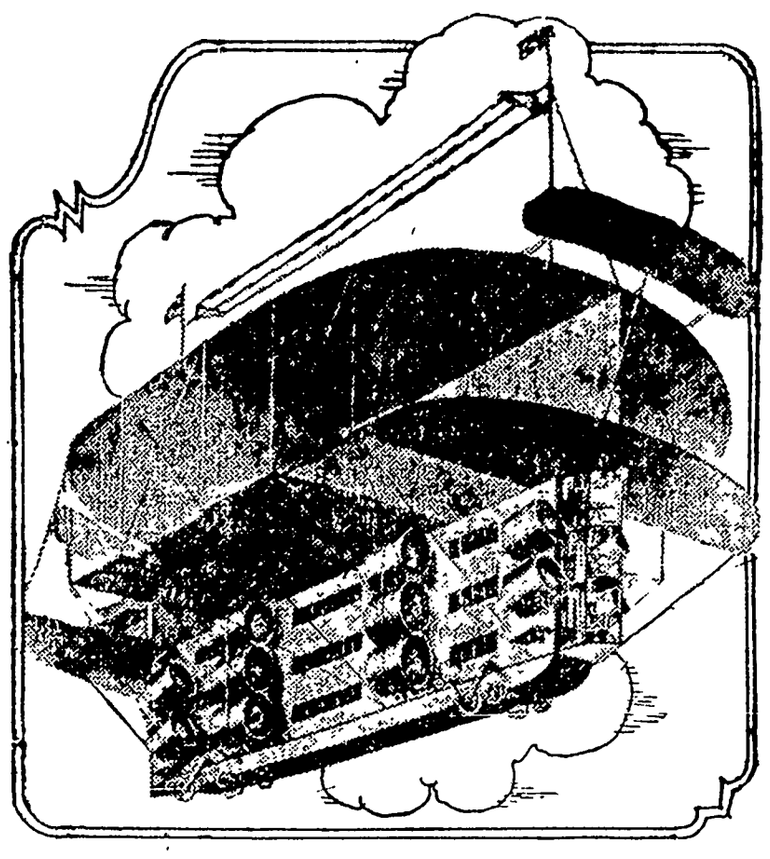
WILL AIRPLANE, CARRYING TWENTY-TWO FIGHTING MEN, REVOLUTIONIZE WARFARE?



Model of airplane designed by Arthur M. Johnson.

The inventor of this airplane, Arthur M. Johnson, of Hazelwood, Pa., believes that it will revolutionize warfare. The tubes on the side of the machine contain propellers which are driven by their own gasoline engines. It would carry a crew of twenty-two men.

Berne Switzerland, April 14 — The military critic of the Basel Nachrichten believes the entrance into the war of the powerful American fleet will "sooner or later lead to a revival of an aggressive sea policy against Germany and will probably culminate in a gigantic battle which will put the Dardanelles fight in the shade"

The writer says that the allied fleets will find behind the German coast defenses an opponent who knows what disastrous results the success of such an Anglo-American undertaking would have for his fatherland

Turn U-Boats on U. S.

This observer further believes that if America attempts to transport troops to Europe Germany will abandon her submarine campaign in the Mediterranean and move the U-boats against the American transports. He is dubious of the present value of America as a military aid and said that the standing army, the only present force fit for modern warfare is needed at home to watch Mexico He calculated however that the United States has 1,000,000 men of military age whom it can equip and train, and that the entente has acquired an ally who may prove the decisive factor in the war

WARNS AGAINST ERROR.

Amsterdam April 14 Captain Persius writing in the Berlin Tageblat, criticizes those who treat America's entry into the war lightly

"It would be a fatal mistake," he says, "to regard America's economic strength as the only important factor for an enemy. The military strength of the United States is not to be met with a shrug of the shoulders, otherwise we shall make the same mistake as we did about the military strength of Britain"

Otto Hoech, a permanent politic writer, reviewing the German-American clash in the Kreuse Zeitung, contends that Germany has a perfect right to make her own international law as far as submarines are concerned and also in regard to neutrals, for whose future interests, he says, Germany is fighting. Herr Hoetsch charges that America was never neutral from the beginning of the year, which he says would have been over long ago if America had not abetted the entente. He continued

Denounces Von Bernstorff.

"Germany, in always trying to avoid a German-American conflict, played into the hands of our opponents. The German embassy in Washington should be blamed for this. It was the weakest spot in the whole diplomatic service. Apart from its glaring mistakes, the embassy lacked an understanding of American psychology, the best proof of this being the failure of the whole German propaganda It is not to the kaiser's lasting merit that he made every effort to hold American friendship. We cannot blame him because America is against us, but we do blame the German-Americans, who must realize that the fatherland is deeply disappointed in them"

WILSON MUST SAVE DRAFT

Washington D C, April 14 — The struggle over conscription is daily becoming hotter The outcome is uncertain Many southern democrats are strongly against it.

The White House today expressed the view that the prospects for the conscription measure were getting better.

Representative Scott said he thought the outcome would depend on the strength of the pressure the president exerted for the bill and that under great pressure it might pass.

TOLL OF THE PLUNGER

New York April 14 — Reports of the torpedoing and sinking of the Danish steamer Daisy and the British schooner Brenwood by German submarines in the Mediterranean were brought here today by survivors of the two vessels, who were passengers on a Spanish steamer Acting under orders, they said, the survivors declined to relate any details of the sinkings.

Rio Janerio, April 13.—The government decided to seize all German ships in Brazilian harbors.

SPAIN ASKS INDEMNITY

London, April 13. — A demand for indemnity for the sinking of the Spanish steamship San Fulgencio has been made on Germany by the Spanish council of ministers, the Madrid correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph cables.

The San Fulgencio was torpedoed without warning, being the first Spanish ship to be sunk by the Germans under these conditions. A London dispatch of Wednesday said the Spanish government had made a strong protest to Germany.

NO OPPOSITION FOR FIRST WAR MEASURE

Leaders Plan to Rush Loan Bill Through and To Senate Today.

Washington, April 14 — Agreement was reached in the House this afternoon to close general debate at 7 o'clock tonight on the war bonds bill and then adjourn until 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Democratic Leader Kitchin said the bill would be taken up tomorrow under the five-minute rule and voted upon by 2 p. m.

Washington, April 13.—The first of the war measures actually came up in congress today, when the House took up for passage the bill to authorize an issue of $5,000,000,000 in bonds and $2,000,000,000 in treasury certificates.

Democratic Leader Kitchin took charge of the measure on the floor and there appeared to be no opposition. There was no attempt to limit debate, but the leaders were desirous of getting the bill passed before adjournment, so it could be hurried over to the Senate.

PRAISE U. S. AT DINNER.

London, April 13.—The Pilgrims of Great Britain gave a dinner in honor of Walter Hines Page, the United States ambassador. Viscount Bryce, president of the Pilgrims, presided.

Among the speakers was ambassador Page, who dealt with the entry of the United States into the war and declared that he was stirred to the depths of his nature by the American companionship in arms with Great Britain and her allies. Viscount Bryce declared that the United States, in quitting the isolation she had cherished since the days of Washington, had taken a step that was full of significance for all time to come.

U. S. TO PATROL COAST FROM PANAMA NORTH

Germany Expected To Extend Sub Blockade To U. S. Shores —Plans For Defense.

Washington, April 14.— New impetus was given plans for naval cooperation between the United States and the entente nations today by conferences between Secretary Daniels and American naval officers and Vice Admiral M. E. Browning, of the British navy, and Rear Admiral R. A. Grasset of the French navy American warships first will undertake the patrol of the entire Atlantic coast from Panama northward, possibly including Canada, releasing the British and French patrol vessels and using naval bases of those nations in the south Atlantic if necessary

Naval officers have expected that Germany would extend submarine activities sporadically to this side of the Atlantic and announce a formal blockade of Boston, New York, the mouth of the Delaware, the mouth of the Chesapeake, Charleston and Savannah The flotilla of motor patrol boats now being assembled and a number of submarine trap nets will be relied upon chiefly for protection of the sea coast and harbors

It is understood British and French ports in Europe will be opened to American ships when the need arises and eventually an American naval station probably will be established on the Irish coast.

PLAN FUND FOR MEN'S FAMILIES

Provision For Those Left Behind Subject of Study By Manufacturers in the United States.

New York, April 14.—Leading manufacturers in the United States are seeking to discover the wisest and most patriotic way of dealing with the problem of industrial pay rolls during war time and making provision for dependent families of men who enlist in any branch of the national service.

A definite effort is to begin, it was learned today, to urge the government to provide subsistance allowances in the United States for dependent families of men who enlist, on a similar basis to that made by the government of Great Britain and Canada, and the creation of a national patriotic fund will be urged, to be handled by the American Red Cross, assisted by the charity organizations, society and local commercial organizations in the matter of necessary investigations.

An emergency fund would have to be raised in this country, it is said Even if only 1,000,000 families should be involved it would mean $20,000,000 a month, or $240,000,000 a year, for "separation allowances" alone Most of this it is calculated, would be an additional tax on American business It is urged everybody should be asked to contribute to this fund

Information obtained from authoritative sources in Great Britain and Canada as to how the problem was handled there shows they are "the most staggering kind of experiences"

The British and Canadian governments have decided, the American manufacturers have been informed, to pay a "subsistence allowance" to each dependent family reporting a figure sufficient for food and rent alone That has been figured out to be $51 68 a month for a family of two adults and three children, paid by the government direct to the dependent family

Then there is the "separation allowance" of $20 a month per family for moderate comforts clothes etc and the "compassionate allowance" made at the discretion of a central agency distributing the fund in exceptional cases

These "separate" and "compassionate" allowances are not paid by the government, but come out of a national patriotic fund raised by voluntary public subscriptions.

TRADE COMMISSION FEARS FOR PAPER DEAL

Men Indicted May Make Good Threat Not To Lower Price, It Is Said.

Washington, April 14 —Indictments of news print manufacturers in New York on charges of antitrust law violations, gave federal trade commission members concern over its possible effect on the plan proposed by the manufacturers under which the trade commission would fix paper prices.

The manufacturers, it is understood, have threatened to withdraw from the price fixing agreement if indictments came from the department of justice investigators. Their proposal was made to the trade commission after the commission had turned over to the justice department evidence it had pointing to violations of the law by the manufacturers in setting high prices under an alleged combination.

DISCUSSES U. S. ACTION.

Stockholm, (via London), April 13.—King Gustave requested Ira Nelson Morris, the American minister, to come to the palace, where he remained for three-quarters of an hour in an informal conversation.

The king's utterances were made in confidence. Mr. Morris, while unable to make known what was said, asserted that the conference was largely devoted to a discussion of important subjects affecting Sweden and the United States, particularly with reference to the entry of the United States into the war.

CONSTANTINE TO PROTEST.

Athens, April 13.—(via London)—The Greek steamer Nestos with wheat for the relief of the suffering Greeks, due to the blockade, has been torpedoed and sunk.

The Germans had been informed officially of the mission of the ship and the Greek government will formally protest The ship and her cargo was valued at 8,500,000 francs. The insurance falls on the Greek government.

The Nestos of 4,052 tons sailed from New York, March 13, for an unnamed destination.

PREPARES TO BAR RAIDS ON U. S. COASTS

President's Order Defining Defensive Sea Areas Also Publishes Regulations For Entry of Ships.

ALL PORTS CLOSED AT NIGHT

Vessels Within One Mile of Restricted Area After Dark Are To Be Fired Upon Without Investigation.

Washington, D. C., April 14 — An executive order designating "defensive sea areas" on coasts of the United States and its insular possessions was made public today Regulations governing the movement of vessels in the sea waters are appended and the order concludes with the statement

"The responsibility to America for any damage inflicted by force of arms with the object of detaining any persons and vessel proceeding in contravention to regulations duly promulgated in accordance with the executive order shall cease from this date (April 5)"

The Closed Territory.

The areas specified are Mouth of the Kennebec river, Portland, Me., Porthsmouth, Boston, New Bedford, Newport, Long Island, east New York, east New York main entrance, Delaware river, Chesapeake entrance Baltimore, Potomac, Hampton Roads, Wilmington, Cape Fear, Savannah, Key West, Tampa, Pensacola, Mobile, Mississippi, Galveston, San Diego, San Francisco, Columbia river, Port Orchard, Honolulu and Manila.

An inner and outer limit is fixed for each area and the secretary of the navy is charged with the duty of publishing and enforcing the regulations. Entrances for inbound or outbound vessels are designated for each port. The lightships or other markers of courses to be followed are given, with compass bearings for the information of the marine reserves

"A vessel desiring to cross a defensive area" the regulations state, "shall proceed to the vicinity of the entrance to the proper channel, flying her national colors together with international code number and pilot's signal, and there await communication with the harbor entrance patrol It is expressly prohibited for any vessel to enter the limits of a defensive sea area otherwise than at a designated entrance and after authorization by the harbor entrance patrol

Employed Craft Designated.

"Boats and other craft employed in the harbor entrance will be distinguished by the union jack, which will be shown from a position forward; they will also fly the usual naval pennant. At night they will show a vertical hoist of three lights, white, red and white, in the order named.

"On receiving permission from the harbor entrance patrol to enter a defensive sea area, a vessel must comply with all instructions as to pilotage and other matters that she may receive from proper authority, either before or during the passage across the area. It is understood that only on condition of such compliance is the said permission granted

Mile Outside at Night.

"No permission will be granted to other than a public vessel of the United States to cross a defensive sea area between sunset and sunrise, nor during the prevalence of weather conditions that render navigation difficult or dangerous. A vessel arriving off a defensive sea area after sunset shall anchor or lie to a distance of at least a mile outside its limits until the following sunrise, vessels discovered near the limits of the areas at night may be fired upon.

"No vessel shall be permitted to proceed within the limits of a defensive sea area at a greater speed than five knots per hour.

"All matters pertaining to fishery and the passage of small crafts within a defensive sea area shall be regulated by the senior officer of the harbor entrance patrol."

The instructions are subject to modification by the senior officer of the harbor entrance patrol when the public interest may require.

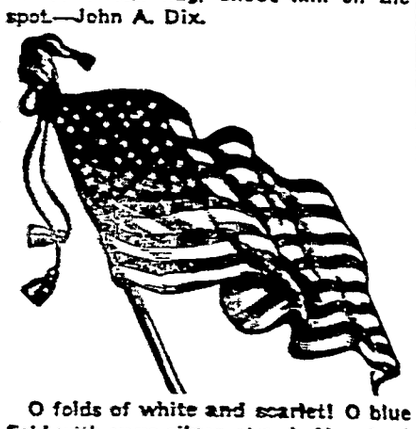
Written by Francis Scott Key, on the night of September 14, 1814, while compelled to watch under the guns of a British ship the bombardment of Fort McHenry. He watched the flag at the fort through the whole day with an anxiety that can be better felt than described until darkness prevented him from seeing it. During the night he watched the bombshells, and at early dawn his eye was again greeted by the proudly waving flag of his country.

This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.—Lincoln.

HERE'S TO OLD GLORY, GOD BLESS HER!

If anyone attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot.—John A. Dix.



O folds of white and scarlet! O blue field with your silver stars! May fond eyes welcome you, willing feet follow you, strong hands defend you, warm hearts cherish you, and dying lips give you their blessing! Ours by inheritance, ours by allegiance, ours by affection—long may you float on the free winds of heaven, the emblem of liberty, the hope of the world!—Anon.

Hero of Ticonderoga

With one impulse the colonies sprung to arms; with one spirit they pledged themselves to each other "to be ready" for the extreme "event"; with one accord and heart the continent cried, "Liberty or Death."—George Bancroft.

The bloody encounter at Lexington in 1775 fired the blood of the patriots and filled them with burning desire to do some heroic deed in defense of the colonies. Word reached Col. Ethan Allen to raise the Green Mountain boys and, if possible surprise and take the fortress of Ticonderoga. Eager for such exploit he rallied 230 of the valiant mountain boys and on the ninth day of May 1775, succeeded in getting a few boats and transported 83 men across the lake and sent the boats back for the rest of the men. But day now began to dawn and Colonel Allen realized that if the attempt against the fort were to succeed he and his daring [illegible]

Nothing daunted by the fact that their force was so few and making up in patriotic devotion what they lacked in [illegible] will [illegible] much as it is a desperate attempt, which none but the brave of men dare undertake," cried Colonel Allen "You that will undertake voluntarily poise your firelock" Every man poised his firelock.

He immediately formed them into line and at their head advanced on the gate of the fortress. The sentry snapped his fuse at the colonel and then retreated to the parade within the garrison. Allen and his men quickly [illegible] on the parade. The garrison was asleep but the sentries who did not fully sense what was transpiring. Allen and his men gave three huzzas, and one of the sentries made a pass at one of the men with a charged bayonet and slightly wounded him.

Allen was about to run him through with his sword but thought better of it and only slightly wounded him on the head whereon he dropped his gun and begged for quarter. This granted he showed Colonel Allen the officers' quarters whither the intrepid commander rushed and compelled the commander, Captain Delaplace, to come forth and deliver over the entire garrison on threat of putting the entire force to the sword.

"By what authority?" demanded Captain Delaplace.

"In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress" thundered Allen, as he raised his sword over Delaplace's head. In the meantime the Green Mountain boys had not been idle but had beaten down the barracks' doors and had about a third of the garrison prisoners. With stuttered expostulation the commander forthwith submitted and the fort was completely in the hands of Colonel Allen, who in his own account of the exploit says:

"The sun seemed to rise that morning with a superior luster, and Ticonderoga and its dependencies smiled on its conquerors."

DYING FOR ONE'S COUNTRY

"Death Never Comes Too Soon, If Necessary In Defense of Our Country."—Story.

It was Nathan Hale who said, "I regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." And it is Horace that makes one of his heroes say: "It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country." There have been many and striking illustrations of this in our country's history. It is said that the untimely fate of Col. Owen Roberts, who fell at Stono, was cause of universal regret. He was an inflexible patriot, an excellent disciplinarian, and enthusiast in pursuit of military fame. His son, who was in the action, hearing of his misfortune, hastened to him. The expiring veteran perceiving in his countenance the liveliest sorrow, addressed him with great composure: "I rejoice, my boy, once again to see and to embrace you. Receive this sword, which has never been tarnished by dishonor, and let it not be inactive while the liberty of our country is endangered. Take my last adieu, accept my blessings, and return to your duty."

THE SWORD OF WASHINGTON

The sword of Washington. The staff of Franklin. Oh, sir, what associations are linked with these names! Washington—whose sword, as my friend has said, was never drawn but in the cause of his country, and never sheathed when wielded in his country's cause. Franklin—the philosopher of the thunderbolt, the printing press, and the plow share.—John Quincy Adams.

Honest Work at Honest Prices

There are two highly important points for a man to consider before having his car overhauled.

The first point is to assure himself that the men who are going to work on his car are mechanics expert enough to locate and properly repair all the parts that need attention.

The second point is to convince himself that he can trust the shop to give him an honest accounting of the amount of work that was actually done on the car.

We gladly welcome an investigation on both of these points. We have the facilities, the workmen and the business methods that will more than satisfy all who investigate.

They refused to drive on when ordered to do so by the guards and challenged the soldiers to combat according to federal officials.

There are many ways in which the boys and girls of the state can do their bit in conserving the food supply of the country according to Director Bliss of Ames. Some of the ways in which he believes they can help are: Furnish all the help needed to double the output of our gardens; spray and take care of orchards, help with the care of livestock and poultry; the boys can furnish the 60,000 hands that will be needed to help on our Iowa farms this summer.

SIMEON SILCHESTER

By JANE OSBORN.

Jane Jenks received and answered many hundred letters a week. But they were all addressed, not to Miss Jane Jenks, but to Prof Simeon Silchester, handwriting expert of the "Hearth Companion." Jane Jenks was the youngest member of the editorial staff of that widely-read periodical. As part of her duties she had to write the monthly article on "What Your Handwriting Shows." Meantime she had to answer letters from West, East, North and South from subscribers to the magazine. Sometimes she dreamed of the day when she might save enough to leave the city and go off somewhere in the wilds and get "a ranch or something and run it."

Once a letter came from a correspondent who signed his name "Montana," and the writing rather puzzled Jane Jenks. But she hesitated only a moment, for really it didn't much matter to her whether or not she made a true character study. The writing was legible, and, therefore, she made the statement that the writer had a methodical, honest nature. There were certain waverings in the line and this, she said, indicated timidity. "I believe that you are not married," she added, with all the authority of Prof. Simeon Silchester to back her. "I believe that the reason why you are not married is because you have never had the deep, inner courage to look about and find for yourself a woman good enough for you. You are cowardly," she went on, "and what you ought to do is to stand up for your own rights. You are small in stature," this because the writing was miniature, "but that does not mean that you should also be timid."

Three weeks later a tall, irate person entered her office.

"I want to see Prof. Simeon Silchester," he said deliberately. "I see you are his secretary," the man continued.

"Perhaps I could take the message," said Jane feebly.

"No woman could take the message just as I want to give it, and few men could. What I want to ask the professor is how in—I'll add the embellishments when I see him personally—how he dared to call me a coward? I wrote to him and this is the answer he sent me." The man from Montana threw the opened letter on the desk and Jane Jenks recognized it as the one she had recently sent.

"I'm very sorry," Jane pleaded, feeling just a little amused in spite of her first terror. "To be sure Professor Silchester sometimes makes mistakes," she began. "I am very sorry." Then for some reason, probably because of the steadfast and searching gaze of the gray eyes of the man, she forgot her role. "You see I am really Prof. Simeon Silchester. I try to make the right guesses. How could I tell that you were a big man, and how did I know that you were a perfect bear of courage?"

"And you wrote that about my not having had the nerve to get married?" asked the big man, and then he laughed for the first time. Well, that's very funny. I've come all the way from my place in Montana, just to have a fight with you. Nothing ever made me so mad in my life as that letter—but I won't fight a lady even when she deserves it."

So relieved was Jane at the way the angry one recovered from the first intensity of his anger that she made him tarry on that first call, and pledged him never to tell another soul that there was no real Simeon Silchester.

They spoke of Montana and ranges and the girl's face lighted up with expectation and interest. She told the stranger of her ambition and he was as interested as she. In short, he won Jane's confidence so that when he suggested that she take luncheon with him she did not think to hesitate.

So the acquaintance progressed within the ten days that the Montanan had allowed himself to remain in the big city and never again did he speak of the letter but always of the ranch and the girl's ambitions to lead a country, outdoor life. The proposal occurred in the girl's office, the afternoon before he was planning to return.

"How can I accept?" she said. "I don't ever know your name. I'm dreadfully frightened just to think of the way we have grown so well acquainted in such a short time."

"True," he said. "I'm a bit frightened myself." Here his expression changed quickly. "How'd you hit on that name of yours—Simeon Silchester? It's a good name, and it doesn't sound faked."

"I think it is good," said the girl. "I wanted to get a name that sounded like what I think a handwriting expert would be—a thin old crank with a white beard and a long nose. I got out the 'Who's Who' and looked through till I found a name that sounded just like that Don't you think it was a good selection?"

"Capital—a thin old crank with a long nose. Do you happen to know the original?"

Jane reached for the "Who's Who" on the top of her desk and found the place. "He seems to be an inventor and a ranch owner, in Montana. Why, that's where you come from."

"Somewhere near," said the man. "In fact I'm the white-bearded long nosed crank. Now you know who I really am. Will you take me?"

And the girl, weary of impersonating the handwriting expert and already in heart surrendered to the man who stood before her, had no will to say, "No."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors, pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK
DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY

CHAPTER XIX.—(Continued).

Cholliewollie paused before he made any comment on that. She fancied that he looked a little worried.

"Surely," she said, "you don't object to that!"

"Oh, no."

He began on his salad.

"Tell me," she persisted, "what are you thinking?"

"Tell me," he countered, "is this meeting a necessity? You know, this is the last day of November There are only 10 days before the big affair."

"I don't know that it is a necessity. I do know that Edith is very anxious for it—and she must have a reason. What possible harm could it do?"

"Probably none," he admitted, the drawl in his words making them sound reluctant; "possibly much I don't believe in his taking any chances. I don't believe in his doing anything from now until then except work on this demonstration."

"Tell me what you mean—and don't, please, talk so much like a Chinese puzzle!"

"He is being so closely watched, so bitterly attacked; that is what I mean. And a clandestine meeting—oh, I know this could not be misconstrued by people in their right senses, but not all are in their right senses now. And politics turns out some incredibly clever liars, Mrs. Kane. I would not, for anything, have it known that he and she had met anywhere but in her own home—just now."

"She thought of that," Mrs. Kane explained, fortifying herself.

"That is why we picked out your apartment as the ideal place. Nobody would ever suspect her of going there. She and I would go together. Later you and he could come in Besides, she says she must see him."

"Perhaps," he agreed after another period of thought, "it can be arranged—safely"

"Why are you worried?" she came back to her question "I thought you considered him impregnable in this thing"

"No man in public life is impregnable against sudden and treacherous attack," he said gravely. "Calumny and slander can work terrific injustice in a few days, and require weeks for retribution"

"Explain it to me."

He pushed aside the salad and lit a cigaret, so absorbed in the subject that he forgot to ask her permission

"In a movement of this sort, Mrs Kane," he said gravely, "which affects everybody in the country more or less, which affects most people tremendously one way or the other, there are bound to be two parties, two sides. As things stand today, Smith has the majority, with him. His cause itself, his picturesqueness, his marvelous ability, and his indomitable will have made that sure. Already the march to Washington has begun. You can look around this cafe and see at some of the tables people who have been brought here by him They are the vanguard of the greatest thing in the history of this country. His name is on everybody's lips."

"Of course," she assented; "on everybody's lips."

"Exactly. But how? Many bless him and praise him and admire him. But there are those who sneer and revile him. You must realize that. Not only the whisky interests fight him, but all the other interests allied with whisky—you can realize what they are—are against him. This formidable array, enlarged by the ranks of the stupid, would like nothing better than to see him fall, to hear of his being discredited. More than that, they would do anything on earth to bring it about. They'd lie, steal, even murder, to put him down and out tomorrow morning. They go, as I have told him, on the theory that, if they can hurt him, they can hurt his cause."

"But do you believe that?"

His answer was very slow.

"Mrs. Kane, there's nobody on earth who can tell how the American public will receive a fact or even a bare assertion of a fact. Here in Washington we learn that —if we learn anything—that nobody can foretell what the public will or will not do to a man for this or for that."

Mrs. Kane's cheery fluffiness was submerged in solemnity.

"You mean," she asked, "if they could discredit him, this demonstration, this parade, all that it means, might fall through?"

"I mean just that," he replied with great earnestness. "I mean it's entirely within the realm of possibility that, if anything were brought out tomorrow—whether it were the truth or a lie, makes no difference—to create the impression that John Smith was an unworthy man, the whole business would crumble up, fall flat, and the crusaders would never crusade. I say it is possible."

"I wouldn't have believed it."

"Nowadays," he elaborated, "the people look once at the platform and twice at the leader. It may be unreasonable, but it is their habit—which we cannot change."

Mrs. Kane went back to her mission.

"But Edith insists that she must see him."

"Verry well," he said. As you suggested, nobody would ever think of their meeting at my apartment. Besides, there will be four of us."

Mrs. Kane laughed

"Your acceptance of the situation, after your gloomy forebodings, amuses me," she explained

He produced another cigaret and regarded her closely

"May I confide in you absolutely? he asked, the drawl going out of his voice

"Absolutely," she assured him, somewhat surprised by his solemnity.

"The thing that keeps me terrified all the time, utterly frightened," he said, "is my belief that they've got something on him now"

"Got something on him now" What do you mean?

"That they know something about this Blessed, mysterious past of his Past which we know nothing, and that they're going to spring it on him"

"When? she inquired in big eyed amazement

"Whenever it suits them whenever they think it's the psychological moment"

"What do you think it is"

"I don't know what it is" he confessed "but I believe they've got something something real Honestly, Mrs Kane, I believe they've got something true I don't want to believe it, but I do."

Cholliewollie looked sad, actually grieved If he had stopped to try, he could have counted up how many years it had been since he had allowed himself to feel sorry for a public man His boredom and blase emotions were failing him. Mrs Kane, watching his face attentively, thought he seemed tired

"Oh, Mr. Waller!" she said, feeling some of his uneasiness

"I wish the 10 days were over—that's all," he replied a little petulantly. "It's enough to cut the heart out of a giant this suspense. Here we are now at a point where we can hear the gathering of this extraordinary army. The reports are coming in every day of the last preparations for the departures from the little towns, for the meetings of the delegations at the central points, for the special trains, the brigades of children, the singing clubs. Why, it's like turning the whole country upside down. That's what it is! Washington is the goal of everybody who can travel! Nobody ever saw anything like it before. The hum of it, the stir of it, the thrill of it is already here, in the hotels, in the streets, in the corridors of the capitol! And all because a man with fire leaping through his veins has sprung to the head of a tremendous movement—has made the movement."

He smiled at her half whimsically.

"And here I am scared half to death! Why he isn't, I can't understand."

Mrs. Kane struck the tablecloth with her chubby fist

"Why won't he tell us?" she demanded in desperation. "Why won't he tell you? Why won't he tell Edith about himself?"

"That's what I don't understand again," he admitted, "why he doesn't tell Miss Mallon."

Mrs. Kane had an inspiration.

"He may tonight!" she exclaimed.

"I wonder," Waller said slowly, "if that is why she wants to see him."

They made their plans for the evening Waller would have Smith there by 7 o'clock, and Nellie and Edith were to come in at 8. The apartment house was a small one on an unimportant street. It seemed simple enough.

For the remainder of the afternoon Waller worried not about the meeting that evening but about the general outlook. He could not shake off his belief that the other side knew something that would hurt the agitator. And, when he considered that, he thought also of the minority of haters which might become overnight a majority

The public" he concluded gloomily "is a fool I ought to know I've been writing for it long enough But if they throw this thing down now, they're crazier even than I thought—which is going some."

CHAPTER TWENTY.

All of it was done so quickly, with such deftness and skill, by Mrs Kane that Edith found herself alone in the room with the man she loved before she quite knew how it had been brought about She had come in with Nellie and had spoken to both the men, and immediately Nellie, explaining that she must see the tapestries Waller kept in his "showroom" and talking glibly and uninterruptedly all the while, had whisked Waller out with her, closing the door behind her

A long, high backed couch was set before the open wood fire, and behind the couch was the table bearing the reading light The glow from the flames was almost as great as that from the lamp. The room, with its medley of colors, its conglomeration of furniture and ornaments from all parts of the world, was in itself a curious expression of isolation, silence withdrawal from other people He felt somehow that never before had he been so entirely alone with her

They were standing facing each other in front of the fire As the door closed behind the others she looked at him and smiled He stood tense and erect as if he tried to comprehend something greater and more portentous than he possibly could have expected

"I'm afraid you're thinking," he hazarded a little uncertainly, "I was very silly to want to see you here or anywhere

He took her hand and led her a step to the couch, arranging the cushions for her comfort as she leaned against them.

"I was marvelling," he answered her gravely, "that the human heart could feel such happiness as mine does now"

She indicated with a wave of her hand the place near her.

"Sit here, beside me," she invited

He sat down, turning so that he might face her and watch the play of the firelight on her hair and features

She was looking into the fire, her beauty softened and made more exquisite by her expression of sweet solemnity.

"Waller told me," he suggested, "that there was something very important"

She did not answer

"Is there?" he asked after a pause.

She turned to him and smiled slowly and brilliantly All of a sudden he was tremendously aware of her charm, her loveliness, the fragrance of her, the mystery lights of her eyes, the sweetness that was hers

"Very important," she replied, the words coming through the smile. "I think, Mr. John Smith, it is merely another case of a woman pursuing a man."

Her eyes, smiling, held his gaze. There was a little catch in her voice

"My Lady Bountiful!" he managed to say

She turned from him and looked into the flames.

"There are only 10 days left," she began with wonderful directness, "and I knew you would—might want to know that the woman you—you love—that her spirit is with you—always."

She fell silent, the reflection of the fire stealing under her lowered lids and making new lights in her eyes

A red rose dropped from her corsage and slid from her knee to the floor. He picked it up swiftly and slipped it into the breast pocket of his coat.

"I wish," he said, his voice breaking, "I could tell you, that I love you—how much I love you, my—My Lady Bountiful."

"And I understand," she murmured. "You cannot."

"No; I cannot."

She looked at him, turning her head with a quick, imperious motion. He saw that there was in her eyes the hint of tears.

"But," she said, "that doesn't make the slightest difference to me. Some day you can."

"Do you feel that?"

"I know it," she answered, her trust absolute.

"I wonder sometimes," he said, "why we do feel so sure of—of the future."

For an instant she laid her left hand, light and tremulous, on his coat sleeve.

"Tell me," she asked, "what your attitude about it is—exactly"

He laughed

"All I can think of now," he protested, "is the wonder of your love for me—your acceptance of me on trust. I did not know. I could not realize, there was such heroism in woman."

"It is not heroism," she denied. "It is merely that I love you—and that you love me. That, also, is why we both know that ultimately happiness must come to us."

"Yes; that is why." He looked at her as religious devotees look at sacred things, from afar, or as lovers of the beautiful at a work of art. "Somehow, I am convinced that the doing of the work before me will bring its reward. That reward is you. I—both of us try to serve others. Surely that is the only real way in which we can serve ourselves."

She started, remembering what Vetter had said—almost the same thing.

"If you will listen, if it will not tire you," he went on, "I shall tell you a story, my own story of my idea of what this life, this service, must mean in the end."

She recognized the growing ardour in him, the enthusiasms coming to the surface, the breaking forth of his peculiar strength under the influence of what she had said to him.

"Ah," she breathed, "do tell me."

She leaned far back in the cushions, sometimes screening her face from the flames with her uplifted hand, now and then flashing to him a look of understanding or appreciation, while he talked, his voice vibrant, low, more musical than she ever had heard it.

The young man who travelled the Happy Highway wore on a finger of his left hand a ring of gold, wonderfully wrought and set with a pale translucent emerald. All his apparel was like that of a king's son And the sunshine, creeping into the ringlets of his hair became wavy, vibrant gold.

The smile of the young man was the most beautiful the other pilgrims on the Happy Highway ever had seen Since nothing in his conscience reproached him, it was unblemished by grief; and, since he had found nothing to fear in all the world, it welcomed everybody who approached him; and, because he had nothing to conceal from the gaze of men, it was radiant with delight.

"He is not only beautiful," said a bent old man, "he is the best-natured young man who ever has trod the Happy Highway!"

"He is so," agreed an old woman in a funny little treble voice "And all of us must keep him happy forever."

Thus it came about that the young man's days and nights were perfect, for all the joyous company heeded the old woman's advice. Care never came near him, and pain could not touch him.

As he strolled along the highway, men and women of all ages brought him wonderful gifts and did him service and pleased him. They arranged it so that the purple plumes of lilacs shaded him always from the noonday sun, and, as he walked, red roses, the reddest roses that bloomed, swayed forward from each side, and, moved by unseen hands, washed the air with their fragrance.

At night somebody—anybody, he chose—fanned him with fans made of the leaves of blue-purple poppies, for sleep. Always, when he slept, he was housed in sumptuous places, and his pillows were so soft that, as he rested his head upon them, they did not disturb the lovely ringlets of his hair.

TOMMIES RUSH TO TELL NEWS TO "FRITZ"

"Get Rid of Your Kaiser," Signs Displayed Above Trenches Say.

With the British Armies in France, Special, (via London, by mail)—The news of the action of the United States Senate in voting for war with Germany reached the far-flung western battle line today and was hailed with cheers. Nowhere is the gratification greater than along the section of the front held by the Canadians, with whom many thousands of Americans are serving. Many Canadian and British companies were busy today preparing signs to hold up over the trenches telling the Germans the tidings from Washington. This is the favorite plan of the Tommies to convey all sorts of bad news to their enemies across the "no man's land."

"Get Rid of Kaiser."

German prisoners taken today had not heard of President Wilson's address and knew only in a vague way of the breaking of diplomatic relations in February. Some of the trench signs which were prepared included a brief translation into German of the president's statement that America was entering the war against the German government and not against the German people. Others included the latest slogan, "No peace with the Hohenzollerns," while others read "Get rid of your kaiser."

The British army as a whole has regarded America as practically in the war ever since the severance of relations, the news of which was greeted as the best news which had reached the trenches for many months. It was said then that active participation was only a matter of time. The president's address was just reaching the front trenches today in its entirety. The gist of the speech had been sent out by wireless and also by telegraph and telephone, but the soldiers generally preferred to wait for congressional action before spreading the news to "Fritz."

On their way back from the front trenches today, the troops who had been relieved eagerly bought two days' old London papers from the French newsboys, in order to read the American news and the text of the president's speech. In the little French cafes and villages behind the lines there was great excitement among the old civilians and the poilus on leave. One old gray headed Frenchman waving a bit of writing paper, said he was sending the good news to his son in the trenches so as to be sure he would not miss it.

The weight of America thrown into the scales at this juncture, which is regarded as the critical time of the struggle has sent a renewed thrill of confidence along the front. One could sense it everywhere today. Visiting Canadian headquarters and the Canadian trenches the correspondent was greeted everywhere with outbursts of congratulations. One young captain, whose mother is American said

Wanted to Hug Every One.

"I feel like hugging everybody in sight. Everywhere I have been today I want them to call out the soldiers and ask them if they had heard the good news. This will mean wonders for the future relationship of Canada and the United States. We feel more like brothers than ever before.

There was much speaking along the front as to the matter of American participation and an almost unanimous wish that the United States be represented on the fighting line at the earliest possible moment if only by a brigade or division. Mingled with the universal desire that the war should soon be ended was the generally expressed hope that it would last long enough to give the Americans a chance at the Germans.

Apart from the purely military view, the soldiers keenly appreciated the moral weight of America's decision.

"We know how delighted we are and cannot help feeling that the news will equally depress the Germans," was the explanation not of one British officer but of scores.

Of course, some of the British officers reiterated the view expressed to the correspondent when diplomatic relations were severed, that American participation might first consist of sending of special detachments, such as aviators.

May Release Americans.

While the Canadians are loath to lose the services of any of the thousands of Americans in their ranks it was stated at headquarters today that it was realized that with an American force in the field many of these splendid soldiers would desire to be released so as to serve under their own flag. Their long training and experience under most desperate battle conditions would prove an invaluable aid, is was conceded, to an American expeditionary corps. Many men may be made available for return to America to help in training. It is also expected that America will ask that a large number of its officers be attached to the British for observation and experience under the actual conditions of European warfare.

Toasts were drank to America at many front line dugouts last night. The British look forward eagerly to the participation of America, thus helping to completely outlaw German militarism. The khaki clad army faces the foe today with renewed determination to bring about a quick and decisive result.

Future of the West Indies.

The possibility that Great Britain and France might reimburse the United States for aid now by the cession after the war of some of their possessions near our shores is said by the New York Sun to be the subject of discussion at Washington. In an editorial consideration of this possibility the Philadelphia Record points out that a union of Canada, New Foundland and the British West Indies is being mooted in London, and that there are good reasons why the United States should prefer itself to acquire the latter islands. The Record says:

"The value of St. Thomas as a key to the Caribbean is as one is to 100 compared with the value of Jamaica, Barbadoes, Trinidad, British Guiana and British Honduras. The Bermudas, within Zeppelin distance of Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore or New York, would become another Helgoland in the hands of an unfriendly power. The Bahama islands, which were a nest for blockade runners during the civil war, would be an ideal base for commerce raiding corsairs and U-boats, as well as an impregnable naval stronghold athwart the New World trade route.

"One other reason for taking thought for the future of the British and French possessions in America is commercial and economic rather than military or political. The trade of the West Indies is conducted mainly with this country. The suggested union with Canada, with the implied preferential tariffs and intercolonial free trade, would disturb existing trade relations, even though these might not be extinguished. A union with this country would probably have equally good results, commercially speaking, as the incorporation of Porto Rico and the trade treaty with Cuba have had upon these former Spanish dependencies."

SERFS WERE FREED BY CZAR ALEXANDER II

Grandfather of Deposed Emperor Was a Liberal, But Nihilists Killed Him.

From the Kansas City Star.

It is a curious fact that one of the greatest reforms that ever came to Russia—the liberation of the serfs in 1861—came through a man educated under the Prussian military system. But in the case of the Czar Alexander II the Prussian virus did not take. Born in 1818, the son of a sternly autocratic father, growing up in an atmosphere in which it was looked upon as treason to criticize the corner policeman, since he was a representative of the government, Alexander persisted in cherishing an interest in all sorts of humble people. He saw how they lived and speculated on how their living conditions might be improved, and altogether turned out to be rather a severe annoyance to his father, Czar Nicholas I. Perhaps the eccentricities of Alexander may be in part accounted for by his tutor, a humanitarian poet named Shukovsky. Shukovsky had done much to make the Russian public acquainted with another side of Germany, which we seldom hear much about nowadays—the German Romanticist movement in thought and literature, in which the desire for liberty passionately expressed itself.

The result was a curious blending of liberalist and and conservative, with enough conservative tendencies in Alexander to exasperate the radicals, and ma[illegible] at 18[illegible] wars was me[illegible] the yem[illegible] lai[illegible] paed of as[illegible] le-[illegible] wn pe in fa[illegible]r. thod rel[illegible]h. wa[illegible] dit fac[illegible] ha[illegible] V cza[illegible] to [illegible] be [illegible] oth[illegible] tha[illegible] of mis[illegible]n, tio[illegible] to of Tn- son[illegible]ed The lan[illegible]s all[illegible]er virt[illegible] bal[illegible]ed on [illegible]rl, of [illegible] own pos[illegible]as ma[illegible]nt[illegible]le [illegible]en

If the serfs were to be free, they must be able to own land. A state loan, payable annually at 6 per cent for 49 years, enabled the former serfs to buy a certain share of the farm lands of Russia and become peasant proprietors. The land was held by the village communities and by them apportioned to their members. The ukase freeing the serfs was published March 3, 1861.

Hope flamed very high in Russia at that time, and men of the more visionary sort looked forward to an immediate Utopia. They were disappointed, of course, and they found that freeing the serfs did not cure all the ills to which Russian flesh was heir. But of their disappointment and their impatience that Alexander did not make Russia into a socialist community, there developed the nihilist movement, whose passion for revolution involved a passion for assassination.

The czar in the meantime was endeavoring to steer a middle course. It is one of the curious contradictions of his character that this man, who carried through the freeing of the serfs almost single handed, should have looked with entire coldness and disfavor upon Poland's aspirations for freedom.

"Embrace the union with Russia," he told the Polish delegates, "and abandon all thoughts of independence, now and forever impossible."

And in 1863 when revolt broke out in Poland it was relentlessly repressed under Alexander II, and thereafter every step was taken to crush the national spirit of Poland, destroy its language and traditions and make of it an integral part of Russia. The doctrine of Pan-Slavism took a strong hold on his imagination and he went to war with Turkey in 1877 feeling himself the chivalric liberator of the Christian peoples of the Balkan country. But his hopes of a confederation of Slav states under Russian rule in the Balkan peninsula were dashed by the congress of Berlin next year.

The last years of Alexander's life were dreary ones. More and more he yielded to depression as he saw his high hopes for Russia fail to materialize. Numerous attempts were made upon his life and, after the explosion in the winter palace in 1880, the czar gave practically dictatorial power for six months to Gen. Loris Melikoff, a distinguished liberal officer. Melikoff advised the granting of a constitution to Russia, and Alexander was on the point of issuing a ukase to that effect—had indeed signed it—when he was slain, March 13, 1881, by a Nihilist bomb. The cause of freedom took a long step backward in Russia with his death.

Rejuvenation.

When the winter's done with snowing, and the vernal winds are blowing, and the husbandman is hoeing, hoeing in the fertile glen, I cast off the robes of sadness, and I whoop around with gladness, with a joy akin to madness, for I'm feeling young again. In the winter I am weeping, for the rheumatiz is creeping up and down my system, keeping me so sore I swear aloud; then I seem an ancient geezer, feel as though I'd lived when Caesar fell beneath the snickersnee of the locoed Brutus crowd. In the winter time I totter, like a sheep that's led to slaughter, wishing death would bring its swatter and remove me from the scene; nothing then my gloom can break up, nothing then my soul can shake up, and I do not even wake up when you talk of gasoline. But when frost's farewell is spoken and the birds have brought the token that old winter's grip is broken, when through woodland, glade and dell, orioles and wrens are winging, and the joyous catbird's singing, and the flowers from earth are springing, then you ought to hear me yell.

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you; according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding skin.

A small bottle of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freezone for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

The goverment is to control absolutely the prices which manufacturers may charge for war munitions That's good. But let's go even farther and have a federal commission to regulate the prices of foodstuffs and jail the price boosters.

One of the practical patriots of the day will be the farmer who strains every nerve in the production of foodstuffs for the army and the civilian population. We can reduce our wardrobe to a shoestring and shirt if necessary, but we cannot subsist on water and wind.

R. F. and P. V. Miner drove to Emmetsburg, Sunday to look over over a herd of pure bred Duroc Jersey swine. They were accompained by D. Parsons, M. M. Magner and Earl Powers of the Jerome Company. The Miners found some gilts to their liking and purchased three from the Harry Fain herd.

Those from out of town who were here to attend the Joachim Schuldt Sr. funeral were his daughters, Mrs Bruer and Mrs Thompson of Minnesota and Miss Ernestine Schuldt who is attending school at Mason City. Also Rev. Chas Schuldt of Reinbeck, Henry Schuldt and Mr. and Mrs. Karl Kraus of Mason City.

Wm. Prull, a former citizen of this neighborhood but who has been living near Dolliver, Iowa, the past three years passed away the first of the week at a hospital in Estherville being a victim of appendicits. A party of young men from the county seat used the main street of our town Wednesday evening for a speedway and were arrainged before His Honor, Mayor Wenck, Thursday morning and given the maximum fine of $25.00 and "trimmings." There was no doubt about the guilt as they say confession is good for the soul. The Mayor is to be commended for his action in the matter and as the auto season is just opening this will likely serve as a warning to others.

Wednesday forenoon, A. C. Lau called us up and informed us to advertise some tame hay which he had for sale, but Wednesday afternoon he did not have any for sale because it had burned down. Mr. Lap set fire to an old stack bottom in the morning and the fire spread from that to the other stack and when noticed had gained so much headway that it could not be saved. The stack contained about ten ton of tame hay and at the present prices means quite a loss.

Ralph Blank arrived here Monday morning from Estherville and Mrs. Blank came down at noon. While they were here the deal was closed whereby Otis G. Day becomes the owner of their property here. This is one of the best locations in town and will make Otis a dandy home. The Blanks have a place now to live in Estherville and Tuesday they loaded their car and shipped to that place While we are sorry to lose families like them, we are glad that Ralph has got a better job and that the family likes it so well there, and we wish them all the success in the world in their new home.

The Jerome Medicine Show at the Idle Hour theater all last week attracted good crowds each evening. They put on a good show but the specialty work of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Powers and Jim Jackman were the favorites. The show pulled many clever ideas, for instance, Thursday evening live chickens were thrown out into the audience and became the property of those who caught them: Friday evening a fine ladies hat was given to the lady who the audience thought it looked the best on, Miss Mabel Waterman won the hat; Saturday evening, a ladies nail driving contest was held and Mrs. Meta Brinkman was the winer and of course as is always the case with such companies there was a popular lady contest in which Miss Melinda Musfelt won the diamond ring. The company went from here to Rockwell where they are this week.

Opened in northern Minnesota the middle of May, under the Volstead act; which you do not have to live on the land nor appear yourself at that date but you can authorize someone to act for you. That is what we are going to do. We have a man on the ground now looking over this land so we can give you the best of service and good land.

There is about 780 homesteads to be had; we will get all we can for our people. The first people who see us will be sure of a homestead; if we can not get you one it will cost you nothing. Write me at once if interested and I will explain it all to you. Our field man will be with me before long. Write today.

Careless.

It is the law of a school in a town near Boston that only children born in that town shall attend. One little girl in this town was born while her parents were at their vacation in the country. This made her ineligible as a pupil of this school. In telling a playmate about it when she was old enough the child said: "You see, I was born while I was on my vacation."—Christian Herald.

Good for "Nerves."

Onions furnish the most substantial cure for nervous prostration and all other nerve disorders. Lettuce has a soothing effect on the nerves. Celery is said to be most excellent for nervous troubles.

Where Finest Opals Are Found.

According to some authorities there is only one locality in the world where the finest kind of opals are found. It is the Dubnyik mine, near Czerwenitza, in Hungary. At any rate, opals have been taken from that mine for many centuries. The ancient writers speak of opals coming from India, but the precious variety is not now found there, whatever may have been the case in the past.

Expecting Too Much.

The girl who expects her friends to be perfect has many a disappointment in store. Human nature is full of surprises, but perfection would be the greatest surprise of all. Do not be astonished when you discover some little flaw in your friend's character. For unless love has blinded her, it is very certain that she has discovered a similar flaw in yourself.

Without Aid.

Dobbins had been very sick and the doctor was called once more to hurry to his bedside. He hurried as fast as he could and arrived out of breath. "Am I in time to be of any assistance?" he panted. "Nope, you're too late, doc," answered one of the lodge watchers. "He has made it by himself."

Casting Iron Pipes.

Casting iron pipe in a permanent mold without cores is effected by a Brazilian iron worker by means of a centrifugal machine. The molten metal is run into the revolving mold from a horizontal trough, and water cooling quickly sets it so that it can be removed. The claims made are rapidity, economy, and a product superior to that ordinarily cast in sand molds.

Real Fortunate.

Willis—Did you ever read the story of the sword of Damocles? Just think of a man sitting through a whole meal with a sword above him suspended by a single hair." Gillis—"Bah! He isn't in it with the woman who can dance serenely all evening with her whole wardrobe depending on a dinky little shoulder strap."

How to Protect Floor.

When your kitchen floor has been varnished or painted, you may use your stove and sink just the same by taking two wide boards and nailing one large size cork on each end and two in the center. When the floor is dry and the boards are taken up, there will only be the places where the corks rested to touch up.

Why Seven Is Thought Lucky.

Seven is generally regarded as a lucky number because it is sacred to Apollo. The story goes that at the birth of this great deity seven sacred swans circled about his godhead.

Why It Pays To Trade With Firms That Advertise
¶ Advertising creates sales. The modern business man knows this; he also knows he must depend upon many sales with a small profit rather than on a few with big profits. The world knows the firm that advertises most can sell cheapest.

Joachim Schuldt

It hath pleased Almighty God in his wise providence to take out of this world, the soul of our deceased citizen, Joachim Schuldt.

Joachim Schuldt was born on the 4th day of April 1830 in Eldena Mek. elnburg-Schuerin, Germany. He spent the years of his youth in Germany and was married there on the 25th of May 1802 to the present Mrs. J. Schuldt who survives him.

In 1873 he came to America with his family and settled in Clayton County, Iowa, where they lived until 1875 when the family moved to this county to live on a farm in German township. In his death the community loses one of its earliest settlers who did his share to build up this locality, and bring to it the prosperity it now enjoys. For several years he has suffered under the weaknesses of old age to which he succombed at about ten o'clock, Monday morning the 16th of April at the age of 87 years and 12 days.

Funeral services were held in the German Reformed church in Ell township of which the deceased has been a faithful member ever since he joined in 1884. A large congregation was present at the services after which interment was made in the Ell Town cemetery.

Of the immediate relatives of Mr. Schuldt there remains his wife and nine children who mourn his death. The relatives and friends all have the sympathy of the entire community.

Mrs. Caroline Stille

Caroline Stille was born the 15 of October, 1840 in Preuszen Muenden, Germany and died in the home of her son J J Stille on Sunday morning, April 22, 1917. She attained the age of 77 years and a few months In her childhood she came with her parents to this country and settled down in Warren County Missouri, where she lived until she had grown to womanhood. In 1859 she was united in marriage to William Stille To this happy union seven children were born, five of which preceded the mother to the Great Beyond.

In the year of 1875, she came with her family to Hancock county, Iowa. After living here a few years her husband died and since then she had made her home with her two living children, J. J. Stille and Mrs. Chas. Bredlow. She was raised in a Christian home and in her early youth she consecrated her life to Jesus Christ and united with the German Methodist church of which she remained a faithful member until her blessed Lord called her home to the church Triumphant. Mother Stille was a good Soul loved by every one who knew her. A kind mother, a loving wife and sympathic towards every one She leaves to mourn her death her only living daughter Mrs. C Bredlow and her son J. J. Stille and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held in the Germantown church, Tuesday, of which she was one of the organizers and a member ever since she came to this state. Her pastor, Rev. A. H. Meyer having charge of the services.

Rasmussen-Harris

A quite wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ables last Saturday afternoon when Mr. Harold Rasmussen of the Wayside vicinity and Miss Elsie Harris of Miller, Iowa, joined hands in holy union.

Mr. Rasmussen is a member of the English M. E. church. A Christian young gentleman who is highly esteemed by all who know him.

Miss Harris taught a successful school at Wayside this winter and is also a Christian and a member of the Baptist church.

We predict a happy voyage for this young couple, and join their many new made friends in wishing them a peaceful journey across the sea of life.

Mr. Rasmussen and wife will be at home to their friends in the north rooms of the Shafer building in the near future.

We welcome them to Klemme.

J. M. Howdeshell.

A Million Back Yards

But if a million back yards were thus tilled, THINK OF THE RESULT Twevle million bushels or more of potatoes or other foods from back yards alone!

And every available foot of ground wherever found, should receive the same attention.

The president and the nation are appealing to you personally. Let us of this community answer it with instant action.

In 1898 the United States freed Cuba from the rule of Spain. Today, when we are at war with Germany, Cuba comes right to the front with an offer of her entire army of 25,000 officers and men, to be employed in any manner this government may desire. There's gratitude for you, and our hat is off.

What would be more attractive in the front yard than a growing bed of lettuce or onions, or potatoes, or beets, or any one of a dozen articles of food? It would be such a symbol of patriotism as the world has never before seen. And the odd moments would do it.

No, Mr. President, our soldiers will not lack for food. Every loyal American will do his or her duty, and that spirit of production will be in daily evidence rigth here in this town and this community. We never follow—We lead.

The prices of new tires are going up. Save the old ones—have them vulcanized. Ell & Fuller.

"There is a great deal of difference in the mental attitude of devil fishes or octopi," says Charles F. Holden, in St. Nicholas. "In a tank in the Avalon aquarium, which contained three or four octopi, all but one were timid. One attacked my hand and one seemed to enjoy being touched. A large California sheepshead in this aquarium became so tame that it liked to be scratched about the head with a wire or stick, and followed people about the tank especially the man who fed it. It was interesting to see it change color as the man stroked it with the wire."

Greenland ranch, in Death valley, holds the record for registered heat, according to an official announcement. On July 10, 1913, the thermometer at this ranch capped the climax in possibilities by climbing to 134 degrees Fahrenheit. No figure approaching it has ever been known, according to Meteorologist Carpenter, of the United States weather bureau. The next highest registration was that of Ouargla, Algeria, which is situated on the edge of the Sahara desert. This station registered 127 degrees on August 27, 1884.

There are seven letters in the names of the states of Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, New York, Wyoming, Montana and Arizona. There are seven letters in the names of these large cities Chicago, New York and St. Louis, and of the well known cities of Jackson, Miss., Atlanta, Ga., Oakland, Cal., Houston, Tex., Buffalo, N. Few American wild animals are more widely known or excite more popular interest than the raccoon, which occupies most of the wooded parts of North America from the southern border of Canada to Panama, with the exception of the higher mountain ranges. Their diet is extraordinarily varied and includes fresh water clams, crawfish, frogs, turtles, birds and their eggs, poultry, nuts, fruits and green corn. When near water they have a curious and unique habit of washing their food before eating it.

Five centuries ago the most Catholic sovereigns, Ferdinand and Isabella, drove the Moor from Spain and in Morocco they sought a new empire. The gradual conquest of North Africa by European powers has driven the true Mohamedan, the religious fanatic southward or westward to the practically unknown interior or to Morocco. Egypt, Tripoli, Tunisia and Algeria have all contributed from their populations to the peopling of Morocco.

There were seven sages of Greece: Solon of Athens, who said "Know thyself"; [illegible] of Sparta, who said "Consider the end"; Thales of Miletus, who said "Who hateth suretyship is sure"; Bias of Priene, who said "Most men are bad"; Cleobulous of Lindus, who said "The golden mean or avoid extremes"; Pittacus of Mitylene, who said, "Seize time by the forelock"; and Periander of Corinth, who said, "Nothing is impossible to industry."

One of the important apartments at the palace of Fontainbleau in France, is called the Galerie des Assiettes, for the reason that its decoration consists of vertical rows of plates set in the paneling of the walls. These plates are very valuable, are made of porcelain, and upon them are painted scenes and views of many royal residences. The plates were placed there by the order of Louis Philippe.

Experiments are being made by the police in Glasgow with a new method for the regulation of street vehicular traffic at night. At two of the most crowded crossings in the central district of the city the constables are provided with helmets to which are attached small electric lamps, controlled by a battery carried in the coat pocket. The lamps show the position of the constable and indicate to which of the lines of traffic the crossing is clear.

Rumania is an important grain producing county. Its average exports of corn from 1911 to 1913 ranked second only to those of the Argentine, while its wheat exports stood sixth among all countries and its oats exports fifth. The country has a somewhat smaller area than the state of Arkansas. Rumania also has rich oil wells operated to a considerable extent by the Standard Oil company.

One of the first sun rooms of which there is any record was in Madrid at the home of Canovas del Castillo, prime minister during the regency. IOWA RAILROADS TO SEEK RATE ADVANCE

New Schedules Soon Will Be Filed With the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Des Moines, Ia., April 21.—The railroads operating in Iowa are planning to make a fight before the Interstate Commerce commission to increase freight rates in this state. Following their fight for this they will make a similar effort to raise the passenger rates in the state from 2 cents per mile to 2.4 cents, the same as in interstate rates.

The information as to the freight rate fight is given in a brief which the railroads have filed with the Interstate Commerce commission in a case involving interstate rates from points east of Iowa to Iowa interior points. In this brief the statement is made.

"The Iowa lines are now engaged in formulating a scale of mileage rates to file with the Interstate Commerce commission in lieu of the present Iowa scale. This scale, when filed, will apply between such river points as Rock Island and Omaha and points in Iowa and between points in Iowa where no other rates are available to apply on interstate traffic."

After reciting the Iowa distance tariff is the lowest scale of rates in the west the argument further declares:

"True, the carriers have filed the Iowa distance tariff with the Interstate Commerce commission to apply on interstate traffic where no other rates are available but it is proper to say that arrangements are now being perfected to withdraw that tariff from the files of the commission."

The railroads are making the argument that it is unfair to charge a shipper from Rock Island in a shipment of goods to some interior Iowa point a higher rate than is charged a shipper from Davenport. They draw the same comparison as regards shipments from Omaha and Council Bluffs. When they bring up their passenger rate cases it is expected a similar argument will be made.

PLAN TO RAISE $60,000 FOR COLLEGE AT LEMARS

LeMars, Ia., April 21.—The Lemars Commercial club, which has lately reorganized and employed a paid secretary, has undertaken the biggest project ever attempted by the community. At a meeting of the board of directors it was decided that the Commercial club would undertake a campaign to raise $60,000 to provide Western Union college with a dormitory. The details [illegible] worked out and will be announced later.

STATE TAX LEVY OF IOWA TO BE RAISED

Increase of 2 2-3 Mills Is Believed Necessary To Meet Large Appropriations.

Des Moines, Ia., April 21.—The state executive council will face the task next July of increasing the tax levy of the state in order to provide for the appropriations and expenditures authorized by the Thirty-seventh general assembly.

The legislature just before adjournment Saturday night passed the state revenue bill authorizing the state executive council to raise $7,000,000 for state purposes in 1917 and $6,000,000 in 1918. This will necessitate at least an increase in the state tax levy of 2 2-3 mills, which will make the total levy [illegible] mills. Or at least the levy will have to be increased about 2.67 mills for the first year of this coming biennial period and 1.67 for the second year.

The state levy now is 4.33 mills and on the present valuation of property in Iowa, including the moneys and credits the revenue produced is $4,242,000 a year. This will have to be brought up to $7,000,000 for the period from July 1, 1917, to June 30, 1918, and $6,000,000 from July 1, 1918, to June 30, 1919.

The war appropriations of course are extra this year and they amount to $1,500,000. The legislature made no provision to take care of the alleged deficit in the state treasury, which was so widely advertised early in the session. When this was called to the attention of the appropriations committee it was explained that whatever of the war appropriation which was not used could be applied to meet this deficit.

Among the appropriations authorized by the assembly for the two year period are the following: Fire proofing old capitol building at Iowa City, $50,900, for special agents under attorney general and governor, $50,000, additional building, soldiers' home, Marshalltown, $65,000, pension survivors northern Iowa brigade, $15,000, state educational institutions, $1,678,700, state institutions under board of control $1,323,830, buildings at state educational institutions, $100,000, increase in support fund of institutions under state board of control, $182,000, support of industrial reformatory for women, $182,000, child welfare research station $50,000, additional appropriation, state historical society, $8,000, land and buildings, Iowa state fair, $12,500, national guard $260,000, state aid to dairy, beef and grain growing associations, $20,000, children's hospital at Iowa City $150,000, armories at Ames and Iowa City $250,000, valuation of railroads by governor $40,000, military census $15,000, district judges increase in salaries not including expenses $64,000, to assist in celebration of 54th anniversary of Vicksburg $40,000, for war purposes $1,000,000.

TERM "HELLO GIRL" BANNED IN POLITE WIRE PARLANCE

LeMars, Ia., April 21.—Classes in telephone instruction covering two days closed here yesterday afternoon. It was one of a score of similar schools being held in Iowa this year by Miss Agnes Barnes under the direction of the extension department of Iowa State college. Miss Barnes, who is well versed in telephone etiquet, said that the term, "hello girl" applied to exchange operatives is not only obsolete but has been canned from telephone parlance.

About 40 operators from both the Sioux City exchanges and smaller exchanges throughout the district attended the classes here. Miss Barnes stated that an incomplete survey shows that the average length of service of operators in Iowa is about seven years.

CHEROKEE COUNTY BOYS IN BIG CORN GROWING CONTEST

Cherokee, Ia., April 21.—Lew McDonald, as leader of the Cherokee County Corn club, is arousing much interest among the boys of the county in the raising of corn. Every boy who can possibly do so is being urged to enter in the contests which is being promoted by a number of the citizens and backed by the agricultural college at Ames. The Iowa Boys' Corn club members have been doing big things, having an enrollment of 2,100 boys last year.

DISCOVER PLOT TO BLOW UP DES MOINES ELECTRIC PLANT

Des Moines, Ia., April 21.—A plot to blow up the plant of the Des Moines Electric company was thwarted late last night by the discovery in one of the machinery sheds of a bomb weighing 40 pounds and believed to contain enough explosive to have wrecked buildings for many blocks around.

The bomb consisted of two iron castings about 10 inches in diameter, riveted together. An electric fuse had been inserted in one end and sealed up with wax. The police are searching for two men who were seen to enter the plant late this afternoon carrying a heavy package.

BALES NAMED SECRETARY OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Des Moines, Ia., April 21.—R. E. Bales, newspaperman, member of the Des Moines civil service commission was elected secretary of the executive council succeeding A. H. Davison by the council.

Bales' appointment has been predicted for some time. He was in charge of the publicity for the republican state central committee in the campaign and has been associated with the administration since Governor Harding took the chair.

His appointment is effective May 1.

BANK BURGLARS ARE CAUGHT IN VAULT, BUT MAKE ESCAPE

NO EARLY EFFORT TO ENFORCE BLUE LAWS

Court Decision on Sunday Baseball Would Be Required, Belief.

Des Moines, Ia., April 19.—Iowa followers of Sunday baseball, moving picture shows and theaters will probably not be deprived of the opportunity to enjoy these amusements on the Sabbath for some few weeks at least.

So far no movement has been started by the attorney general's office to put on the Sunday lid, although the assistant attorney general is making a study of the court decisions on these subjects in view of any contingency which may develop.

However the shutting down of Sunday baseball promises to be a long and difficult task if attempted. There is no Iowa supreme court ruling upon the question of whether Sunday baseball is a violation of the Iowa law or not. Sunday baseball is not specifically mentioned in the law, and decisions in various states are divided as to whether baseball comes under Sunday restrictions where it is not specifically forbidden.

It has already proven very difficult to enforce the Sunday closing laws against moving picture shows. In Mason City it was found almost impossible to get convictions at a trial by jury and finally a practical license system was agreed upon whereby proprietors were technically "arrested," appeared in police court and paid the $5 fine and repeated the proceedings the next Sunday.

TEACHER FORCES YOUTH TO KISS FLAG BEFORE SCHOOL

Gravity, Ia., April 19.—The people of Gravity have subscribed to a fund to purchase a suitable expression of their feeling toward Miss Virginia O'Brien, teacher of the Ladoga school, who compelled one of her boy students to get upon his knees and kiss every stripe in the American flag as pennace for an insult he offered it. The youth insultingly asked the teacher what she intended doing with "that dirty flag," when she brought a flag to the school. The youth's humiliation before the entire school was regarded as a lesson in patriotism which none of them will forget.

SCHOOL OF INSTRUCTION FOR TELEPHONE OPERATORS

LeMars, Ia., Apr. [illegible]—A school of instruction for city and long distance telephone operators is being held here this week by Miss Agnes Barnes of the extension department of Iowa State college, Ames. A miniature telephone exchange for purposes of demonstration has been installed in the commercial club rooms where the school is being held. There are present operators from Sioux City, Sheldon and a number of smaller towns in this section.

AUTO LICENSE MONEY IS TURNED OVER AT CHEROKEE

Cherokee, Ia., April 19.—Cherokee county is richer to the extent of $10,592. Ray Adsit, county treasurer has received the first installment of the county's portion of the auto license collected by the secretary of state. The installment is less than that of last year by about $656, the shortage being due to the fact that many auto owners have not paid their fee for the current year.

LEMARS—The spring apportionment of the state automobile tax amounted to $15,888 and the money has been received by County Auditor I. M. Hayes. The money is to be devoted to improving the roads. This amount is the spring apportionment and the September apportionment is expected to be larger. In 1916 Plymouth county received $31,000 for the whole year.

INDIANS MAY BECOME OWN BOSSES SOON

Commissioner Sells Announces Sweeping Changes, Giving Red Men Control of Land and Share of Funds.

LIBERAL SALE POLICY, PLAN

Graduates of Schools to Be Classed as "Competents," Enjoying Practically All Rights of Whites.

Washington, April 21.—A far reaching step toward the solution of the Indian problem is taken by the government today in the announcement of Commissioner of Indian Affairs Cato Sells that "the time has come for discontinuing guardianship of all competent Indians," and that in consequence of this decision the Indians will be classified and all "competent" Indians will be given patents in the fee to their lands for a home and their pro rata share in all tribal funds will be paid to them individually.

Get Money and Land.

Commissioner Sells proposes first to give patents to all able bodied adult Indians of less than one-half Indian blood with the full and complete control of all their property provided that where deemed advisable patents shall be withheld for not to exceed 40 acres as a home. Indian students who have completed a full course of instruction in the government schools and receive diplomas will be declared competent. Indians will be given unrestricted control of all their individual Indian money upon issuance of patents in fee for certificates of competency. Strict limitations will not be placed upon the use of the funds of the old, the indigent and the invalid. As speedily as possible their pro rata shares in tribal trust or other fund shall be paid to all Indians who have been declared competent, unless the legal status of such [illegible] prevents. Where practicable the pro rata shares of incompetent Indians [illegible] be withdrawn from the treasury and placed in banks to their individual credit.

Liberal in Sale of Lands.

With reference to the sale of lands, the announcement of the commissioner [illegible] It is declared that a [illegible] will be adopted in the [illegible] of passing upon applications for the sale of inherited Indian land where the applicants obtained other lands and the proceeds are to be used to improve the homesteads or for other good purposes. A more liberal [illegible] than has hitherto prevailed will [illegible] be followed with regard to the application of noncompetent Indians for the sale of their land where they are old and feeble and need the proceeds for their support. The rules which are made to apply in the granting [illegible] the sale of land will be made equally applicable in the granting of issuing certificates of competency.

Cuts Off Free Schools.

[illegible] of school privileges is [illegible] in the provisions that [illegible] of wealthy Indians shall no longer be given free education in the government schools when ample facilities for schooling exist at or near their homes. If the parents are able to pay and local schools are available, such children will be enrolled in government Indian schools only on payment of actual per capita cost and transportation.

WARNINGS OF DEFEAT BEGUN BY GERMANS

But Expert Advances Theory to Show Allied Offensives Have Failed.

Amsterdam via London, April 21.—The Frankfurther Zeitung eulogizes Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's new method of careful consolidation of the deeply echeloned position system with the [illegible] defense system and, quoting Karl Von Clausewitz, the German master of theoretical warfare, to the effect that an offensive which comes to a standstill should be regarded as having failed. It considers the first phase of the battle of Arras, the Aisne and Champagne as having been won by the Germans.

At the same time it urges the necessity of firmly holding out, saying that though the battles are not ended, the worst is over, but that there may be changes in the fortunes of war.

WILKERSON ASKS HARDING TO VETO HAVNER'S BILL

Des Moines, Ia., April 21.—It is Havner vs. Wilkerson at the state house today. A body of Montgomery county people accompanied by Detective Wilkerson, appeared before the governor to ask that he veto the bill passed the last day of the legislative session to curb the activities of detectives such as Wilkerson. The measure was drawn at the request of Attorney General Havner, who has taken a strong dislike to Wilkerson. Governor Harding would give the delegation no answer except that he would take several days to consider what his action would be.

NAVAL COLLIER RAMMED.

Washington, April 20.—A naval collier, the name of which was not disclosed by the authorities, was beached in Hampton Roads to prevent her from sinking after being rammed by another vessel.

The collier now lies in water up to the second deck and with a great hole in her hull.

NATIONAL PLANTING DAY.

Washington, April 20.—A call to observe April 21 as "National Planting Day" by the boy scouts of America was sent out today to the 218,000 members under the plan that "every scout feed a soldier."

Washington, April 21.—With [conferences] between the administration, the British and French com[missions] about to begin, it is possible to define clearly the scope and [im]portant features of the conference. [It] is hardly possible to exaggerate [its] importance and it is a foregone conclusion they will effect [illegible] such a consolidation of purposes and plans [as to] make Germany's defeat a practical certainty. These will be the chief features of the conference.

President Wilson relying on [the] backing of congress and the [illegible] will assure the envoys that the United States will stay in the war to the [finish].

The envoys will be advised that the United States is going to send [men] to Europe, to send them in large numbers, and what is more and what [hith]erto has been little spoken of, to [send] them to the east front as well as [the] west front. In other words, direct military aid will be given Russia.

Allied Officers for Army.

This government will be advised [that] if it is agreeable to American offi[cials] some of the most skilled foreign officers available, who have been veterans in action, will be sent [illegible] not to command troops, but to [illegible] with reference to the training of the new army with a view to meeting the demands of the peculiar conditions of the European war, especially trench [warfare].

The president will [appeal] to republican Russia to stay [in the] war to [the] finish, will give [illegible] financial [aid], military aid and will [if a]greeable, [send] a commission there to [illegible] such co[operation] and aid as is feasible.

Plans for the distribution of [the] American loan to the allies will [be] worked out.

If the foreign commissions have [any] question as to the purpose of this [gov]ernment to get into the war in earnest, doubts will be dispelled.

Troops Abroad Early

In the conferences no doubt some assurances will be given as to when [the] first troops will be sent and it is [pos]sible American forces will go abroad before they are completely trained, [to] get the finishing touches of their [train]ing "in sound of the guns."

This, however, is a detail. The [chief] fact in a military way is that the United States will be able to assure the [allies] that within a few months it will [have] an army of 1,000,000 men under training and not long after that still [more], thus affording an inexhaustible re[serve] of man power for the gigantic task of defeating the common enemy of democratic government and free institutions, the government of Prussianized Germany.

RATE INCREASE GRANTE[D] AS HEARING IS BE[GUN]

Washington, April 21.—All rail[roads] were granted tentative permission [by] the Interstate Commerce commission [to] file supplemental tariffs, increasing freight rates generally 15 per cent, effective June 1, next.

The commission's order is subject to recall or change prior to the effective date of the rates. In this way the commission brings the issue squarely before the railroads and the shippers in a definite form. Hearings were begun today at which each side w[as] given an opportunity to state its v[iews].

NEW ADVANCE PROMISED

French Headquarters in France Wednesday Night April 18 (Delayed from a staff correspondent of the Associated Press—Delayed)—Some of the most terrific and bloodiest fighting in the course of the war enabled the French to increase their bag of prisoners to more than 17,000 on the third day of the battle, while the total of the field and heavy cannon which they captured reached nearly 90, not counting many others buried in the mud Along nearly every point of the long line stretching from St Quentin far to the eastward of Reims the French pushed forward and occupied positions from which a further advance was promised

The Associated Press correspondent watched the progress of one part of the battle in the last exhibition of fighting to the eastward of Reims, where the French advanced beyond a hill known as the "Mount Without a Name"

The fighting here was of a most trying nature as the French lines for more than two years have been on the edge of a plain commanded by a range of low, wooded hills on which the Germans were firmly established The French since Monday have advanced across the intervening space and driven the enemy from some of the opposite slopes.

Many small parties held out after the main French lines had advanced not knowing that the whole German line had been driven back These little islets of men were left to be dealt with by the reserves, who rounded them up at leisure. One Zouave captain with only two men captured a group of 60 Germans thus stranded

Turn Guns On Germans.

The artillery fire from both the lines was terrific. The Germans had brought up many guns, which they were unable to get away again before the French infantry in a superb dash surrounded and captured them. An entire battery of 6-inch guns was caught in this way, and later the weapons were used against the retreating Germans, who had abandoned thousands of shells for each piece.

At divisional headquarters the Associated Press correspondent was informed of the fall of Vailly and Ville Au Bois, both positions of the greatest importance to the Germans.

Beauty Who Sent Two Men to Death, Third to Prison for Life, Dies in Paupers' Home

Denver, Colo., April 21.—Mrs. John W Springer, divorced wife of the Denver banker and capitalist, once a society leader and called the "most beautiful woman in the country," died last night in a paupers' hospital on Blackwell's island, New York City, alone save for one friend who had remained true to her according to advices received here Because of Mrs. Springer two men are dead and one is serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary at Canon City, Colo.

Mrs Springer had been married two years when, in 1911, Sylvester von Puhl and George E. Copeland were killed by Harold F Henwood, in a local hotel in a discussion of Mrs. Springer.

Following this Mr. Springer sued for divorce and Mrs. Springer was granted $5,000 and went to New York.

Little was heard of Mrs. Springer until recently Then she began posing occasionally for motion picture concerns in the east. Her funds were exhausted, and when she became ill a short time ago, she was forced to go to the hospital on Blackwell's island.

WHEAT MARKET PLAY NETS ALLIES $3,500,000

Chicago April 21—The allied governments, dealing through Chicago brokers, are credited today with having made a profit of more than $3,500,000 in the last two months in turns on the grain market by changing from one option to the other

This profit it is said was made by selling July wheat and buying the September option at a price approximating 30c below the July option

They bought for future delivery with the desire to obtain actual wheat Car shortages embargoes and the inadequacy of ocean shipping prevented deliveries at specified times and the contracts were sold out at profits running well into the millions.

At the opening of the market today July wheat shot up 7c to $2.11 and September 13¾c to $1.89

SIXTH WAR LOAN RAISED: VICTORY BELIEVED CERTAIN

Amsterdam April 21 [illegible] newspapers express the opinion that the record figure of the sixth German war loan will prove to be the final test of the attempt to arouse German war field strength in a fifth loan and that this coupled with the American food shortage and the German submarine exploits must bring a speedy victory

The Vossische Zeitung attributes the success of the loan to the fires that flamed up in German breasts at President Wilson's repulsive treatment of us

The Deutsche Tages Zeitung says that "this U-boat loan showed that even a world power like the United States is unable to shake the confidence of the German people," and that it is made plain that Germany wants "no business peace no renunciatory peace, but victory full and complete."

NORWEGIANS KILLED AS THEY QUIT SHIP

London, April 21—A Reuter's dispatch from Christiania says that an inquiry into the sinking of the Norwegian steamer The Star, has revealed that the attacking submarine fired on the life boats as they were being lowered killing four sailors. Afterward the Germans looted the steamer.

MORE GUN FIRE HEARD OFF U. S. ATLANTIC COAST

New Bedford, Mass., April 21—Gun firing was heard off the coast late Thursday by residents of Smith's Neck, South Dartmouth. No explanation of the firing was available here.

GERMAN UPRISING RUMORED.

Buenos Ayres, April 20.—Dispatches from Montevideo are published in the Buenos Ayres papers, giving rumors from the Brazilian-Uruguayan frontier that the Germans in south Brazil have revolted that they are provided with arms and ammunition and tried to blow up bridges.

It is believed here the rumors are exaggerated.

"RISING SUN" SHOCKS N. Y. MORALITY AGENT WHO BUYS PHOTOGRAPHS

New York, April 20.—The morals of the Panama-Pacific exposition are on trial here. GERMAN STAYS IN; AUSTRIAN QUITS

Charles Promises to Aid Teutons and Call Parliament Soon—Peace Talk Grows.

Amsterdam, April 21.—The Neu Freie Presse, of Vienna, says that General Bobrzynski, minister of war, will retire from office. Dr. Urban, Austrian minister of communications, and Dr. Baernreither, minister without portfolio, member of the German party, whose impending resignation was reported, will remain in office.

Amsterdam, April 21—A semi-official dispatch from Vienna says that Emperor Charles has granted an audience to leaders of the German party in Austria, in the presence of Premier Clan-Martinic.

Herr Weisskerchner, upper burgomaster of Vienna, declared:

"The people of Austria hope that the heavy sacrifices of this unparalleled struggle which was forced upon us, will be recompensed by an honorable peace, which we will most thankfully accept from your majesty's hand, with the promise that the German people will cooperate loyally and steadfastly in works of peace to the glory and greatness of Austria."

Emperor Charles replied:

"I assure you that I fully appreciate the seriousness and actuality of your political efforts. Germans in Austria may be assured that they possess my confidence.

"It is my intention to summon parliament shortly. I expect all parties will collaborate in harmony.

STILL HOPE FOR PEACE.

London, April 21.—The Austrian political crisis has its origin, it is said, in the desire of the Austrian government to solve political questions, such as that of languages in Bohemia, along parliamentary lines instead of by autocratic measures, so as not to run counter to democratic feelings, especially in Russia, hopes for peace negotiations with which nation are prevalent

ELKUS HAS TYPHUS FEVER, BERLIN SAYS

German Doctor Aids in Treating Ambassador to Turkey —Condition Serious.

The Hague Friday April 20 (via London April 21)—United States Ambassador Elkus is seriously ill at Constantinople with spotted typhoid fever, according to a dispatch from Berlin. The Vossische Zeitung says that a German specialist is assisting the embassy physician.

ATTACK OF TYPHUS.

Washington, D. C., April 21.—Ambassador Elkus at Constantinople is suffering from a light attack of typhus and every attention is being given him, according to dispatches.

Minister Morris at Stockholm telegraphed that the Swedish minister at Constantinople reported that Ambassador Elkus had "spotted typhus."

NEW STATE HOUSE PLAN IS KILLED BY SENATE

Lincoln, Neb., April 21.—The senate practically killed the new capitol bill accepted by the house by rejecting the conference committee report by 19 to 12. The "wet" senators lined up almost solidly against the bill. A compromise was later proposed to submit the question to a referendum. The senate is still grinding away in committee of the whole and adjournment is unlikely until next week. For the sixth time the house killed a bill ordering state school lands sold.

WEST POINT CLASS OF '17 GRADUATES TODAY

West Point, N. Y., April 21.—One hundred thirty-nine cadets graduated from the United States military academy today to take their places as lieutenants in the new army being formed to fight Germany. They are the members of the class of 1917, which expected to be graduated in June next with all the pleasant features incident to a West Point "June week" ceremony. Instead the men marched to their auditorium under the stern influence of discipline and the grim, business like, war game atmosphere which pervades the school since hostilities with the Germans broke out.

NAVY RECRUITING GROWS.

Washington, D. C., April 20.—Navy recruiting yesterday showed a net gain of 1,332 men, or an average daily gain for the week ending yesterday of 1,324. With this addition the total combined strength was brought to 75,357. Secretary Daniels said there was no doubt that the full authorized number of 87,000 would be reached before May 1.

DIVERT CITY FUNDS.

Des Moines, Ia., April 20—The city council today started to expend $4,500 set aside for street flushers for the purchase of food and fuel to meet the shortage.

DUMA FAILS; RUSS BREACH GROWS ACUTE

Council of Workmen and Soldiers Tells People to Disregard Instructions of Government, Now Powerless.

Petrograd, April 20, (via London, April 21)—General Gurko, commander of the western front, has issued a proclamation to the soldiers, declaring that the election, arrest and dismissal of officers of various ranks by soldiers' councils is an undesirable practice and threatens serious consequences. General Gurko declares that the right to appoint officers is accorded only to soldiers in Petrograd and Moscow, who are directly responsible for the revolution, and that even the council of soldiers and deputies admits this principle.

URGE AGAINST PEACE.

New York, April 21—A committee of leading American and Russian socialists telegraphed to A. F Kerensky, minister of justice at Petrograd, today urging the council of workingmen's and soldiers' delegates to use every effort to prevent a separate peace between Russia and Germany, which they say would result in the increase of the world's militarism and delay social revolution. Among those who signed the document were J. G. Phelps Stokes, Charles Edward Russell, William English Walling and Earnest Poole.

CHAOS IN RUSSIA.

Petrograd, April 19, (delayed).—With conflict existing between the government and council of workmen's and soldiers' deputies, one cannot speak of a sole strong power in Russia, because a power which is menaced is not a power, but a semblance of power, says the Russkia Volia, a statement which is considered a conservative estimate of existing internal conditions.

Optimistic assurances that the danger from the breach between the two governments is only trivial are transitory and extravagant. Statements to the effect that the country is facing complete disaster are equally misleading. It is not an exaggeration to say that economic disturbance caused by the revolution has raised a problem, the solution of which is not yet in sight.

As at present constituted the government is without means to enforce any of its mandates except by appeals to the patriotism of the people Without any strong central authority the masses realize that power is in their own hands.

The existing breach dates from the triumph of the revolution when the council of workmen's and soldiers' deputies issued instructions to the people to disregard the orders of the government where these conflicted with those of the council.

Demands Russ Offensive.

Petrograd, April 20.—The Zemli Volia, the organ of the revolutionary socialists, declares that the prosecution of the war is necessary since Germany persists in her plans of conquest. The paper says.

"A peace formula without annexations implies of necessity the restoration of the devastated countries of Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Rumania, and also the application to the people of a plebiscite to decide the fate of the people in cases where there is dispute. Germany still continues to seek conquests and to penetrate further into Russian territory It is therefore necessary to accept the Calvary of war to the end.

"But the defense of the country and abstention on our part from attempts at annexations in no way means that the soldiers are to remain in the trenches without attacking An offensive is necessary to secure a successful end to the war."

FOOD RIOTERS SEIZE POTATOES IN SWEDEN

Copenhagen, April 21—The Dagen-Nyheter describes a great food demonstration at Kalmar, Sweden. At noon Wednesday 1,000 men gathered in the market place and appointed a delegation to demand an increase in food rations. The demonstrators then paraded through the streets. Many shops were stormed and scuffles occurred, the police being powerless to control the crowds.

A large consignment of potatoes on the way to Gothenburg was discovered and at the insistence of the mob was taken over by the food commission.

CARRANZA PAPER CONTINUES U. S. ATTACKS

El Paso, Tex., April 21—Anti-American attacks continue in El Heraldo Del Norte, of Chihuahua City, one of the most important constitutionalist party organs in northern Mexico. Its latest issue declares the Cuban revolution had been put down, "thanks to Yankee bayonets." Strong sympathy is expressed for the Cuban rebels. The writer adds:

"At last fate willed that relations should be severed between the United States and Germany, and I believe to that, rather than to our diplomacy, we owe the retirement of the American forces from Casas Grandes, El Valle and other points."

URGES AGAINST HYSTERIA.

Washington, D. C., April 20.—Warning to the nation against a real danger in hysterical and ill advised economy and interference with normal pursuits of the people is given by Howard E. Coffin, of the council of national defense.

Just returned from a trip through several middle western states, Mr. Coffin deplored the fact that conditions of unemployment and closed factories should arise as a result of indiscriminate efforts, public and private, toward wartime economies.

SENTRIES FIRE ON SNIPERS.

El Paso, Tex., April 20.—Snipers, who fired at an American sentry stationed at the viaduct, in the suburbs of this city, were fired upon in return by a squad of United States soldiers. One Mexican was seen to fall after a volley had been fired across the border.

HOTEL MEN SAVE EYES.

Columbus, Ohio, April 20.—After a conference with Governor Cox, Columbus hotel proprietors announced today that in the future they will save the eyes of the potatoes they use for distribution to back yard gardeners as seed

ASKS POWER TO FIX PRICE ON ALL FOODS

Houston Also Wants Greatly Enlarged Authority for the Department of Agriculture, He Tells Senate.

SPECULATORS HOARD FOOD

Campaign Begun to Prevent Others From Laying in Supply by an Appeal to Patriotism.

Chicago, April 21.—With food prices mounting daily on the grounds of scarcity, investigators in Chicago have learned that storage houses of this city were stocked to the roofs with stores of hitherto unapproached magnitude.

Not only are the private warehouses of the dealers and jobbers fairly bursting with food, but the public warehouses as well, while thousands of tons are in cars on sidings.

The bulk of the stored products consist of sugar, rice, canned goods, coffee and other nonperishables. Ownership of these goods is not confined to regular dealers and the brokers, but in many instances by men in other lines who have "taken a flyer" in food.

Washington, April 21.—Secretary Houston today recommended to the Senate that the council of national defense be empowered to fix minimum and maximum food prices.

To meet the food situation, Secretary Houston told the Senate, the department of agriculture needs the following power

To make a complete survey of the food supply of the nation to determine its location, ownership, control and distribution.

"In cooperation with the interests involved, to establish minimum grades of farm products, including seeds and standards for receptacles

"To license and supervise the operation of all plants, mills, packing houses, canneries, slaughter houses, breweries, distilleries, storage houses or other establishments or factories in which food or feed implements and any other articles required for agricultural purposes are prepared, manufactured or kept for sale or distribution.

"To require the preference of movement by the common carriers of seeds, fertilizers, farm implements or the materials required in their manufacture.

"To enlarge the existing telegraphic market news service of the department to assist in the distribution of products to the proportionate requirements of the consuming centers.

"In case of extreme emergency, the government should have power to purchase, store, and dispose of food products and to fix maximum or minimum prices.

"It is estimated that approximately $25,000,000 will be required to carry out the plans outlined herein In order that proper steps may be taken to put them into effect it is urged that immediate action be taken to give the department the requisite authority and to make available the necessary funds."

Must Increase Crops.

Secretary Houston informed the Senate that the increase of food production this year must come through increased efficiency on the farms and ranges already in operation and that the chief problem is obtaining an ample supply of labor.

"Increased production of the staple crops," he added "is especially important. There is yet time to increase the acreage, not only of corn, oats, barley, rye and sorghum, but also of spring wheat, in certain areas, as well as to extend the acreage of peas, beans, cowpeas and soy beans. The live stock and poultry resources of the country are to be carefully considered and encouragement given to them. The market activity in home gardening will result in a considerable additional production of perishable crops for local use."

Chicago, April 21.—"Stop hoarding food."

This was the cry that swept Chicago today as two new restraints were thrown against the steadily growing wave of household buying.

First—An investigation of reports that speculators were cramming warehouses in an effort to corner the market in certain foodstuffs was begun by city officials.

Appeal to Patriotism.

Second—Through its president, Mrs. T. Vernette Morse, the Home Makers' guild instituted a nation wide movement to check hoarding of foods through appeals to the patriotism of women.

Despite the restraints thrown about food hoarding by the quantity limitations established by grocers, buying by householders who feared further advances, reached a degree of intensity which led grocers in many sections of the city to institute what amounted to the virtual disruption of the retail grocery trade routine.

Deliveries in many instances were stopped entirely or limited to certain products. Quantity restrictions were expanded until they covered almost every staple. In many instances telephone orders were refused.

HALF KANSAS WHEAT GONE.

Topeka, Kan., April 20.—Fifty-five per cent of the 1917 wheat crop in Kansas has been abandoned, leaving the smallest acreage since 1897, according to the official crop report issued today.

Prospects for a crop from the remaining 45 per cent of the last fall sowing is shown as 80.13 per cent, which would indicate a probable crop of 48,000,000 bushels—nearly 51,000,000 bushels less than last year, Increased acreage for corn and oats is shown.

TREASURY CREDIT NOTES IN 60 DAYS

Washington, April 21.—Treasury certificates of indebtedness, authorized up to $2,000,000,000 in the $7,000,000,000 war finance measure now before congress, will be issued, Secretary McAdoo announced today, "as may be necessary to meet the requirements of the treasury" as soon as the bill becomes a law.

The bonds authorized by the bill probably will not be offered before 60 days.

America, America, where is your manhood gone?
Who taught your sons to brag and run, who taught your sons to fawn?
Who taught your sons to whine of peace with quaking coward knees,
And fling in panic to the wolves your hard-won liberties?

America, America, where is your glory fled?
What of the dreams, what of the deeds, what of the noble dead?
What of the swords that flashed for you, what of the tongues that spoke?
What of the hearts that bled for you, what of the hearts that broke?

America, America, remember now your dead!
They cry to you across the night and will not be gainsaid!
Arm, arm, arise, America! Gird on your sword once more!
The foe is at the harbor-mouth, the foe is on your shore!

Awake, arise, America! What cries are in the air?
Hark, the clear word of Washington! The call of Lincoln there!
Cleveland, and there, John Hancock! There, Adams, Webster, Clay!
There, Patrick Henry! There, John Brown! There, Jackson, Lee, John Hay!

Arise, America! Your dead cry out to you, Arise!
Grant, Schuyler, Marshall, Marion! The brave call and the wise!
Paul Jones, Decatur, Perry! McDonough of Champlain!
Arise, America, and stand! A race of men again!

You were not meant to cringe, you were not made to quail!
You were not set a lamp for men, to flare and gutter and fail!
By God, we did not give our blood to set your light on high
Only to see a craven band slothfully let it die!

No, by the God we honor! To Whom alone we bow!
We did not die for Freedom then, to let her perish now!
Arm, arm, arise, America! Put by the craven dread!
We come, we come to the colors! We come, the invincible dead!

Arm, arm, arise! For your dead cannot sleep in the old, green graves!
Liberty cries, imperiled! And we dead rise up from the waves!
Muster the strength of the living! Ten to one are we!
Ten ghosts behind each valiant boy who strikes for Liberty!

Arm, arm, arise, America! Heart of my land, be flame!
An end of words and barter! An end of sloth and shame!
Hark, how the old heroic ghosts to deathless deeds invite!
If you are cowards, perish! But if you are men, then fight!

Not Afraid to Die

It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country.—Horace.

It is related that a private in the army of the Potomac was sentenced to be shot for sleeping at his post of duty. In some way word of the approaching execution came to the attention of President Lincoln, and after writing out a reprieve he called his carriage and started out to see that the reprieve did not fall to reach the poor condemned soldier. It was a broiling hot day and the ride to camp was a long one of ten miles, but the great-hearted Lincoln was bent on saving the poor soldier and he went forward. Perhaps the president later forgot the incident amid weightier cares of state, but not so the soldier. When the Third Vermont charged upon the rifle pits before Yorktown the following year the enemy poured a volley upon them. The first man to fall was William Scott of Company K, with six bullets through his body. His comrades caught him as he fell and his life blood ebbed away, he raised to heaven amid the din of battle, the cries of the dying and the shouts of the enemy, a prayer for the president, and as he died he remarked to his comrades that Lincoln had showed he was no coward and was not afraid to die. At the burial later the chaplain narrated the circumstances to the boys who stood about with uncovered heads. He had prayed for the president and paid him a most fervid and glowing tribute with his dying breath.

A rather unique Farmers' Cooperative company was organized by the farmers around Ackley. The company will be capitalized for $20,000 as a beginning and the larger part of the $50 shares have already been subscribed for, though no stockholder can own over ten shares.

Col. Carl Reichmann, U. S. A., who has been detailed to conduct an inspection of the Second Iowa infantry is probably one of the most interesting men in the regular army. As his name indicates he is a German. More than this, he served three years in the Prussian army.

The little town of Ira is on the front row in the matter of recruits in proportion to the population. With only about a hundred inhabitants, the town has sent five young men to the army. Three of the boys were brothers, and all passed the examinations and were accepted into the infantry branch.

Although the month of April usually marks the opening of the declining season for coal prices, dealers predict an advance in the price of all grades during the summer months. No prices for summer deliveries will be made by coal dealers for fear of a general rise in prices.

Iowa employers have been cautioned by the United States secret service department to make sure of the loyalty of their employes. The employers have been warned that a single disloyal employe may wreck the institution, destroying quantities of valuable food and throwing laborers out of employment.

The townspeople of Anita united in putting on a gigantic reception for the town hero, Earl Caddock, the new heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. There was a big street parade, a banquet at which a thousand guests were served and the day ended with a dance. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gotch of Humboldt were out of town guests.

Seven Cedar Rapids boys, the youngest 14 and the oldest not yet having attained his majority, were arrested for having torn the stars and stripes from two residences while they were carousing about the streets in a drunken joy ride. If the six boys who are of a sufficient age enlist in the national guard, the army, or the navy, the charges against them will be dropped.

Nick Krooes, who was arrested by the police in Des Moines on the grounds that he might be an Austrian spy has been granted his liberty. It was found upon investigation that a bottle found in his possession and thought to contain nitroglycerine, was nothing more deadly than "Holy Water," and that Krooes who is a Croatian regards the Austrian monarchy with anything but affection.

Immediately following the destruction of the big East-Fogarty flour mill and elevator in Des Moines, by fire recently, the federal and state authorities got busy upon an investigation as to the origin which many in close touch with the situation believe to be incendiary. Additional guards have been placed around all similar plants and also about the gas and water plants of the city. The total loss in the East-Fogaryt fire is estimated at between $125,000 and $150,000.

Cedar Falls took the initial step in the state-wide drive to increase Iowa's production of foodstuffs recently at a great massmeeting of farmers and townspeople to organize the work.

Railroads of Mason City have been visited in at least one instance recently by men bent on causing wrecks In the M. & St. L. yards it became known that switches were found open and locks and switch lights removed and thrown away.

The retail merchants of the state in their convention in Sioux City recently passed resolutions assuring President Wilson of their loyalty and pledging to every employe who joins a military unit his job back when he returns from the war.

The city council acting in conjunction with a committee from the local commercial organization decided not to hold the Keokuk "fall festival" for patriotic reasons. The festival has been largely attended by residents of southeastern Iowa for many years.

Three Iowa boys have been hit hard by a big bank failure in Chicago—Attorneys Frank and Charles Novak, alumni of the Iowa university college of law and their brother lost $300,000. They were carrying that amount for friends and patrons in the big bank that went down.

United States secret service agents have been busy lately tearing down wireless plants all over the state and especially in the vicinity of Des Moines, where many have been located. Parts of the plants were seized and will be returned to the owners after the war.

According to reports given out by the attorneys of the Rock Island railroad, the reorganization of the road will be carried out under an Iowa charter. All officials in charge of the reorganization of the company favor the retention of Iowa as the home state of the company.

An inspirational patriotic meeting was held at the court house in West Union recently. General Allen of Cedar Rapids, the highest officer in the Iowa national guard when it is in the field, made the principal address. Local speakers were on the program, as well as band and vocal music.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

By HERMANN HAGEDORN of the VILIGANTES

American America, where is your manhood gone?
Who taught your sons to brag and run, who taught your sons to fawn?
Who taught your sons to whine of peace with quaking coward knees,
And fling in panic to the wolves your hard-won liberties?

America, America, where is your glory fled?
What of the dreams, what of the deeds, what of the noble dead?
What of the swords that flashed for you, what of the tongues that spoke?
What of the hearts that bled for you, what of the hearts that broke?

America, America, remember now your dead!
They cry to you across the night and will not be gainsaid!
Arm, arm, arise, America! Gird on your sword once more!
The foe is at the harbor-mouth, the foe is on your shore!

Awake, arise, America! What cries are in the air?
Hark, the clear word of Washington! The call of Lincoln there!
Cleveland, and there, John Hancock! There, Adams, Webster, Clay!
There, Patrick Henry! There, John Brown! There, Jackson, Lee, John Hay!

Arise, America! Your dead cry out to you, Arise!
Grant, Schuyler, Marshall, Marion! The brave call and the wise!
Paul Jones, Decatur, Perry! McDonough of Champlain!
Arise, America, and stand! A race of men again!

You were not meant to cringe, you were not made to quail!
You were not set a lamp for men, to flare and gutter and fail!
By God, we did not give our blood to set your light on high
Only to see a craven band slothfully let it die!

No, by the God we honor! To Whom alone we bow!
We did not die for Freedom then, to let her perish now!
Arm, arm, arise, America! Put by the craven dread!
We come, we come to the colors! We come, the invincible dead!

Arm, arm, arise! For your dead cannot sleep in the old, green graves!
Liberty cries, imperiled! And we dead rise up from the waves!
Muster the strength of the living! Ten to one are we!
Ten ghosts behind each valiant boy who strikes for Liberty!

Arm, arm, arise, America! Heart of my land, be flame!
An end of words and barter! An end of sloth and shame!
Hark, how the old heroic ghosts to deathless deeds invite!
If you are cowards, perish! But if you are men, then fight!

Not Afraid to Die

It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country.—Horace.

It is related that a private in the army of the Potomac was sentenced to be shot for sleeping at his post of duty. In some way word of the approaching execution came to the attention of President Lincoln, and after writing out a reprieve he called his carriage and started out to see that the reprieve did not fail to reach the poor condemned soldier. It was a broiling hot day and the ride to camp was a long one of ten miles, but the great-hearted Lincoln was bent on saving the poor soldier and he went forward. Perhaps the president later forgot the incident amid weightier cares of state, but not so the soldier. When the Third Vermont charged upon the rifle pits before Yorktown the following year the enemy poured a volley upon them. The first man to fall was William Scott of Company K, with six bullets through his body. His comrades caught him as he fell and my life blood ebbed away, he raised to heaven amid the din of battle the cries of the dying and the shouts of the enemy, a prayer for the president and as he died he remarked to his comrades that Lincoln had showed he was no coward and was not afraid to die. At the burial later the chaplain narrated the circumstances to the boys who stood about with uncovered heads. He had prayed for the president and paid him a most fervid and glowing tribute with his dying breath.

When Miss O'Biern brought an American flag into the school room one day recently, one of the boys of the school asked: "What are you going to do with that dirty rag?" The teacher delivered a short and pointed lecture on the respect due the flag and then spreading the flag on the floor, forced the boy to kneel and kiss every stripe, before the entire school.

What might have been a bad wreck on the Northwestern railroad at What Cheer recently when three young men on their way to town discovered a pile of railroad ties on the track, filling a deep cut. The timbers had evidently been laid with care for they were braced against the bank and cross piled. The matter was immediately reported to the local agent at What Cheer who notified the train dispatcher to hold the through coal train which was at that time past due.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co, Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Like all the rest, he was travelling toward the House of Happiness — the great palace about which all had heard and toward which all turned their faces with a longing that was quite beyond the power of words to express. For it was a gorgeous palace, with many rooms, some of marble, some of purple porphyry, some of light green jade, and some of rare, reddish alabaster—all of them lighted from above through a roof that was one unbroken sheet of gold beaten so fine that the sunlight came through it in softened yellow splendor.

But the strange thing was that, although the House of Happiness seemed a very short distance away, the Happy Highway was long. The House of Happiness should have been reached within an hour, but there were those who had traveled the Happy Highway for years and years.

This, however, did not worry the young man. He was beautiful, and he was young, and his smile played always upon his face until it seemed that magic brushes had painted upon his lips the picture of perfect dreams. And this was no surprising thing, for all along the highway, which was a deep, yellow carpet of asphodel, hundreds upon hundreds of people vied with each other to do him service.

All his wishes were gratified, and the hours were, for him, fairies of plenty flashing past him on jewelled wings.

"I saw yesterday a young girl whose hair was like a rain of stars," he said once, "and the snow of her breast was lovelier than the snow of the breast of any other young girl. Why can I not have the priceless jewels to hang about her neck — jewels to pay her for the kiss she gave me when I passed?"

And immediately a great strong man came up to the edge of the highway and spoke to him. Over the edges of the stranger's hands, which he held in the shape of a bowl, jewels of red and green and blue and dazzling white flowed, a cascade of colour.

"All these," the strong man said, "are for you — to pay the young girl for the kiss she gave you."

And the young man's smile was brighter than it had ever been. Its loveliness was not marred, even the slightest bit, when the bent old man, who had long, snowy hair and an expression that was like a blessing, pointed out that the House of Happiness was still a long way off.

"I heard a woman sing sweetly this morning," he said on another day, "but she was far away, and the distance spoiled the perfection of her voice. Why cannot some woman sing to me here in the shade of this linden tree?"

And immediately a woman with eyes that were deeper than many seas came and sang to him. Behind her were three maidens who followed the air of her song on queer, stringed instruments the like of which he had never seen but which laughed with joy and sobbed in sorrow, so that, even if the woman had not sung, he would have been moved greatly by the music. But the woman's singing was sweeter than that of nightingales and mockingbirds, and, as he looked at her, he fancied that her teeth were the edges of a crystal bell against which her tongue rang like a clapper made of one great red ruby.

"I like to sing for those who like to listen," she told him, "and I will come again to sing to you here in the shade of this linden tree."

And his smile wore a new beauty because it had in it the softness of dreams. Its radiance was not dimmed, even the slightest bit, when the old man pointed out that the House of Happiness seemed as far off as ever.

"The world is so big and its loveliness so wide," the young man said later on, "that I have not time to see it all. Surely there are wonderful pictures that have been made. Why cannot I see the great pictures men have made?"

And immediately a man, whose eyes held in their depths lights so elusive and mysterious that nobody could read even a few of them, brought him pictures of mountains wrapped in shadows like purple velvet, of hillsides gay in the royal splendor of October's green and gold, of lovers, bare-armed and with mouths that were to each other like honey, of a woman whose smile had shone through many centuries, of men going in their gorgeous strength to battle and death.

"These pictures," the man said, "were made by the great dreamers of the world, so that all other men, less fortunate, might be able to see from afar how splendid it is to dream. And, if you call me, I shall come again and show you more of the great pictures men have made."

And the young man's smile was more radiant than ever because he had been led into the company of dreamers. Its beauty was not disturbed, even the slightest bit, when the bent old man suggested that he still was far from the House of Happiness.

"The perfume of the flowers about me," he said one day, "is exquisite, but surely there are sweeter fragrances to be found. Cannot my senses be wooed by a perfume surpassing all these?"

There came up swiftly from one of the fields a little woman who was of great age, and she carried very carefully in her hand a tear jar like those that were fashioned centuries ago for the women of China. And she removed its stopper and held it close to the young man's nostrils. The sweetness of it was ineffable, so overpowering that for a moment he nearly swooned away.

"This," she said, "is the breath of a flower that bloomed a thousand thousand years ago. Few of the sons of men ever knew of it. It was grown by the priests of a forgotten religion, in a walled garden, for the pleasure of a king's daughter. But on the Happy Highway it is possible to find all these things."

When she was gone, the young man smiled again, and his joy was so great that he sighed after he had smiled. But he did not sigh when the bent old man pointed out that the House of Happiness was yet a long way off.

"Women have been kind to me," he said on another day, "and their arms have been warm about me, and they have sung to me by day and by night all the songs that stir the souls of men. But surely there must be in this perfect world one perfect woman. Why have I not found her?"

And lo! there came to him beside the fountain at which he sat a woman whose walk was like the beginnings of music. Her hair was softer and blacker than the soft, black reaches of the night, and her breast, which stormed tumultuously because of him, was fairer than any ever uncurtained by the reverent hand of sculpture. Her robe fell about her loosely, and her long black lashes half hid her eyes, as if she awaited but a word from him to lift them and let him read all the sweet secrets of her surrendering soul.

He kissed her that day and for many days and many nights thereafter, and they made songs together, sitting by the fountain. Great visions came to them unbidden, and he was king and she was queen of the land where dreams come true.

When she left him, he was smiling, and, still smiling, he bent over the fountain to drink of the delectable waters. And the untroubled surface of the waters was a mirrow, which showed him the exact picture of his smile.

He started back, affrighted, desperately eager to disbelieve what he had seen. But at last he looked again. And he knew that his eyes did not deceive him. His smile was twisted.

It was no longer a beautiful smile. In fact, he told himself, there was in it some little thing which made it hideous, entirely different from any of the smiles he had seen on the faces of the thousands who travelled the Happy Highway.

A young girl holding a rose by its stem between her teeth, stopped and looked at him.

"Tell me," he said anxiously, "is my smile hideous?"

The young girl looked at him a long moment, and her eyes were troubled.

"It is not like anything I have seen on the Happy Highway," she answered, and turned from him.

The bent old man was regarding him steadfastly.

"Why is my smile hideous?" asked the young man wringing his hands in anguish.

"It is a message from the House of Happiness," the old man said with an earnestness that barely escaped being sadness, "the writing from the ruler of the House of Hapiness. Sooner or later it comes to everybody on the Happy Highway.

"The man bearing the jewels for the young girl who kissed you as you passed—you failed to note, perhaps, that his shoes were dusty and his hands knotted and scarred.

"The woman who sang to you—you did not read the story in her deep, deep eyes—the shadows of the longings and sorrows that had shaken her and bruised her that she might at last put her soul into a song.

"And he who pleased you with pictures—you did not see that he was thin and tremulous with weakness because of hunger and suffering. The makers of pictures starve and suffer and die so that they may leave behind them the glory they have in their hearts.

"And the tear jar with its wonderful perfume—you have not learned that flowers are the spirits of dead loves and lonely women's tears.

"But the woman who came to you at the fountain and made songs with you—she gave you herself, all her visions, all her dreams. And yet, you gave her nothing, and you let her go. The suffering and the scars of all these things were as nothing to the woe you brought to her and the scar you put upon her soul."

"But what does it all mean?" asked the young man, heartbroken and astonished.

"It means," said the bent old man, "that all may reach the Happy Highway, but that the only staff which will support any one to the House of Happiness is kindly service. You will observe that the blessed palace is far away. All these pilgrims served you, and you have served none. They are rewarded. Look!"

The young man looked, and he was amazed by what he saw. Far down the Happy Highway, almost within the shadow of the House of Happiness, were those who had served him and been kind to him — the strong man through whose fingers jewels ran like a flood of color in the sloping sunlight, the singing woman followed by the three girls with their strange, stringed instruments, and she who had kissed him many days and many nights and made songs with him by the fountain.

And the young man stood and thought for a great, great while after the bent old man had left him. The long mauve shadows fell longer and longer across the Happy Highway. And the one bird who sang at that hour made her song one lingering, plaintive note. The House of Happiness was swallowed up in the distance.

"I must render service to others," the young man said softly. "I have taken everything and given nothing. I must make somebody happy. I must hurry to the House of Happiness."

And he wept bitterly.

Then, suddenly, even while he brushed away his tears, he found that he was running, light footed, along the deep, yellow carpet of asphodel and that he could see again the lovely gold roof of the House of Happiness!

On the end of his story there was in the room absolute silence save for the whimpering of the flames. He sat, his elbows on his knees, his hands hanging free, his eyes busy with the changing lights of the fire. After a little while he could hear her quick, sharp breathing, and then the silk of her gown stirring against the silk of the cushions as she moved.

Her two hands closed over his, and she was whispering, her lips close to his ear. The fragrance of her hair was all about him.

"It will be so!" she breathed, strangely exalted. "It will be so!"

He bent his head and kissed her hands.

"Even when the man may not kiss the woman he loves," he said, his voice also a whisper, a whisper curiously colored with forced levity, "the jester may touch the hand of the princess—your royal highness!"

CHAPTER XXI.

On the following morning a Washington newspaper printed the flat and unqualified announcement of the engagement of Edith Mallon to John Smith. The story was put up in great detail. It recited the "widespread interest" that must be felt in such news because of the fact that the agitator's great demonstration was but nine days off. Reference was made to the breach between Smith and Senator Mallon, and, in a slightly veiled way, the intimation was carried that the marriage of a woman socially as prominent as Miss Mallon to a man of whose standing in "Society" so little was known was, to say the least, a sensation. The article dwelt on the "interest she has shown for so long in the Smith propaganda," and referred to the fact that, soon after she had met him, she had ceased serving at her entertainments alcoholic drinks of any kind —"a fact that caused in the world of society quite as much comment as was the case when the secretary of state inaugurated grape juice as the drink of diplomats in Washington."

Edith's first knowlelge of the announcement came from her father. A little late for breakfast, she entered the dining room with hurried step, a faint smile on her lips, and in her eyes a reflection of the still look of wonder she had had when John Smith had finished his story for her the night before. She realized at once that her father was angry, more infuriated than she ever had seen him.

He half rose from his chair and held out the open newspaper across the table toward her. She was astounded to see that there was vindictiveness in his face. His thin features each seemed drawn tighter and finer than was natural. There was a little white line across the bridge of his nose. As he stared at her his eyelids were half lowered, as if involuntarily he sought to hide some of his anger.

Why, father!" she exclaimed, taking the paper from his quivering hand. "You look as if you hated me!"

"Read that!" he exploded, pointing wildly toward a column on the page in front of her.

Her eyes fell on the headlines concerning herself and John Smith. For a short moment she looked at them, trying to understand them. When their full significance came to her, she let the paper slide from her hand to the table.

"Oh!" she said softly.

She was a little pale.

"Now," the senator supplemented, "what have you to say about that? What can you say?"

She took her seat at the table and looked at him over the clustered roses. She was a little afraid, but not of him. Their rioted through her brain the thought that the printed words she had seen were about a great man and that, in some way, they might hurt him, might weaken him with all those who follow his leadership. She did not know why the thought came to her, but it did, like a premonition. She had not begun to think of herself.

The senator's impatience grew under her groping gaze.

"Well!" he said fiercely, "what can I say about it?"

"I wouldn't say anything if I were you, father," she suggested, her voice low, almost supplicating.

He frowned more darkly.

"Why?" he demanded contemptuously.

"In the first place, it isn't true, of course."

She put out her hand to fix his coffee.

"I can't understand you!" he protested roughly. "Here is the published statement in a newspaper that you are going to marry this man! And you sit there, entirely calm, utterly indifferent, and say you wouldn't say anything about it!"

"I wouldn't, really."

She poured out the coffee Her mind was busy with wondering how the agitator could be hurt by the story. She even wondered why she thought he could be hurt.

"Why, the thing's absurd, ridiculous!" her father went on. "It makes a laughing stock of you and of me! I forbid him the house, and here comes the story of your engagement to him! My daughter engaged to this wild-mouthed, idiotic temperance agitator—this street corner blowhard — this faker!"

She, in her turn, was indignant and distressed by the injustice of what he said.

"He's nothing of the sort," she said steadily. "He's a man who has realized the greatest truth in life—that we get from the world exactly as much as we give to the world."

"He's crazy—that's what he is! He's mad! Just because you let him come in at the front door, he's going to marry you!"

AN ANCIENT JAPANESE ART

Embroidery Made in Flowery Kingdom for Centuries Before Country Was Opened to World.

Japanese embroidery, now so popular in this country, is one of the oldest arts of the mikado's people. For centuries before the country was opened to foreign intercourse heavily embroidered silk kimonos, screens, and other articles were made by professional embroidery experts, principally in Kyoto. This same profession continues today, having been handed down from father to son for many generations. For this reason the center of the country's art-embroidery industry is at Kyoto, although cheaper embroideries, principally for export, are produced in large quantities in other part of the Kobe district.

The majority of the workers in Kyoto are men, who produce the finer grades of embroidery. It is essentially a household industry, and is usually conducted in small shops, where from three to ten apprentices and skilled embroidery are employed. The men receive from 40 to 75 cents gold per day. The women, however, are able to earn from 15 to 50 cents gold per day, depending upon their ability and diligence.

The manufacture of hand-made lace is a comparatively new industry in Japan, as lace was not used by the Japanese before the advent of foreigners. The industry is still in its infancy, and the output is small.

Takes a Strong Wind, Too.

Dr. George T. MacCoy of Columbus recalls that when the Spanish-American war broke out, in April, 1898, two Irishmen were at work on a new asphalt pavement, being laid on Washington street. He was watching them when one stopped handling his pick and glanced up at the courthouse tower, where a flag was waving.

"What's the use of putting a flag up there?" the man questioned. "The wind will whip it to pieces."

"Yes, but the wind's the only thing that can whip it," was the other's quick reply.—Indianapolis News.

Deutschland Sent to America To Obtain Military Facts and Nickel for Krupp Gun Plants

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.

Copyright, 1917, The Tribune Association.

The German merchant submarine Deutschland, the 700-ton U boat which, as it sailed into Bremen looked like a duck with two poles in its back swimming up the Weser river, was built by the Krupp interests to bring war supplies from the United States. German munition plants last year had to stop making, temporarily, 42-centimetre guns and other cannon which require nickel steel, because several of the valuable minerals and ores needed could not be obtained in Europe. Either Krupp had to stop manufacturing nickel steel war munitions -cannon, armor plate and armored automobiles --or the materials had to be brought from America.

Nearly two years ago a draftsman in the Kiel offices of Krupp designed a merchant submarine and submitted the plans to the directors. They were pigeonholed at the time because these materials were not desperately needed and because the government would not aid Krupp in constructing unarmed U boats. But last year Krupp needed nickel, rare ores and minerals which could be bought only in the United States or South America. So the Deutschland was designed, built, financed, launched and directed by the Krupp interests to solve the distressing military problem of a shortage of special ores and rubber.

Crew Selected by Navy.

About this time the German navy was having difficulty in obtaining reports from the German agents in the United States. Before Captain Boy-Ed was sent back spy reports arrived in Berlin regularly Sometimes information about events here reached the German navy before they were known at the American embassy. But the blockade of spies was becoming stricter

The German navy, which has been stirring up anti-American feeling wherever it could, selected the crew for the Deutschland and placed temporary discharged naval intelligence officers aboard to collect and bring back information from the United States regarding preparedness, public opinion and to make soundings and investigation in American waters wherever the submarines went

The best evidence that Germany has reached the maximum manufacturing point of heavy artillery is the Deutschland's cargoes. They show that Germany has reached the heights of her military efficiency, that certain raw materials are lacking which are needed in gun construction But this does not mean that Germany is ready to crumble within a few weeks or months. Germany has plenty of iron and copper and sufficient coal to run her ammunition and war material factories for years. But to make the big 38.5 centimeter ship guns, armor plate and the new type German "tank," the finest quality of nickel steel is needed.

The Krupp process of making nickel steel is a secret one, but during a visit to Krupps last year I saw these ship cannon moulded One of the officers in charge explained that some 40 materials were used After the naval battle off the coast of Jutland the navy department needed more 38s and more armor plate. Orders were sent to Krupp, but the naval officers who are in charge of this work at Essen reported that nickel and other ores were lacking, and that unless they were procured outside of Europe construction could not begin.

Finest Guns Demanded.

Early last year the army intelligence department reported that the English were making preparations for an offensive on the Somme and Ancre rivers. The German staff drew up plans for the defense. Demands were made for more nickel steel cannon which could hold out during long bombardments. Only the finest Krupp guns were known to be capable of shooting 2,000 big shells. The general staff knew that to fight a battle of several months' duration in trench warfare cannon were needed which could be depended upon for continuous action.

Krupp was appealed to to furnish such defenses. But Krupp replied that nickel and other materials were needed and that these could not be obtained in Europe. So the army and navy supported the Krupp directors who started construction at the Kiel wharves where other government submarines were being built.

Meanwhile agents were sent to the United States via Copenhagen to notify the North German Lloyd representatives here to purchase supplies and make arrangements for the arrival of the Deutschland at Baltimore. The same agents who came here reported to the German secret service. And, while the Deutschland was being built and tried in the Baltic sea, where all submarines were first sailed, German agents here bought supplies for Krupp and collected information for the German navy

Just before the Deutschland returned from its first trip to the United States I visited the Krupp works at Essen. Here I was given the first accurate information about the merchant submarines.

Depended on Deutschland.

One day while I was going through the factory where the 38.5 centimeter ship guns were being assembled, in company with other correspondents from neutral countries, I was told by a Krupp director that the future construction of these guns depended upon the safe return of the Deutschland. Although the Deutschland made two trips it did not bring sufficient valuable ores and materials to keep the Krupp works supplied for more than a few months at the most. When these supplies are exhausted Germany will not be able to manufacture new nickel steel guns. That means that Germany has reached the limit of her ability to construct such weapons. But it does not mean that all she had on hand are in the scrap heap.

Ever since the beginning of the war Germany has been contending that the United States was not neutral in permitting American factories to make supplies for the allies. The German press bureaus sent inspired articles to the press which said that President Wilson was practically permitting the United States government to aid the allies. The German people believed that the United States was discriminating by helping the allies get the supplies. The imperial government encouraged this view because it did not want the people to think about the loss of Germany's sea power But, when it came to a pinch, when Germany needed materials from America, desperately, then the Krupp interests did what the allies did—they sent ships over to America to get supplies.

German People Were Never Told.

But the German people were never told that these supplies were war supplies. The German people were never informed that the Deutschland was owned and controlled by Krupp. Alfred Lohmann, who was president of the German Ocean Navigation company, the Krupp dummy, posed as the originator of the submarine idea. As a matter of fact, he had nothing to do with the designing or building of the Deutschland. The North German Lloyd company, which is owned almost entirely by Krupp, was used as another dummy These dummies were appointed as much for the German public as to deceive the American people.

After the Deutschland made its first trip and returned I went to see it sail up the mouth of the Weser to Bremen. That night I saw members of the crew coming from a dinner at the Rathaus cafe. The next day several of them reported personally to the naval intelligence department of the admiralty in Berlin They had made soundings and reports on American waters outside Baltimore for the use of other submarines, including the sea murderers, in case war came, and it would be possible for Germany to send submarines to the United States for offensive purposes. Captain Koenig, in his book, tells about some of the information he and his crew collected regarding the waters in the Chesapeake bay and the Atlantic.

If Germany was not using the Deutschland as a submarine investigator, why did the Deutschland not return to Baltimore on the second trip? Why was it planned to send each new submarine into a different American harbor? Why were New London, Conn., New York and Boston selected?

Looking Forward.

Is it possible that the German navy was looking forward to the time when America would be at war with Germany—to the time when it would be advisable to send destructive submarines into American waters? If the Deutschland crew had no connection with the navy department if each man had his discharge papers, why were they selected from the naval intelligence bureau?

As I wrote in an earlier article, Germany expects to fight America over here, unless something happens that she can't get her submarines out of the North sea. If a German submarine appeared suddenly off Baltimore, New York, New London, Norfolk or Boston, armed with 6-inch cannon and several torpedoes it might make it very uncomfortable for a time as far as United States shipping is concerned.

The Bremen is lost. Director General Heinicken, of the North German Lloyd, declared in Berlin to those who asked him that he believed the Bremen was lost in a storm off the coast of England. The Deutschland and Bremen were both escorted in the North sea by naval submarines. Heinicken said the Bremen encountered a severe storm and, according to all indications, was lost. What has happened to the Deutschland no one seems to know. Early in January the Berlin papers announced that the merchant submarine would carry mail to the United States, but that mail for the next ship, presumably the Deutschland, had to be in Bremen before January 20. When I was in Paris I was asked where the Deutschland was. I did not know. The official who asked me said: "Don't be surprised if the English navy captured it."

Krupp Has Four Others.

English friends later confirmed this, but I doubh, whether accurate reports will be received until the English government is ready to make the announcement. If the English have captured the Deutschland, Krupp still has four others. But now that the United States is at war with Germany these submarines will not be sent here as merchant ships. Krupp, however, can easily loan or sell them to the German navy for supply ships for submarines operating in the Atlantic or off the American or African coasts. They can be made to hold tons of supplies. By use of such ships big ocean cruising submarines could stay in the Atlantic for months without returning to their base at Heligoland or Wilhelmshaven.

Merchant submarines were loaded with dyestuffs and knitting needles for the United States because large sums of money could be collected here for these materials. The first voyage of the Deutschland, so it was said in Berlin, netted Lohmann about half a million dollars. But the risk was so great that, unless the Deutschland was bringing military cargoes for the government, the government could not permit the manufacture and construction. General Director Ballin, of the Hamburg-American line, proposed two years ago at a board meeting that merchant submarines be built, but the proposal was not carried because the directors expected peace, and also the government would not encourage the construction of any ships which were not needed for military purposes.

Those Foolish Questions.

From Puck.

Old Lady—Conductor, why did the train stop before we came to the station?

Conductor—Ran over a pig, ma'am.

Old Lady—What! Was it on the track?

Conductor—No—oh, no; we chased it up the embankment.

Improved Circumstances.

Father (at head of table)—When I was a boy I was glad enough to eat dry bread for my dinner.

Small Daughter—Well, daddy, you are having a much better time now you are living with us.

Hot and Cold.

From the Baltimore American.

"Say, Jims, have you hot and cold water in your house?"

"Sure I have. Cold water for any suggestions I may happen to make and hot water the rest of the time."

From Life.

Mrs. Dasher—No, dear; you mustn't invite the Fannings and the Jeromes for the same evening. The two families don't speak

Dasher—Fell out over the children, I presume.

Mrs. Dasher—No, their cooks quarrelled.

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is an ether compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist. It is called freezone, and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store. Just ask for freezone. Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears. Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off, root and all, with the fingers.

Not a twinge of pain, soreness or irritation; not even the slightest smarting, either when applying freezone or afterwards.

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus, but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out. It is no humbug! It works like a charm. For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of your feet. It never disappoints and never burns, bites or inflames. If your druggist hasn't any freezone yet, tell him to get a little bottle for you from his wholesale house.—adv.

Why He Subscribed.

A collector of subscriptions for the brass band fund once came across a farmer who was noted for his meanness. To his surprise the farmer at once consented to subscribe fully as large a sum as any he had yet received.

"Mr. Hardfist," he said, addressing the farmer, "you are surely very fond of music to give so much"

"Oh, yes," said the farmer; "they're grand for scaring the crows from ma 'taties when they're practicin' an' I'm grateful."

Snappy.

Josh—I wonder why they advertise this as a snappy show. All there is to it are some good-looking chorus girls.

Josher—Why, they call it snappy, you poor minnow, 'cause all you do is rubber.

Very True.

May—Oh, no, but one can repeat it.

BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP

A Valued Household Remedy for Over Half a Century.

In our climate, with its sudden changes of temperature, rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day, it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, many deaths resulting from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept in the house, and a few doses taken in time, will possibly prevent a severe illness, a doctor's bill, and perhaps death. For fifty years this has been a very successful remedy for coughs, colds, throat or lung troubles. It induces a good night's sleep with easy expectoration in the morning. For sale by druggists in all parts of the civilized world, 25 and 75 cent bottles.—Adv.

Too Many Operations

The Right Medicine in Many Cases Does Better than the Surgeon's Knife. Tribute to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Doctor Said Operation or Death—But Medicine Cured.

Des Moines, Iowa.—"My husband says I would have been in my grave today had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from a serious female trouble and the doctors said I could not live one year without an operation. My husband objected to the operation and had me try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon commenced to get better and am now well and able to do my own housework. I can recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman as a wonderful health restorer."—Mrs. BLANCHE JEFFERSON, 703 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

Another Operation Avoided.

Richmond, Ind.—"For two years I was so sick and weak from female troubles that when going up stairs I had to go very slowly with my hands on the steps, then sit down at the top to rest. The doctor said he thought I should have an operation, and my friends thought I would not live to move into our new house. My daughter asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had taken it with good results. I did so, my weakness disappeared, I gained in strength, moved into our new home, do all kinds of garden work, and raised hundreds of chickens and ducks. I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. M. O. JOHNSTON, Route D, Box 190, Richmond, Ind.

Of course there are many serious cases that only a surgical operation will relieve. We freely acknowledge this, but the above letters, and many others like them, amply prove that many operations are recommended when medicine in many cases is all that is needed.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

DEATH OF WM. PRULL

On Sunday, April 15, at Dolliver, Iowa, occurred the death of William Prull, a former Hancock county resident, at the age of 37 years.

Mr. Prull was stricken with an attack of appendicitis about a week before and it was this that caused his death.

He was born in Hancock county in 1880. In 1906 he was united in marriage with Miss Martha Gast at Klemme, Iowa He leaves besides his wife, three daughters, one son, five brothers and four sisters, beside other relatives.

Mr. Prull lived in this vicinity until a few years ago when he moved to Dolliver.

The body was brought to Britt and funeral services were held in the M. E. Church Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock, Rev. Muhleman and a Dolliver minister conducting the services. The remains were laid to rest in Evergreen cemetery.

All of his brothers and sisters were present at the funeral except Mrs. Chas. Johnson of Grand Valley, Colorado, and his brother John of Loveland, Colorado.

The stricken family have the heartfelt sympathy of all in their dark hour.—Britt Tribune.

Hann's Jubilee Singers

Genuine real down South Jubilee Singers attract more people than any other kind of music. Haun Company has a country wide reputation as being one of the leading Chautauqua attractions. Their program ranges from the melodious songs of the Southland to grand opera.—Wyoming Tribune, Cheyenne, (Wyo) Feb. 24, 1917.

They showed a human note in their splendid concert here last night The program ranged from the quartet from Rigoletto to the Southland folk songs. W. A. Haun Co. Manager possesses a really magnificent bass voice He was especially good in Toreadore from Carmen—Sleep, Kentucky Babe, with Howard Berry as soloist was a veritable gem. Madam Talbert was the surprise of the evening. Her soaring lyric soprano simply captivated the hearers. The male quartet gave an imitation of P. T. Barnum's steam calliope which alone was worth the price of admission. The program closed with the famous patrioticsong "Old Flag Never er Touched the Ground." The large and enthusiastic audience rose to its feet and cheered to the echo."

Hats off to Corwith when it comes to showing real patriotism, they have furnished more recruits for the U. If all of the country was like this immediate community conscription and draft would have been put in force with the declaration of war. Now that conscription has passed, Klemme and vicinity is bound to furnish her quota If Uncle Sam passes a bill whereby a married man or those with a dependent family are allowed a reasonable amount to care for those dependent upon them for support, Klemme will be well represented we are sure, and will have a new editor. Wake up young men, and those who have no home ties, don't wait for conscription.

Kanawha Record Sold

B C. Ellsworth who has been publishing the Kanawha Record ever since the town sprung into existence has sold the business and good will to a stock company and retires from May 1st. Howard Africa who is well known here, having worked here at one time will be the new editor. Howard has been publishing successful papers at various places the past few years and comes now from Lankin, South Dakota, where he has been publishing the Reporter. Mr. Ellsworth will remain in Kanawha for the present but does not say what he will do. We regret Brother Ellsworth's departure from the county newspaper field very much. He published a very good and newsy paper at all times and being a good business man was clean competition. We wish him continued success in anything that he might take up, and hope that his successor enjoys an equal prosperity.

The Penality of Greed

In these trying hours there may arise a few who will try to get rich quick at the expense of the nation and its people. But it will be neither profitable or wise for them to attempt anything of the kind.

If their business is national in its scope, the government will handle them without gloves. The president has so warned them.

If their business is local in its character, we, the people, will see that they get their just deserts.

There must be no price boosting, no gouging, no angling for sudden wealth for the few at the expense of misery for the many.

The man who can not be a patriot from choice must have it thrust upon him from necessity.

The people are mighty and their will must prevail. It must be a period of loyalty and live and let live.

It is also true that small accumulations too insignificant to be noted by the owner on a cursory trip to the premises, or, if noticed, too insignificant to be even unsightly, may yet have great significance from the viewpoint of fly breeding. For this reason neighbors can well afford to dispose of waste or at least to build the fires that will destroy their own rubbish, upon such accumulations and thus kill the egg or larva of flies.

Fred Hunsley, residing near Stilson, brought in a wagon load of potatoes Saturday that netted him $160. To our knowledge Fred has received the top price ever paid by a local merchant for a load of potatoes. This would seem to warrant the people advocating planting every available acre in town to something o food value, for with the war barely started who is there who can predict what prices Fred will be getting for potatoes a year hence.—Britt News.

NOTICE TO SICK WOMEN

Positive Proof That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Bridgeton, N.J.—"I cannot speak too highly of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for inflammation and other weaknesses. I was very irregular and would have terrible pains so that I could hardly take a step. Sometimes I would be so miserable that I could not sweep a room. I doctored part of the time but felt no change. I later took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt a change for the better. I took it until I was in good healthy condition. I recommend the Pinkham remedies to all women as I have used them with such good results."—Mrs. MILFORD T. CUMMINGS, 322 Harmony St., Penn's Grove, N. J.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence of the excellence of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy for the distressing ills of women such as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, backache, painful periods, nervousness and kindred ailments.

NEW QUARTIER LATIN HERE

Greenwich Village in New York Becomes Bohemian Capital of World as Result of War.

The European war has left the famous Latin quarter of Paris almost deserted; and a temporary paralysis lies, also, upon the art bohemias of Munich, London and Rome. In default of competition New York's "Greenwich Village" has thus suddenly become the new bohemian capital of the world. Charles Phelps Cushing writes in Cartoons Magazine.

We inclose "Greenwich village" in quotation marks out of deference to the older villagers, who, for the most part are respectable Tammany Hall Irish-Americans and German-Americans; Latin Americans and American Italians—all, or nearly all, resigned to making their living by pretty much the same methods as the masses do anywhere else. "The bulk of the neighborhood," declares so reliable an authority as the director of Greenwich house (community center), "is made up of the conservative American working class—the clerk, the factory worker, the longshoreman, the office cleaner, the teamster and the day laborer."

The Greenwich village of old was as famous for its dignity and quiet as the "village" of today is noted for its "pagan revels." The Greenwich of a hundred years ago was a rural retreat two miles north of New York city, and was a stronghold of fashion and respectability. Numerically, the conservatives are yet well in the majority but the limelight of publicity in recent times has been trained only on the Bohemians. So "Greenwich Village" has come to stand for the very reverse of all that it meant a generation back.

CHAPTER XXI (Continued). 17

"Father!" she cautioned sharply. "You know he didn't have this article printed. You know he didn't. And you know we're not engaged."

The senator regarded her with amazement as she handed him his coffee.

"The idea of your thinking it necessary to tell me you're not engaged to him! The whole thing is preposterous! He's beneath contempt—an upstart without family, without position, without means!"

"It seems silly to say that he is nobody," she contradicted him evenly. "At his call thousands upon thousands of people are coming here to compel congress to do a big thing. He is a great national figure—a wonderful man."

Her memory of him the night before, the realization that others attacked him as her father was doing now, the thought that in many cases there was nobody to defend him, the mental picture of his swiftly catching up the rose she had dropped at his feet—these things flashed through her mind, aroused in her a great longing to protect him, to help him.

"I only wish," she concluded, looking at her father out of wide, utterly frank eyes, "I were his wife today."

"Then you had that thing printed!"

His tone was brutal. He struck the table with his fist, and, as he did so, his knuckles, grazing the saucer, tipped it over suddenly, throwing the cup of coffee clear of the table and to the floor. Wales, hearing the noise, came into the room.

"Get out!" Mallon thundered at him, causing his instant retre

He left his chair and started go from the room.

"Aren't you going to eat y breakfast?" she asked, forcing herself to calmness.

"When you've finished yours, when you've left the room!"

"Oh, father," she begged, "please, please, be more kind, more just."

He stopped in the doorway.

"You know," she added, "we are not engaged."

"Yes!" he exploded again. "And everybody else will know it! I'm going to send word to the papers right now that I want to issue a denial of this absurd report. I want the reporters up here just as soon as I can get them. I'll have the denial printed today, this afternoon. I won't stand this foolishness!"

"Then," she said, her words hesitant, I'll have to—have to—"

"Have to what!" he broke in.

She caught her lower lip between her teeth for a moment to hide the tremor that was upon it. Almost, there were tears in her eyes.

"Oh," she answered helplessly, "I don't know what to do. But if you send for the reporters, I think I shall send for Mr. Waller and—and ask him to help us—me."

Her father sneered perceptibly.

"Do so, by all means," he advised bitterly; "and a precious lot of good he'll do."

"At least, she said, "he's fond of him."

The senator flung himself out of the room.

She hurried upstairs to the telephone on her desk, but could not speak to Waller until her father had finished calling up the Washington newspaper offices with the request that reporters be sent to the house at once.

When that was over and Waller had said he would come to her immediately, she went downstairs again and found Nellie Kane.

"Oh, Nellie," she said gratefully, "I'm so glad you're here!"

Mrs. Kane knew the value of cheerfulness.

"My dear," she bubbled, "you almost persuade me the story isn't true! Besides, this happens to be another Thursday. Remember the girl—your girls. They'll all be wanting all sorts of help in a few minutes."

"Oh," she breathed, "I had forgotten about them, but I'm glad it's Thursday, and I hope—oh, Nellie, I do hope I can do lots for them all!"

Nellit patted her shoulder gently.

"My dear," she said, "you always do."

CHAPTER XXII.

The two women were in the Mallon parlor when Cholliewollie arrived.

"Of course," he gave it as his opinion, "it was just a coincidence that this announcement was published the morning following the —ermeeting at my apartment last night."

"You don't think," Mrs. Kane voiced her surprise, "that they're laying their plans to make a scandal out of that!"

"No," he drawled, "I don't."

"Of course not!"

"I don't," he supplemented, "because I'm sure they knew nothing about it. But, if they did, I wouldn't put it past them. They would do anything now to hit Smith—and they don't care who else gets hurt."

Edith felt the burning desire to clear her mind of the things that puzzled her.

NOTICE OF PROPOSAL FOR ERECTION OF TWO SCHOOL-HOUSES.

Notice is hereby given that bids for the erection of two shoolhouses the township of Ell, Hancock unty, will be received by the unsigned at his office in Ell Townp, where plans and specifications y be seen, until 1 clock P. M., ay 25, 1917, at whic time contract ll beawarded to the lowest respon- bidder. Bids should state the papers to send reporters up here. He wants to deny the story.

"There you are! The senator is doing the very thing they counted on."

Edith reflected a moment.

"They think," she suggested, "that anything they can do to make Mr. Smith look ridiculous will hurt what he stands for?"

"Oh, yes; but this is such a little thing, this engagement—I mean, it is too slightly, the effect of the denial and all that, to hurt anybody. If it was cumulative, if it followed something else, or if there were something else to follow this——"

He took his turr at reflection.

Edith, tremendously distressed, waited for him to continue.

"Oh," he said, "there's nothing to itmerely a little piece of little spite. That's all there can be to it. They're in desperate plight, Miss Mallon, and they don't hesitate to use you as a means of annoying him and worrying him and making him appear ridiculous before the country. They're grasping at straws. That's all."

"But when my father issues his denial of the engagement—what then?"

"But when my father issues his denial of the engagement—what then?"

"Your father, feeling as he does toward Mr. Smith, will not spare him, naturally. He will make it unpleasant."

"If he only wouldn't!" she said desperately. "If he only wouldn't!"

Mrs. Kane came to the rescue.

"Your father's in the library, isn't he?" She rose quickly. "Well my deear, leave him to me. All men can be handled, and, particularly, all old men can be handled by young widows." She laughed reasuringly. "I go to change his mind."

"I hope she succeeds," Waller said, when she had left the room.

"You think it so important?"

"Not vitally, but I seem to be 'hipped' about Smith just now. I had rather see nothing come out to bother him in the slightest way. Think of what he's doing. Think of the responsibilities on him this very minute!"

She contemplated that for a few moments in silence.

"That is what has bothered me so," she said at last. "Why should I be thrust forward as an annoyance to him at such a time?"

Like an answer to her question, Wales lifted the hangings at the door and announced:

"Mr. Smith."

There was hurry in his stride as he stepped into the room. It was apparent that he was almost beside himself with anger and concern. The anger, which was vastly different from Senator Mallon's, was still in his face, making his eyes glow. His face was very pale. And his physique, which always, in some strange manner, reflected his moods as surely as did his features, was tensed. Waller, watching him, noticed that his chest seemed deeper, and his arms, held at a sharper angle from his body, appeared more easily and more gracefully swung in their sockets. It was as if his body held itself marvellously ready to carry out the impulses of his mind.

"I beg your pardon!" he said abruptly, halting a few steps inside the room.

"It is too bad!"

Edith said that involuntarily and held out her hand to him.

"What are you doing here!"

Waller made that exclamation express the full measure of his astonishment.

Smith came forward and shook hands with Edith. He paid her all his attention.

"I would not have come—would not have intruded, believe me," he said with quick emphasis the strength in his voice somehow expressing the fact that he felt everything for her, nothing for himself. "I called up the office of the newspaper which printed that report. I heard that Senator Mallon had sent for reporters so that he might deny the engagement. I wished—it is my most ernest desire—to say anything, to do anything, that might relieve you of any shadow of embarrassment."

He wheeled, fiery and alert, to Waller.

"What can I do?" he demanded.

"What on earth do you think of doing?" the newspaper man retorted.

The agitator turned again to Edith.

"I am sure you understand," he went on, his words a torrent of emotion. "I remembered my position—rather, my lack of position—in this house, but I have just read the report. I did not stop to consider. I came because I am horrified, distressed, that such an atrocious embarrassment should be put upon you."

She looked at him, all the lights of morning in her face.

"It doesn't embarrass me at all," she told him.

"But it must!"

"If it does, it is because I do not like to think of anything interfering with your work."

His perception of how thoroughly she had put him before herself checked him. For a second he could not speak.

"My dear fellow," Waller drawled, his voice colored by the affection he felt for the man, "what could you do, under the circumstances?"

"Tell me just that," Smith demanded. "What can I do?"

"Absolutely nothing."

"Surely there must be something—some way in which I could take it up with the editor, obtain correction."

"As I told you once before," Waller answered, "corrections are not of much value. Once put the little printed words before the readers with their eggs and coffee in the morning, and not all the king's horses nor all the king's men can ever recall them."

Edith reminded him:

"There is no reason to feel concerned for me. If it does not trouble you, let's forget it, please. It is by no means a tragedy." She smiled warmly. "Is it?"

He looked at her steadfastly, and Waller saw that he exulted—as a strong man takes pride in his strength.

"But," Smith reminded her, "there is the question of your father's denial of the story."

"Ah-h!"

The three turned toward the music room. In the doorway stood Senator Mallon.

"Ah-h!" he repeated, addressing Smith. "To what, may I ask, do we owe this—unexpected honor?"

His voice was a triumph in studied insolence.

Cholliewollie stepped to Edith's side.

"If you will leave us, Miss Mallon, for a moment," he said in a low tone.

"Would it be best?" she asked, whispering the question.

"Much," he answered.

She turned and went out through the door leading into the hall.

Mallon came farther into the room, his star still fixed on Smith.

"Will you tell me," he repeated, "to what we owe this visit from you?"

"It was not a visit to you," Smith answered him cooly.

"I never heard of such insolence!"

The agitator strove to keep his self-control.

"It might seem so—it does seem so," he said quietly, "but this was an affair in which Miss Mallon's peace of mind was threatened. And, since that was true, nothing could have kept me away." He took a step swiftly toward the senator. "t seems to me only fair, Senator Mallon," he said, "for you to let me know why you have assumed this attitude toward me, why you are so bitter."

"You, yourself, are the answer to your own question," Mallon replied.

He lit a cigar and tried to look at Smith in real contempt. Somehow, he failed in that.

"Now," he ordered, "get out of my house—and stay out!"

Smith regarded hi mwith an expression like pity.

"You will not tell me why?" he asked again.

"Oh, yes," the older man responded with elaborate carelessness, "if you want to know. I know what you are. I'm on to you—demagogue and faker."

"One moment!"

Cholliewollie stepped between the two men and faced Mallon. His manner was such as it had been the night he had interrogated Simpson in the stuffy hotel room. The drawl had gone from his voice.

"You see, senator," he said curtly, without a smile, "I'm on to you—you big four-flush!"

"Don't you dar to——" Mallon tried to stop him.

"There's no daring about it," Waller assured him sternly. "I'm on to you. I've got the goods on you. And I'm about to tell you where you get off."

He turned to Smith with the quick query:

"You remember you said one day you'd like to know why the senato rt—siham nhree jwmtth senator—this man here—was so bitterly opposed to you, so personally hostile?"

Smith nodded.

"Well, I know now." He faced the senator again. "You're a great big man out in your state, you are!"

Mallon started toward the electric push button. His face was purple, except for the thin line of white across the bridge of his nose. Waller caught him sharply by the arm.

"No, you don't!" he commanded Mallon. "You sit down there! I'm about to tell you a little story."

The senator, completely aghast, sank into the chair toward which Waller's commanding pressure on his arm guided him. The newspaper man stood over him.

"You're a great big man out in your state. You were a great big man in business 15 years ago—a merchant prince. But merchant princes are like other people; they overreach themselves sometimes. It happened that, at the time when you found yourself facing financial ruin and the wiping out of your business, some idiot developed the idea that your gifts and virtues entitled you to be governor of the state."

Smith, seeing the man's agitation, felt remorse.

"Is this necessary now and here, Waller?" he asked.

"Very," Waller replied laconically, and proceeded with his story: "Who saved you from the business crash? Who, by that act, virtually made you governor and actually owned you in all your official acts?"

He snapped his fingers and laughed harshly. His anger was apparent, a very personal thing.

Ah, these precious whisky interests look far ahead and invest their money well, don't they, senator? Who told you to run for the senate?"

He leaned forward and snapped his finigers again. He seemed to want to drive his questions home to Mallon's mind.

Becaus[illegible] have an admiration for one of the[illegible] Germanys is no more a reason why [illegible] should abate our indignation and co[illegible] testation for the other [illegible] crimes that [illegible] because a man loves a [illegible] blam[illegible] on his hearthstone he should refr[illegible] fight a forest fire.

We have got to remember a[illegible] thing. If our overseas observati[illegible] this war abroad have taught us [illegible] thing, they should have taught us [illegible] the German army—and when I say [illegible] I mean in this case, not its men b[illegible] officers, since in the German army [illegible] officers are essentially the brain a[illegible] power and the motive force directi[illegible] unthinking, blindly obedient mass be[illegible] them—that the German army is [illegible] army of good sportsmen. And th[illegible] take it, is an even more important [illegible] sideration upon the field of battle [illegible] it is upon the athletic field. As the [illegible] ing goes, the Germans don't play [illegible] game. It is as inconceivable to [illegible] German officers going in for baseb[illegible] football or cricket as it is to [illegible] American volunteers marching the [illegible] step.

The Germans are not an outdoor [illegible] they are not given to playing [illegible] sports and abiding by the rules of [illegible] sports, as Englishmen and as Amer[illegible] are. And in war—that biggest of all [illegible] door games—it stands proved [illegible] them that they do not play accord[illegible] the rules, except they be rules of [illegible] own making. The German is a p[illegible] winner and he is a bad loser—a most [illegible] markably bad loser. Good sports[illegible] would not have broken Belgium [illegible] bloody bits because Belgium stood [illegible] tween them and their goal; good sp[illegible] men would not have sung the Hy[illegible] Hate, or made "Gott Strafe Engl[illegible] their battle cry; good sportsmen [illegible] not have shot Edith Cavell or sunk [illegible] Lusitania. Good sportsmen would [illegible] have packed the helpless men and [illegible] of a conquered and prostrate land [illegible] captives into an enforced servitude, [illegible] than African slavery; would not wan[illegible] have wasted La Fere and Chauny [illegible] Ham, and 100 other French town[illegible] they did last month, for no conce[illegible] reason than that they must surr[illegible] these towns back into the hand of [illegible] enemy; would not, while ostensib[illegible] peace with us, have plotted to destroy [illegible] industrial plants and to plant the [illegible] of sedition among our foreign born [illegible] zens, and to dismember our country, [illegible] celing it out to a brown race in M[illegible] and a yellow race in Japan. With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply on the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

At little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding skin. Just think! You can lift off your corns and calluses now without a bit of pain or soreness. If your druggist hasn't freezone he can easily get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

CHILDREN FEARLESS IN SHATTERED TOWN

With the British Armies in France.—(By mail.)—To those who have lived among them the children of the war zone in France will ever remain a psychological riddle. It is startling to the newcomer at the war to find them here at all. It is positively uncanny to see them at play where a shell might break almost any moment, utterly oblivious to the soldiers and scenes about them and with senses so attuned to the ordinary nerve racking noises that only a prolonged lull in the ceaseless roar of guns would cause them the least concern.

They cling with their elders to the remnants of their shell shattered homes in the bombarded towns and villages, where even yet the German guns send their shells. Some have been born within the sound of the cannon and others have come into their first sense of being in the midst of battle. The strange phenomenon of life to them will be the unwonted stillness of peace.

A striking picture it is to see a little French girl, 5 or 6 years old, with a plaited "pigtail" down her back, tripping barcheaded along a road where even soldier men venture only under the protection of their big steel hats. Such a little girl sat and softly sang and knitted in front of her home near an old Flemish mill one bright and warm December noon while a score of airplanes whirled and fought overhead and the high blue sky was filled with the fleecy cotton balls that come from bursting shrapnel shells. She could see the scared and scarred lines on the distant hills which were the enemy trenches, and, still farther back, the occasional white hot flashes of enemy guns.

No stranger school can be found in all the world than that at Arras. Arras itself is a strange and ghostly city. Some of the houses are just as their owners left them during the first bombardment in October two years ago. Others have been pulverized along with the cathedral, the city hall and the railway station, three favorite targets of the German gunners. The enemy lines skirt the eastern edge of the city and daily fierce these messengers of death are sent shrieking into Arras—bursting in fury from the sky.

In the midst of all this malignity of war are two score children or more go to school. Their class room is in the cellar of a house so well demolished that a few additional shells would scarcely change the character of the mass of bricks that serves as a protective roof. It would take a terrific bombardment to interrupt them at their lessons. The muffled sound of shells or bombs in their time has become far too common to attract attention.

All Arras is underground. There are quiet periods of the day when the women and children and old men venture abroad for a few moments at a neighboring well or for the sake of a stroll and a little fresh air. Opportunity after opportunity has been given them to go, but they prefer to remain with what few of their own. Three persons were killed just outside the cellar door, but the children in the cellar knew nothing of the tragedy. When school is out each afternoon the children scurry to their home as fast as they can go, and there is a great pattering of little wooden soled shoes down the cobblestone streets.

There are scores of other towns within the fire zone, but not quite so close to the war as Arras, where children live by hundreds. It is no infrequent thing for them, others calling them children from a distant bombardment just as they would from a shower of rain.

Several months ago enemy airplanes dropped bombs in a village six or seven miles behind the firing line. It was Sunday afternoon and the streets were thronged outside a soldiers' moving picture theater a line of children was waiting for the doors to open. One of the bombs fell near where they stood. They scattered like so many mice, but within a minute or two all were scrambling back to their places in the queue as if nothing at all had happened.

English Tommies love the children and when billeted in a village can always be seen playing with the tots, buying them all sorts of candies and sweetmeats and even wheeling them gaily along in perambulators while fond mothers look on.

Farmers Are Serving.

Washington, D. C.—That the farmers are enlisting as patriotic soldiers in the army of food producers to meet the war emergency is indicated by a most unusual telegram which has been received by the federal farm loan bureau from a group of farmers near Goodland, Kan. The telegram is as follows.

"We, the members of the Sherman County National Farm Loan association, representing 15,000 acres of land, pledge to President Wilson and the people of our country our hearty cooperation in increasing our acreage of food products and assist in every way to keep down the high cost of living during this war which has been forced upon us. We are very grateful to the Senate congress and the president for the passage of the federal farm loan bill which will prove a great benefit to this section of the country and has already reduced the rates on real estate loans in Sherman county one-fourth. C. C. Evans, president."

"Your telegram strikes that high patriotic note which the government at Washington expects to hear from the farmers of the United States everywhere. The duty of producing food for ourselves and our brothers in arms is no less than that of bearing arms by land and on the sea. The federal farm loan bureau stands ready to assist in every way in its power in the financing of the farmers of the United States in their great work of meeting the extraordinary expenses of farming in these extraordinary times, and we greet you, as fellow workers in the cause."

Again Mr. Gompers Saves Us Trouble.

From the Chicago Post.

Mr. Samuel Gompers has given our new allies a charming example of the attractive formality with which we transact diplomatic business.

Mr. Gompers, it may be remembered, constituted himself a super-supreme court a few weeks ago. This week he assumed the duties of the state department and cabled the prime minister of England a request that two labor representatives be put upon the war commission which the British are sending over here. Lloyd-George, accommodating himself easily to our casual ways, wired that he'd be delighted to do so.

It's a good thing that the labor men are coming, of course. But why should our genial group individualism stop here? Why don't the movie men or the ice cream manufactures cable Lloyd-George to give places to some of their representatives? It's going to be a good junket, with all expenses paid. Why don't the Grogan democrats of the Eighteenth ward demand at least one job on it?

Must Cultivate Soil.

London—Full powers to deal with farmers who do not cultivate their land to its full capacity have been granted to the board of agriculture under the defense of the realm act. The new regulations provide that the board of agriculture may at will terminate a farmer's tenancy and arrange for the cultivation of the land by some other person. It may also take possession of any farm machinery, produce, stock or animals which are required for the cultivation of the land or the increase of the food supply.

SPRING FLY CAMPAIGN.

In the annual effort made to reduce flies, it is, of course, of primary importance that the early flies be killed. It is much easier to reduce the insects in the early spring and summer than later in the season when there are thousands, and perhaps millions of them to cope with. The "Swat the Fly" slogan can be taken literally in spring. Then, perhaps, is the one time of the year when it can be so taken, for, after thousands or millions of the insects are swarming about, the effect of a swatter or even many hundred swatters are practically nil. In the spring, however, as the first flies crawl forth from their places of hibernation, they can be killed, and thus, the future numbers will be materially reduced.

More important perhaps than killing these first flies, is the destruction or elimination of every possible breeding place. Flies breed in filth. Any accumulation offering moisture alkaline in reaction, retaining some heat, or, through decomposition, actually creating heat, gives them particularly good fields for development. It thus is important that manure be hauled away and properly disposed of, or if accumulations must remain on the premises, that it be thoroughly sprayed with kerosene or borax. Borax is perhaps the better, because it is not combustible, and, therefore is not likely to cause fires and consequent property loss. However, manure is by no means the only substance to attract flies, and rubbish of other sorts should be given equal care. The sweepings from homes, ash accumulations and the rubbish that usually goes with them, must also be disposed of. Combustible material can of course be burned, and this is one of the best ways of destroying not only its bulk but also any fly eggs or larvae that may be lodged in it. In fact, if accumulations are not too great and transportation facilities are difficult to get, burning alone will probably overcome most of the difficulty consequent upon fly breeding in rubbish. By burning even small quantities and starting the new fires always on the remnants of the old fires, fly larvae will be destroyed as fast as they can be developed.

To check the fly evil during the summer every Sioux Cityan should engage in a thorough spring "cleanup" effort that will involve not only his home, including attic and basement, but also the surroundings of his home, including yard and alley. And, above all, the householder should not permit such a "cleanup" effort to result in a general dumping of waste and rubbish onto the vacant property in his neighborhood. Flies will develop quite as readily on vacant property as in your back yard, and, once having developed, they certainly will not devote their attention merely to the vacant property. They will spread through the entire neighborhood, so even though occupied premises may be kept in orderly condition, unoccupied property may be the cause of fly nuisance; and, since this fly nuisance is directly detrimental to the neighborhood, it not only behooves the neighborhood not to be responsible for the accumulation of rubbish on such vacant property, but to actually extend its efforts to the property.

Cleaning up a vacant lot is a comparatively small task and yet may mean a great deal to those whose homes adjoin it. It is, of course, true that the owner is legally responsible, nevertheless the owner is remotely located or owns many properties and may not know of the existing conditions. It is also true that small accumulations too insignificant to be noticed by the owner on a cursory trip to his premises, or, if noticed, too insignificant to be even unsightly, may yet have great significance from the viewpoint of fly breeding. For this reason neighbors can well afford to dispose of waste or at least to build the fires that will destroy their own rubbish, upon such accumulations and thus kill the egg or larva of flies.

Fly Alphabet.

B—Be active in the destruction of the fly.

C—Constant effort destroys the fly.

D—Do not allow breeding places for flies about your home.

E—Every fly that lives over winter becomes a breedery for the early ones.

F—Flies are carriers of disease; beware of them.

G—Garbage cans furnish a prolific breeding place for flies. Keep them covered.

H—House flies are most dangerous to babies. Do not allow one to settle on the baby or its food.

I—Insist that your's and your neighbor's premises are kept clean; then, there will be no flies.

J—July and August are the months in which there is the greatest mortality among children. See that the fly is not responsible.

K—Kill every fly, especially the large ones that are around your premises.

L—Lime, borax, iron sulphate with water are good to kill the fly maggots in all breeding places, especially the manure pile.

M—Manure when left standing in or around the stable or elsewhere makes a prolific breeding place for flies.

N—Ninety per cent of flies breed in horse manure.

O—One winter fly will multiply by September to 5,598,720,000,000, provided none are killed.

P—Permit no fly to settle on your food; it may bring you the typhus or other deadly germs.

Q—Quit allowing dirt or filth around your premises. They are fly breeders.

R—Refuse to buy food that is not protected from flies.

S—Screen all doors and windows so no fly can enter the house. Keep them out of the sick room.

T—The house fly, the typhoid fly, are to be avoided as something deadly.

U—Unless your house and yard are kept clean and free from breeding places, you will have flies.

V—Vigilance in destroying the fly will bring its reward.

W—Watch the fly as he comes from the larvae and walks over the manure piles or other filthy places. Where does he go next?

X—Xterminate the fly by all possible methods known to man.

Y—You are ashamed to have bedbugs in the house; you should be more so to have flies.

Z—Zeal used in swatting the fly will greatly assist in its destruction.

Touchy People.

From the Ohio State Journal.

Beware of touchy people! There are always some about, ready to pester you in some way. Hurry on past, so you can not hear them, and above all, refuse to deny what they say. Just keep sweet and go ahead, and let their unkind words swelter in the gloaming. How much time and patience are wasted on touchy people. And yet such people think they are the salt of the earth and everybody else dirty water. It is a real wickedness to be touchy. It is as bad as lying and cheating. It does the world as much harm. It spoils more religion than swearing. If you find a touchy person in your church, turn him out as soon as possible; if not, he will infect the whole brotherhood and sisterhood with his sin. We knew a touchy person one time whose touchiness struck in on him and he died. We hope all our gentle readers will escape so sorry a fate.

Proved the Theory.

It was a very high-class boarding house, and the landlady prided herself on the fact that the conversation at table was always very intellectual.

"It was a strange theory," she remarked, as she wrestled with the fowl, "that the souls of the dead entered birds and animals. But I think our ancestors held that belief!"

"I'm rather inclined to think something like that does happen," commented the quiet man.

"No, really, Mr. Cutting? How interesting!"

"Yes," said Mr. Cutting. "I'm convinced that this chicken, for instance, is inhabited by the sole of a shoe!"

"Yes," he replied. "I am always carried away by music."

She flew to the piano and played several airs. Then she turned and looked at him.

"Are you not gone yet?"

"No," he answered.

"But you told me that music always carried you away?"

"Yes," he ertorted, "but I said music."

Two Hen Stories.

"I guess, Pat, you haven't as good a hen here as we have in the States," said an American on a holiday in Roscommon.

"I'll tell you," said the Yankee, "about a hen my mother had. She went out one day and ate a feed of corn and returned and laid twelve eggs. She went out the next day and ate a feed of corn and laid twelve more eggs. She went out the third day and returned and laid twelve more eggs. She went out the fourth day and hatched seventy-two chicks out of thirty-two eggs. Now that is the kind of hen we have in the States."

"Well," said Pat. "I'll tell you about a half-blind hen my mother had. She ate a feed of sawdust, thinking it was oatmeal. She went to her nest and laid a plank twelve feet long. Again on the third day she ate more sawdust and laid another twelve-foot plank. She sat on the three planks and hatched three kitchen chairs, a sofa, one table an' a mahogany chest of drawers. Now," said Pat, with a twinkle in his eye, "that is the kind of hen we have in Roscommon."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Kidney & Co.

(BY DR. J. H. WATSON)

The kidneys and the skin work in harmony. They're companions, the skin being the second partner. If we are anxious to keep well and preserve the vitality of the kidneys and, also, free the blood from noxious elements, we must pay special attention to a good action of the skin and to see that the kidneys are flushed so as to eliminate the poisons from the blood.

Sweating, by hard work or in a bath, at least once a week, helps to keep the skin and kidneys in good condition. Flush the kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water with meals and between meals. Occasionally obtain at the drug store Anuric, double strength, which will help flush the kidneys and the intestines. You will find that Anuric is many times more active than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

PER MAN, NOT PER ACRE

We hear much about inreased production and conserving idle lands; much of utilizing back yards and vacant lots, even roadsides and railroad right of way. Added to this will be the annual prize contests for the greatest yields per acre.

They are all good—excellent.

But let us not lose sight of the fact that if this country is to meetand solve the food problem the burning demand will be, not for the maximum production per acre, but for the maximum PER MAN.

It is imperative that every worker in the soil this year use every means possible to make his work count to the utmost in his VOLUME OF PRODUCTION. He should cultivate every possible acre, and in order to increase his capacity he should employ every available implement for reducing man labor while increasing the work done.

This is no time to be dabbling in a garden with a weeding hoe while a tractor and gang plow stand idle.The garden and back yard are available for the aged and the very young and the town business man who has no field to cultivate, but the husky young giant is vitally needed in driving the Big implements of production and making the broad acres bloom and fruitify.

A full yield per acre is essential, but the salvation of this country will depend largely upon BETTER YIELDS and MORE ACRES PER MAN.

Last year millions of acres went uncultivated. This year every acre should be made to produce to the limit of its possibilities. An idle field in 1917 will be a reproach to its owner, and it is hoped there will be not one in this whole community.

If the owner is without means of securing improved machinery in order to increase his acreage and its yield, then the moneyed men and the bankers should come promptly to his aid. The financier is indebted to this country for his wealth, and in the hour of national danger that wealth should be placed unreservedly at the ligitimate disposal of the farmers who must toil early and late that the people may not suffer for bread.

The big implement makers should also come to the front with a rush. If credit is needed, then credit should be extended in order that more acres may be tilled.

Where more form hands are needed they should be drafted from the cities and the towns. If they are unwilling to go and do their share governmental authorities should compel action. Every able bodied man should either fight or work. There is no room for slackers and the public is in no mood to condone them.

The United States does not lack for the MEANS to produce the crops necessary to feed the people in this hour of peril, but those menas MUST BE EMPLOYED or we fail.

UNIQUE CONTEST FOR FARM BOYS AND GIRLS

Thirty Prizes Offer by the Dairy Association

The farm boys and girls of this vicinity between the ages of twelve and twenty years are invited to join a unique contest which will be conducted by the Iowa Dairy Association. They of course will have the same chance as will Oren Leetum, Albert Axelson, William Lloyd, Janet Gelford and fifty other Iowa boys and girls who won pure bred dairy calves valued at $150 each and valuable cash prizes in the contests of 1915 and 1916.

The contest is simple and practical in every way, and is designed to apply to best advantage to the average herd of milk cows on the Iowa farm. Every contestant can discover the unprofitable milk cows in his fathers herd and at the same time locate the ones, that are not only paying their own "board" and that of the poor ones, but also returning a profit. Why not enter this contest boys and girls and surpriso your fathors by getting them thoroughly acquainted with their own cows? It is astonishing how many of us are deceived by the cows we milk every day in the year.

The rules of the contest require that each contestant must keep records on the milk and butter-fat given by there or more cows for three months. It will require only five minutes each day to do the work.The Dairy Association will furnish all of the record blanks, information, etc., required without charge. All questions will be gladly answered and every assistance rendered to make your work successful.

The awarding of prizes will be based on the efforts and reports of the contestants and not upon the production of the cows. Any changes in improving the rations or making the production of milk more economical, will be taken into consideration, but it is realized that the contestants will not have the opportunity to select the cows with which he or she is compelled to work. The basis is as follows: Accuracy, 25 per cent; Number of Cows, 15 per cent; Neatness, 20 per cent; Completeness of Details, 20 per cent; Essay, 20 per cent; Perfect Score, 100 per cent.

The first second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth prizes will be purebred bull calves of the four leading dairy breeds; namely, Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys and Ayrshires. The value of any one of these calves will exceed $75 and in some instances from $100 to $150. Valuable cash prizes will be given to those occupying from ninth to twentieth place and watches to those occupying from twentieth to thirtieth place in the list of contestants. All boys and girls who enter, regardless of their standing will receive a one year's subscription to a leading dairy magazine.

POULTRY FOR PREPAREDNESS

"Increased attention given to the poultry industry will prove one of the country's greatest defenses against food shortage," declare the poultry men at Iowa State College. "Poultry can be kept profitably on proctically every farm and on many town and city lots," they say.They can be more quickly increased than any other important class of farm animals without increased use of valuable foodstuffs for they utilize wastes.

Adding 100 hens to every farm flock would involve no labor and would be a profitable move for every farmer. Then the adoption of better poultry practices with flocks on hand will tremendously increase the coun-eggs twice each day or oftener during the profits of those who adopt them. Early hatched stock will undoubtedly lay more eggs next winter than late hatched, for well matured pullets make the best layers. These eggs will probably bring the highest price ever realized. But good feed and care will do much to overcome the handicap of late hatching.

Poultry parasites are costly guests. To oust the chicken mite, whitewash the poultry house; if necessary apply crude oil to the roosts or a stream of boiling salt water to nests and other fixtures; to rid hens of lice apply to the abdomen and sides of the body under the wings of each mature fowl a pea sized amount of mixture of equal parts blue ointment and vasaline; to treat scaly leg dip legs and toes of fowls in mixture of equal parts sweet oil and kerosene.

A tremendous loss among young chickens can be avoided by following the homely suggestion of keeping them from getting chilled, overheated or crowded and by feeding a palatable lean, well balanced ration in limited quantities only for the first few days. Infertile eggs tested from the incubator or under hens, skim milk and buttermilk are the greatest known preventatives of bowel trouble and insure good, healthy growth.

Better care of eggs produced on Iowa farms to prevent the present preventable annual loss would mean an increase in the nation's egg crop greater than the average yearly production in each of healf the states of the country. "Swat the rooster;" provide plenty of clean nests; gather eggs twice eah day or aftener during warm weather and once a day at other times, keep them in a cool, dry, clean place and market them often without washing, is all good, common sence advice, which will turn the trick.

The enormous cost of the present war, is largely accounted for by the vast quantities of ammunition that are daily being used. According to figures compiled by United States ordnance officers, the material used in constructing torpedoes and the expert workmanship that is required to perfect them brings the cost of firing one torpedo to about $7,000 (A torpedo must be accurate in all parts to 1-5,000 of an inch or it will not work properly) Shells and shrapnel cost about $20 apiece and machine guns eat up ammunition at the rate of about $12 worth a minute Rifle bullets cost 5 cents apiece and pistol cartridges about 2 cents.

In addition to telling you the time of day, your watch may be used for keeping track of the sun. When the orb of day finishes its day's journey and disappears in the west, note the time by your watch. Then draw a horizontal line (imaginary, of course) from the point of the hour hand to the opposite side of the dial. The time indicated by the line on this side will be the time at which the sun rises in the morning Thus if the sun sets at 8 at night, the line shows that it will rise at 4 in the morning, if it sets at 7 it will rise at 5, if at 5 it will rise at 7, and so on.

The liquor imported into Indo-China is consumed almost entirely by Europeans. The decrease in the European population, the closing of many cafes and places of amusement, the prohibition of the sale of absinthe and the closer regulation of the liquor trade caused a decline in the imports of liquor of 25 per cent from the figures of 1914, and of more than 40 per cent from those of 1913. France enjoys a practical monopoly of the liquor trade of this district

PLYMOUTH MAY RAISE NEW GUARD COMPANY

Big Demonstration Given at Kingsley, Where Enlistments Are Numerous.

Kingsley, Ia., April 28—One of the greatest demonstrations of patriotism ever held in Kingsley took place at the Methodist Episcopal church, when over 400 people sat down at the banquet table in the dining room of the church in honor of the volunteers, who recently enlisted in Company K, Second Iowa Infantry. Kingsley enjoys the distinction of having more volunteers than any town of the size in the state. There were 38 boys from here joined Company K and many others are held in the reserve list, owing to the fact that that company was filled to war strength One local boy, Clyde Ricke is now at Ft. Logan, having joined the coast artillery, and two boys, Roy and Max Collins are at present in France, and are seeing service in the big drive now in progress over there. Nearly 4 per cent of the population of the town have responded to the call of the president to defend the flag, and many more are ready to go. There is some talk of the organization of another company in Plymouth county, and should such a course be decided Kingsley is in line for it.

After the banquet the people repaired to the auditorium of the church where a very appropriate program was given by the school children, ministers and citizens of the town and country around. Kingsley and vicinity feel proud of the young men who have stepped forth in defense of the country The program after the banquet was listened to by about 600 people.

BIG PATRIOTIC DEMONSTRATION ATTENDS EVERLY FLAG RAISING

Everly, Ia., April 28—A patriotic demonstration of unusual enthusiasm was staged here in connection with the raising of a large American flag bought by popular subscription. A great procession composed of the new military unit formed here, public school pupils and residents of the town marched through the principal street and formed in circles about the flag pole, 58 feet high, where the ceremony took place. While the band played "The Star Spangled Banner" those assembled stood at attention and as the flag came to rest at the top of the pole and the last note of the anthem sounded the entire company by raising their hands pledged the following oath.

"I pledge allegiance to my flag and the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible with liberty and justice for all"

E P Boyles, P D. Boyles, E W Chase, Thomas J Boyles, H C Clark, H Bryans, W Jacobs, L. C Tusler, Ed Mayon, George Mayon, T F Jones, Frank Wood, T E. Bryans, C A. Lemm, Harry Hupp, A L. Mayhew, I. R. Baker H Fisher, Dr Haverstock, C W. Moeller A T Jones, Dr McGreevy, H C Switzer, Raymond Skalitzky.

The action is brought by Miss Emma Vogel, of Chicago who asserts that Mr Ommen promised to marry her on January 1 1916, and repeatedly renewed this promise The case will be heard in the May term of court, which opens on May 7

"WE ARE STARVING," GERMAN WRITES HARTLEY RELATIVES

Hartley, Ia., April 28—A letter was received here from relatives in Germany just recently that was sent about the time that the relations between the two countries were broken, and it concluded with the suggestion that as this would probably be the last letter that they would receive that they should steam off the stamp and save it as a souvenir This was done, and underneath were the words, "We are starving"

IOWA TO SURPRISE WORLD BY YIELD OF FARM CROPS

LeMars, Ia., April 28 -Provided favorable weather prevails during the growing season, Iowa this year will contribute more than her full quota of vegetables, in the opinion of R. K. Farrar, of the extension department of the Iowa agricultural college, Ames. Mr Farrar, who is spending two days in Plymouth county, said that not only are farmers and town and city dwellers cultivating many more gardens than in ordinary years, but that beginners are entering seriously into their work, and availing themselves of the best advice to be had He told that interest evinced by children in the "Make a Garden" movement, in districts he had recently visited, exceeded the most sanguine expectations.

RIFLE CLUB TO BE FORMED BY CITIZENS OF LEMARS

LeMars, Ia., April 28—Formation of a rifle club, under the national board for the promotion of rifle practice, is under way here, and the organization meeting will probably be held next Wednesday. Authority to organize the club has been received from the assistant secretary of the national board and the state secretary of the National Rifle association. The association is maintained by the war department, but clubs have no connection with the regular army or militia. Rifles and ammunition will be furnished the club by the United States government.

WINS ESSAY CONTEST.

Sac City, Ia., April 28—Harold Huser, of Sac City, is the winner of the state fair essay contest for Sac county, and is entitled to a free trip to the boys' camp at the state fair, according to County Superintendent John R. Slacks, who has just received the report of the judges. D. M. Lamoreaux, jr., also of Sac City, is the alternate.

SHELDON—A call to Rev. Herbert O. Allen, of Osage, has been extended by the Congregational church here.

CLARINDA—The retrial of the case of the state against Guy F. Brent, charged with embezzlement of $5,000 from the Clarinda Trust and Savings bank, was dismissed yesterday and Brent released. Brent turns over to the bank the money and certificates found in his deposit box after his arrest, amounting to $4,145, and waives all rights to sue the bank for damages for malicious prosecution.

CARROLL—John Hungerford, jr., son of J. B. Hungerford, editor of the Carroll Herald, and a student at the University of Iowa, expects to sail from New York on May 8 for France, where he will serve as an ambulance driver on the French front.

GREAT FARM REVIVAL NOW SWEEPING IOWA

Labor Bureaus Being Organized and All Branches of Society Are Helping Out.

Des Moines, Ia., April 28.—Aroused to the need of increasing the nation's food supply as a war measure, Iowa today is responding to the greatest farming campaign in its history Gov. W. L. Harding's special message to the legislature, which immediately appropriated $100,000 to push the campaign, resulted in a commission of farm experts being appointed to lead the movement for increasing and conserving the food yield.

The commission at once announced that labor shortage was the most threatening sign Among the steps it took to mobilize farm labor was a call upon high school boys to work on farms. Farm labor bureaus are to be established throughout the state Churches, schools, commercial bodies and individual business men and manufacturers are being urged to cooperate by encouraging city dwellers to help on farms during rush periods.

Nearly 2,000 vacant lots in Des Moines are being planted under the auspices of a city gardening commission Railroads are considering seeding the soil along their right of way, while counties are taking up the question of cultivating waste places along public highways. The home gardening movement is sweeping the state

Woman suffragists, inspired by a special plea from Governor Harding are planning to mobilize women for farm labor and to engage in canning and preserving on a large scale. The home economics movement with emphasis on using every table scrap and cutting out the garbage waste, has taken on new life

The state commission is planning to send a flying squadron of experts through the state, urging farmers to their utmost efforts as a patriotic duty

Anticipating a long war, the commission called upon farmers to save breeding animals, cut down losses from animal diseases, put in more poultry and more hogs and use better seed

Better marketing systems are to receive the commission's closest attention this summer

CHARGES THAT LIVE STOCK MEASURE WAS "JUGGLED."

Des Moines, Ia., April 28 A charge of "juggling" was brought against certain members of the last legislature for killing the animal antituberculosis bill in a statement prepared for the United Press by J J Gibson, state veterinarian

"It was the most important measure before the Thirty-seventh general assembly from an economical standpoint as well as from the standpoint of public health," said Gibson We are wondering how several members of the house will explain it away when they give their constituents an account of their stewardship

"They juggled it and delayed it until members of the house who wished to see it pass demanded that the agricultural committee get action on the bill"

That the enemies of the bill increased the appropriation it carried in order to make new votes against it and decrease the value of the live stock to be condemned to include "any scrub cow" is making a "farce" out of the measure as the method used to kill the bill" Gibson charged

The senate passed the measure after it received the favorable report of both senate agriculture and senate appropriations committees but it met its death in the house

BIG PATRIOTIC RALLY IS STAGED AT LITTLE ROCK

Little Rock Ia April 26 The citizens of Little Rock and vicinity held a big patriotic mass meeting Monday evening. A 50-foot flag pole was recently erected on one of the main business streets and the meeting was in the nature of a flag raising and dedication of the municipal flag pole

The meeting was one of the first patriotic meetings held in either Osceola or Lyon county since the war, and was attended by about 700 people from Little Rock, Sibley George and Rock Rapids A splendid program was rendered, including music and patriotic addresses by the Rev Mr Glover of Sibley, and the Rev L. C Urlaub, of George Mayor Van Eaton had charge of the exercises

The assembled guests were invited to the Gem theater, where supper was served by the women of the town, and after the supper a patriotic program was carried out So far 10 Little Rock young men have enlisted in the service of Uncle Sam, as follows Johnnie Jakobs, Henry Damgier Egbert DeJonge, Henry Duerloo, George Sinclair, Graydon Vickerman, Irwin Underhill Fritz Eachan, Charley Underhill and William Hatch

Resolutions were passed pledging loyalty to the government and increased food production

LITTLE SIOUX FARMER HELD FOR DESECRATING U. S. FLAG

Council Bluffs Ia., April 28—A J Podendorf, a farmer of near Little Sioux, Ia., was brought here last night by a United States marshal and held for federal authorities on a charge of having torn a United States flag from the lapel of a hired man's coat and stamping upon it It is also charged he made derogatory statements about President Wilson.

2,500 AMES STUDENTS AND GRADUATES SEEK ARMY POSTS

Chicago, April 26.—Twenty-five hundred graduates and students of the Iowa State college of agriculture and mechanical arts, Ames, are candidates for admission to officers' reserve corps training camps, according to Gen. Rush B. Lincoln, commandant of cadets at the institution, who conferred with officers at the central army headquarters today. PLYMOUTH COUNTY ACREAGE OF WHEAT NOT MUCH LARGER

LeMars, April 27 Under extremely favorable conditions the planting of oats and wheat in Plymouth has just been completed according to farmers and field attendants While frequent rains during the last couple of weeks retarded planting it is said that all work was finished well within the time limit and that only 5 per cent of the acreage remained Despite the unfavorable start and for the fact that the acreage will be still bigger than last year it is said that less than the average amount of wheat was planted in the county this spring One reason ascribed for the fact that less acreage was devoted to wheat this year is the extremely high price of seed wheat and the certainty of a favorable yield of that grain as compared to the practically never failing corn crop

MANUAL TRAINING WIDELY TAUGHT IN PLYMOUTH COUNTY

LeMars Ia April 27 A survey just completed by Miss Etna Plath county superintendent of schools discloses that 77 teachers in the 160 rural schools of Plymouth county are teaching cooking and 95 teachers are giving instruction in sewing Boys in 46 of the rural schools receive instruction in manual training Most of the sewing is done in the school buildings while much of the actual cooking is done in the pupils homes Some cooking is done on oil stoves and on the school heaters

100,000 IOWA WOMEN TO JOIN RED CROSS

Twelve Chapters of State Begin Great Drive to Enroll War Time Workers.

Washington, Ia., April 26.—The 12 chapters of the American Red Cross in Iowa are planning a state campaign which, the national officers say, will place Iowa well to the front in the number of its members. In this work the chapter received assistance from George W. Simmons, chairman of the St. Louis committee, which a month ago raised 35,000 new members.

Cedar Rapids recently began a campaign for 3,000 additional members. Other chapters are located at Boone, Burlington, Cedar Falls, Council Bluffs, Clinton, Dubuque, Henry county, Jefferson, Muscatine and Webster county. The total membership is about 15,000.

There are at least 38 cities in the state capable of supporting Red Cross chapters, officers at national headquarters assert. Iowa should have a total membership of from 85,000 to 100,000 members, they assert.

With 100,000 members as a goal, it is understood the 12 Iowa chapters are starting a campaign for increased membership and for the establishment of additional chapters.

The increase in members is not only bringing to the Red Cross funds for its Red Cross humanitarian work (the popular membership fee of $2 including an annual subscription to the illustrated Red Cross magazine), but is adding to the organization tens of thousands of active workers, on whom the war nursing must depend.

In addition to joining the organization, women of the country are rendering assistance in making bandages, comfort kits, sheets, pillow cases, pajamas and other hospital needs.

REMSEN WILL DECIDE RALLY ISSUE AT MEETING TONIGHT.

Remsen Ia April 26 An important meeting will be held by the Remsen Commercial club tonight, when the much mooted question of whether or not to hold a patriotic meeting will be decided

The town council has on two previous occasions disagreed on the question and as a last resort a meeting was called by members of the Commercial club who believe that Remsen should not be backward about doing its share in the matter of war

Whether there will be opposition to the plan of a patriotic meeting in the near future is problematical, but vigorous efforts will be made to carry out the wishes of Governor Harding and military authorities, who have requested all cities and towns to stage rallies.

ARMY LEAGUE HEAD CALLS OFF ROOSEVELT

Washington, D C., April 28 James Leiter, president of the army league, telegraphed Colonel Roosevelt yesterday asking him to desist from his agitation for a volunteer division for service in France, because his attitude was "giving aid and comfort to the enemy in congress."

"I do not believe anyone questions your patriotism or your Americanism in the present crisis," says the message, "yet I regret that in your efforts to put our flag on the firing line at the head of a force of volunteers you are giving aid and comfort to the enemy in congress The opposition to the proposals of universal obligation to train in peace and serve in war are using your offer as an argument against the passage of the administration's bills

"The officers and men who would serve under you in a volunteer force will be needed to train the great army which must be sent to the great battle front I do not believe that anyone can do more to assist the constituted military authorities in solving the problem of securing officers for the large force which we must raise than you In my opinion the war department would gladly accept your services in that capacity."

TEUTONS USE 33 DIVISIONS OF RESERVES

Paris, April 28 Under the caption, 'Why We Attacked,' a writer in the Matin points out that before the present forward movement began, the German plan undoubtedly was to escape from the grasp of the allies. He continues

To frustrate this plan the French and British widened the front of their attack so as to overlap the front on which the Germans were retreating. The result was that the enemy found both his wings involved He decided to fight on the first line and the French plan was altered to suit

"The result of the first and second days' fighting was that the Germans lost fully 100,000 men and what was more important were obliged to engage 33 out of their 43 reserve divisions. The dearly bought, but valuable results of the Aisne and Champagne are thus

"First the enemy was prevented from carrying out his own plan, thus disposing of the famous Hindenburg scheme which was to be followed on the conclusion of the retreat from Noyon second the enemy was obliged to order his troops to hold out on the first line but the whole line has been captured a doubtful success to which must be added heavy losses in men, materia, and guns

Desperate effort of the Germans to drive the British from the captured heights on the Arras front have failed after four days of the bitterest fighting the world has seen since the bloody days of Verdun

Military critics expect the attacks will be renewed if the German man power can stand the awful drain as the retention by General Haig, of the hills crowning the plain of Douai spells almost certain doom to the Wotan line, the last protecting barrier between Douai and Cambrai.

London, April 28 Important positions between Roeux and Gavrelle and near Arras-Cambrai road have been captured by the British, the war office announced today.

Paris April 28 The French have captured several trenches on the heights around Morenvilliers and have also gained ground near Hurtebise and Cerny the war office announced today One hundred and thirty cannons have been captured since April 16.

Gerard Tells of Von Tirpitz Plan To Collect Cost of War From America--Urges Draft

New York, April 28—In an address before the American Newspaper Publishers' association here, James W Gerard, former American ambassador to Germany, declared there would be no revolution in Germany. He said Von Tirpitz openly urged bringing England to her knees with the submarines, seizing her fleet and, going to America, collect the cost of the war from this country. He urged universal military service and severely arraigned Speaker Clark, of the House of Representatives, for supporting the volunteer system

Germany is from 100 to 200 years behind the times in liberty and democracy, Mr Gerard asserted.

"There may be riots there," he said, "but there will be no revolution."

To a certain extent, the former ambassador asserted, the entrance of the United States in the war was due to the misrepresentation of American sentiment in Germany and German sentiment in America by American newspaper men of pro-German sympathies who were stationed in Berlin. He paid high tribute, however, to Seymour B. Conger, of the Associated Press and Carl W Ackerman. They were true Americans, he said.

Worst Enemies in U. S.

"The worst enemies in this country today," Mr Gerard declared, "are the insidious enemies here at home who misrepresent facts"

Mr Gerard arraigned Speaker Champ Clark for his advocacy of the volunteer system He said he had supported Mr Clark in his campaign for the democratic nomination for president in 1912

"But thank heaven," he exclaimed, "some beneficient providence which keeps the American people from putting forward their near statesmen intervened."

To Make War On U. S.

Referring to Germany's military ambitions before the war, Mr Gerard said Admiral von Tirpitz had openly advocated the seizure of the coast of Flanders as a base for operations against England and America. The Von Tirpitz party now is in the ascendancy, he said. Germans of all types, Mr. Gerard explained, advocated bringing England to her knees, seizing her navy and using British warships to operate against the United States, thereby forcing this country to pay all the expenses of the conflict.

He placed emphasis on the Russian situation and asserted that if Russia withdraw from the war, or if it acts ineffectively, the United States will be brought face to face with German autocracy.

Wood Wants To Fight.

Maj Gen. Lenoard Wood, who spoke briefly, said he hoped sooner or later to be serving with General Bridges on the French front.

Maj. Gen. G. T M. Bridges in his speech declared the soldiers of England and France would like to see the stars and stripes flying beside the tricolor and the union jack upon the field of battle.

"The invasion of Belgium, a practically defenseless country, was accompanied as I well know by an orgy of brutality— not casual outbreaks of undisciplined soldiery, for the German army of 1914 was the highest disciplined soldiery in the world--but a policy of organized terrorism, murder and rape, arson and pillage, accompanied by the wanton destruction of priceless monuments of the past, all sanctioned and ordered by the highest authorities The military policy of Germany was that of the Huns of Attila," he said, "and may be summed up thus:

"'I am much stronger and better prepared than you, therefore I am going to murder you and your family and loot your house'

French and British Soldiers Praised.

"I spoke this morning with a great soldier, Field Marshal Joffre. He is a man of whom it may be said that he saved the civilized world at the battle of the Marne I was proud to think that I had the honor of serving under him and that even in those early days of the retreat from Mons we felt confident that his genius would stem the tide of invasion. Now it has turned and French and British soldiers, fighting shoulder to shoulder, are rolling back the enemy and freeing those portions of France and Belgium which he has so ruthlessly devastated.

"There is a fine old military maxim which says, 'When in doubt, march to the sound of the guns,' and it is there upon those fields of battle that we should like to see the manhood of your nation and to see the stars and stripes fly beside the tricolor and the union jack."

PEABODY NAMED FUEL CONTROLLER

Chicago Coal Man Chosen to Rule Distribution of Supply During the War.

Chicago, April 28—The Daily News today says that "unofficial announcement" was made today at headquarters of the national defense council that Francis S. Peabody, prominent Chicago coal man, has been appointed controller of the national fuel supply during the war.

"Any news of my receiving such an appointment must come from Washington," said Mr. Peabody.

CONFERENCE TO END WITHIN 10 DAYS

Then French Commission Members May Visit American Cities—Exchange Views Today.

Washington, D. C., April 28—Conferences between France's war commission to the United States and American officials, on the part this country will play in the war against German autocracy, today were well under way.

Conferences began yesterday will be continued today and it is believed the commission may have concluded its business with the United States government before the middle of next week.

Plans may then be definitely made for its members to visit historic points, including Valley Forge and several cities, including Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago.

The British war commissioners had nothing before them today but the discussion with American officials of details of the immense program of the United States' participation in the war and the next 10 days should see the complete drawing up of plans as to America's part in the conflict.

Ships increasingly appear as the great necessity in the war. It is evident that the German submarine campaign has created a critical situation in France and Italy and also in England, which acts as the relay and supply point for her allies.

"SOLDIER'S HEART" FOUND TO BE A WAR DISEASE

London, April 28—A report by the army medical research committee discusses at length the disease known as "soldier's heart," which has been very prevalent in the British army during the past two years. The report asserts that the ailment "is not true heart disease at all, but is often treated as such," and shows that about 50 per cent of those affected have later returned to duty as the result of a system of physical training.

The report states that "rest in bed is harmful for these cases and should be avoided at all stages of treatment except in instances of severe heart pain, severe headache or giddiness." The ordinary symptoms of "soldier's heart" and breathlessness, pain, exhaustion, giddiness and fainting, with palpitation, lassitude and irritability.

Washington, D. C., April 28—Arguing for the conscription bill today, Senator Kenyon declared he was also in favor of conscription of wealth. He cited that enormous earnings of U S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel and like concerns from war manufactures. He asserted these should be made to contribute heavily and said he would conscript incomes above $100,000.

Senator Sterling spoke this afternoon in the Senate in support of the conscription bill. He favored making the age limits 21 to 35.

FAVORS MODIFIED DRAFT.

Senator Kenyon said he expected to support the bill but wanted exemptions in favor of men of employments of military value changed so that the power of enforcing such exemptions would not be in the hands of military men alone. He approved the La Follette amendment fof civil tribunates to pass upon questions of exemption.

The Iowa senator declared he favored also an amendment which would permit Colonel Roosevelt to go to the front in command of American troops.

"It would be inspiring," he said, "if Colonel Roosevelt could lead a division side by side with the tricolor of France. Nothing would help bring the war to a speedy end as much as that But they say it would demoralize our army It seems to me it would demoralize the army of the enemy more."

Sees Menace In Subs.

Senator McCumber declared that 10,000,000 best trained officers and men would not win the war for the United States if the submarines were not overcome.

"I think it is a fair estimate to say that 750,000 tons of merchant shipping have been destroyed in the last 30 days," said he. "At this rate—and without any question the number of submarines is increasing—how long will Great Britain be able to hold out?

"If by the use of these unseen craft, Great Britain could be eliminated from this war, demoralized Russia would fall in a week, brave France would be crushed, our foreign commerce would be destroyed and stagnation would hold in its grip the populous cities of the country?"

The House resumed debate under a plan to remain in session at least part of the night and to dispose of the bill by 6 p. m. tomorrow if possible.

Chairman Dent closed the argument in favor of the volunteer amendment and Representative Kahn summed up in support of straight out selective conscription.

The House cheered Mr. Kahn loudly when he began. In every war, he said, some Americans had put every obstacle in the way.

"The extreme pacifist always has been with us," he said, "and frequently he hampered the operation.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—The battle over conscription is already as good as ended. Only the pattering of the closing shots of the struggle echoes will be heard today and tomorrow at the capitol. The president will sign the bill, passage of which is assured, next week, and then the way will be cleared for the huge task of the organization of an army of 1,000,000 or more men. It is true the regular army appropriation bill has still to be given the finishing touches and the huge $3,000,000,000 army bill must be passed, but no doubt prevails as to their enactment.

Given Greatest Authority.

The tremendous task of organizing the land forces, equipping them and hammering them into disciplined shape will soon be up to the war department. The department will have the greatest latitude ever given it in an emergency and funds unlimited, and it cannot complain of lack of either congressional or public support. In other words, it is up to Secretary Baker and the army heads, including the general staff, to show they are equal to the huge job imposed on them.

The magnitude of it is scarcely appreciated even by army men. The mere preparation of camps for 1,000,000 men and the plans for transporting, feeding and equipping them and keeping them in health is a work which will call for leadership of great force and imagination. No more blunders in the location of camp sites, such as those which disgraced the war department in 1898, will be patiently tolerated by the public

It is expected that as soon as the conscription bill is passed detailed plans for raising the troops and the location of the camps and division headquarters will be announced. For months to come the whole fabric of the war department organization will work at top speed in gathering war material of every variety, as well as enrolling men in preparation for the actual drilling of the new army. At the same time the filling up of the regulars and national guard and the perfection of their training will command no end of labor and energy.

STRIKERS AT LINCOLN BEATEN, PRESIDENT SAYS

Lincoln, Neb., April 28—President Sharp, of the Lincoln Traction company, declared today that as far as the company was concerned, the street car strike was over. The official asserts that regular service is being furnished on all lines but one and that, night service will be resumed within a short time.

The weather continues to be discouraging to those who want to plant their sugar beets. Eighteen sugar beet drills have come to the Glidden & Wermensen implement house. A part of them have been hauled out but the others are still there. It is time the beets were sown, but continuous rains have kept the lands a sea of mud. Of course, two and even three weeks from now, beets can be planted, but as each seeder is owned by several farmers it will take several days to get the seed in the ground after the rains cease Small grains went in nice and are now coming up. It is not time to plant corn, but that beet proposition is what is worrying the farmers now, as they wanted to get the corn out of the way before tackling the corn planting —Britt Tribune.

Pioneer Is Called Home

It has pleased almighty God in His wise Providence to take out of this world the soul of Fredrick Bock. The deceased was born Oct. 4th, 1846 in Dannstadt, Rhenish Palatinate, Kingdom of Bavaria, in Germany. There too he attended the public schools and after a two years catechetical course was confirmed and received into the Christian Church. In the year 1871 he took as his wife Elisabeth Stahl, who blessed him with 6 children, two of whom were early recalled by their Maker. In 1876, Mr Bock emigrated to this country, and located in our vicinity, two miles east of Klemme, where he has ever since resided In 1880 his wife died, leaving him with 4 small children to mourn. In 1881 he took a second wife in the person of Barbara Schild of Minnesota. This happy union was blessed with 7 children of whom 3 have since been recalled And in 1905 his second wife also was taken from him thru death, leaving him with 8 children.

Mr. Bock was one of the first settlers in this vicinity and he did his share in building up the country. He was one of the charter members of the Reformed church in Ell Town as well as of the Reformed church of Klemme Six weeks ago he was seriously taken ill with diabetes, which was the cause of his death. Friday morning May 4th, at 6 30, he passed into the Gigreat Beyond It thus crowned his age to 70 years and 7 months He is survived and his death mourned by 8 children, 5 sons, and 3 daughters, 1 brother and 21 grandchildren Sunday forenoon, [illegible]. His remains were laid to rest in Calvary cemetery after services in the Reformed church.

Operations to Save Baby

Dr. Fellows reports a very interesting baby operation, and as news of it may be of value in some similar case he has consented to release the story. About five months ago there was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Grafing, near Irvington, a boy with a hare lip and cleft palate. A cleft palate means that the slit in the lip extends back through the jaw and roof of the mouth. About three months ago the child was taken to the University hospital, where it has remained ever since, and during that time it has been the subject of three operations. This is all that can be done now, but he is to be taken back when he is two and a half years old for the final operation which will close the cleft in the roof of the mouth. The Grafings were notified last week to come after him Dr Fellows saw the baby when he attended the University clinic last week, and was told by the doctors and nurses that the little fellow had been the very best of patients. The danger in such cases is that the baby may starve to death. due to inability to nurse. Skilled nurses are required, and they can only be had at such an institution. The legislature has just done a most wise and humane act by providing the funds for a special institution to be located at Iowa City, where all babies born physically defective may be treated and made the subjects of such operations as will make them normal.—Algona Advance.

A New "White Hope"

Tuesday morning when Grant Marie, a newcomer to Goodell, went to the Jake Bachman well after bucket of water, he was attacked by Roy Bachman and severely beaten. Mr Markle's ten year old son had offended Roy in some way the day before and he had gone to Mr. Markle then, the only time they had ever met.

Mr. Markle's nose is broken, one earn torn almost ompletely off and he has a big gash on his throat.

Mr Markle is a son of Mrs. I. E. Ellsworth and has only recently moved here from Otter Tail county Minnesota He is a quiet, inoffensive fellow and no one can seem to give any reasonable excuse for Roy's actions.

A charge of assault with intent to do great bodily injury was filed against Roy and Tuesday afternoon the sheriff and county attorney came down from Garner and he was given a preliminary hearing. He was bound over to the grand jury and was released under $500 bonds.—Goodell Globe.

Women Can Help

What can the women of our town do to help win the war? She can do much—many things. The principal thing she can do, however, is to REDUCE THE COST OF HER OWN TABLE by increasing the production of garden foods at home Every penney's worth of food she raises releases just that much that can be devoted toward feeding some other person who has no place for a garden. In addition to feeding the people of our country, we must supply food for the people of England, France, Russia and Italy, in which countries so many people are fighting that they can not produce enough food to keep their people from starvation. While the head of the family in this town is conducting his business affairs, the wife and young sons and daughters can do much in the garden, and in this crisis it will be a signal honor for them to do so. When you see a woman planting and weeding and caring for her garden you will know that THERE IS A WOMAN WHO HAS PRINCIPLE AS WELL AS PLUCK, and one who places the welfare of her country above the soiling of her hands.

The Kiaser's Prayer

Mein Gott, will you be my partner?
You don't know who I am?
I am the German Kaiser,
The Emperor Will-I-Yam
You know I whipped dem Belgians,
Und mit bullets filled the Russians full.
Und I'll whip old France and Italy,
Und blow up Johnny Bull
Now for all dem other nations
I do not give a dam;
If you just be may partner
Und whip dot Uncle Sam.
You know I got dem submarines,
Und Urope knows it well;
Bot dot Edison's got a patent now
Vot vill blow dem all to hell.
But, Gott, if you refuse me this,
Tomorrow night at eleven
I'll call mighty my Zeppelins out,
Und declare war on Heaven.
I wouldn't ask this of you, Gott,
But it can plainly be seen
Dot when Edison pushes dot button in,
I got me no submarines.—Selected.

The cost of living is becoming intolerable. Upon even the flimsiest excuse prices of foodstuffs are raised, and if no excuse exists they are boosted on general principles. Millions of people who are dependent upon their daily labor find it almost impossible to keep soul and body together. In hundreds of thousands of cases their vitality is slipping away from pure lack of sufficient nourishment. Yet in the very face of this the insatiable food speculators and profit-grabbers are turning the screws tighter every day. There appears to be but one way in which this sucking of the blood of humanity can be stopped, and that is for the government to take prompt action and fix a maximum price at which every article of food is to be sold, and in fixing the maximum the price should be first scheduled down to normal. The fact that a scarcity in foodstuffs exists should not be accepted as an excuse for allowing prices to remain at their present outrageous figures. And the same action should be taken with reference to every article of necessity that we use.

Flies are More Dangerous Than You Think

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But, at least, we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease-carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

LEMARS JAIL BREAK IS FOILED BY WOMAN

Two Prisoners From Sioux City Near Liberty When Found by Sheriff's Wife.

LeMars, Ia., May 5—Her suspicions aroused by the loud and prolonged singing of two prisoners, Mrs. Hugh Maxwell, wife of the county sheriff, frustrated a jail delivery by telephoning her husband, who arrived a few minutes before the men would have stepped through a wall to liberty.

The prisoners implicated are Henry Shields and H. Breigle, both of Sioux City. Shields is being held for trial at the fall term of the district court under a bootlegging charge and Breigle is serving a sentence for vagrancy.

The sheriff's home connects with the jail. It was not until after the prisoners had sung almost continually for two hours that Mrs. Maxwell telephoned her husband. By means of a chisel or wedge which had been fashioned from an iron wagon plate and which had been smuggled to them the men had chopped from a wall in the jail corridor more than a bushel of brick and mortar. Before setting to work with the implement they had lifted back one of the steel plates which line the compartment and which had been loose for some time.

Breigle escaped from jail here last fall after he had served two months of a six months' sentence About three weeks ago he was arrested on complaint that he had stolen an automobile in Sioux City The owner of the machine refused to prosecute and he was held under the old charge.

Secretary Paul C Woods, of the Sheldon Commercial club, this morning received word that action was taken by the state board of education after careful consideration of all facilities which the different towns offered The school will last 12 weeks, through June, July and August, and will bring a large number of teachers here.

CEDAR RAPIDS—One of the unique features of the Coe college May festival—May 21, 22, 23—is to be the opening concert of the series, at which eight different choruses are to unite with the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra in rendering the concert Choruses from Belle Plaine, Williamsburg, Vinton, Monticello, West Liberty, Marion, Cot college vesper choir and choral union are to make up this great chorus.

STORM LAKE—The law firm of Faville & Whitney was dissolved yesterday by mutual consent and each will practice alone The firm has been in existence for 10 years and has been one of the most prominent in this section of the state. The relinquishing of the practice of James DeLand, who has just been appointed to the district bench, led to the dissolution.

AUBURN—Physicians report that there are a number of cases of smallpox south of town The families in which the disease appeared at first thought it was chickenpox and did not take any precautions, but it later developed that the disease is the more serious one and every known case has been strictly quarantined.

ROCK RAPIDS—Thursday, June 7, has been chosen as the date for the dedication of Lyon county's new $110,000 court house, and on this occasion an appropriate program will be carried out by the prominent citizens of our county, under the auspices of the Rock Rapids Commercial club.

IOWA CITY—Capt. Morton C. Mumma has examined and certified to the officers' reserve training camp at Fort Snelling, Minn 169 men Twenty-eight applicants have been rejected Forty-eight examinations are pending and 200 applications have been forwarded to Chicago and not referred back as yet.

COLD, WET WEATHER DELAYING PLANTING

Eleventh District Farmers More Than Week Behind With Spring Work.

LeMars, Ia., May 5.—Cold, wet weather of the last 10 days or so, which has retarded the growth of small grain, will cause a delay in corn planting of from two or three days to a week or more in the Eleventh district. Some small grain is showing above the ground, but none has thrived as it should have done. Kept from the fields by rain and wet ground, none of the farmers in this district are as far advanced with their ploughing as they should have been under normal weather conditions.

Ordinarily corn planting is started here about May 5, or shortly thereafter. Farmers declare that it is doubtful if any corn will be planted here before May 12. Young chickens and pigs are also showing ill effects from the unseasonable atmospheric conditions. It has just been discovered that almost all of the timothy planted in this section was 'winter killed," by extremely cold weather which followed the melting of the snow Many meadows will be plowed up and planted to corn.

FARMERS WORK IN RELAYS PLOWING WITH TRACTORS

Marshalltown, Ia., May 5 —Reports have come from France and England of day and night plowing with tractors, in order to till as much soil as possible in a short length of time, but the first record of this method being adopted in Iowa comes from State Center George and John Nowlan, sons of H D Nowlan, a farmer living three miles west of State Center, are the young farmers who have been working night and day running a tractor and getting their spring plowing done on a 24-hour schedule.

The boys have been using a tractor equipped with automobile headlights. They and their father operate two large farms, and the boys divided the day into two 12-hour shifts George begins working at midnight and works until noon, and John finishes out the 24 hours. They have been averaging 20 acres a day of deep furrow plowing The home farm is divided into large field allowing a straight pull of half a mile with the tractor before turning

WAR SERVICE ASSOCIATION FORMED AT WEBSTER CITY

Webster City, Ia., May 5 The "War Duty Agricultural Association' is being organized in Hamilton county this week, with headquarters in Webster City It is being organized under the extension department of the State college at Ames for the purpose of cooperating with the war emergency food commission of Iowa recently named by Gov W L Harding

The prime purpose of the organization is to enlist every man woman, boy and girl in the county in a movement to increase the food production and conservation of Hamilton county The work is being done under the direction of a central committee of which Murray McMurray, of this city, is the chairman. The other members of the committee are E F Snow H O Cutler, R. E. Jones and George C Tucker In addition to this central committee, there will be district committees of five men in each town in the county outside Webster City. The work will be divided into three departments Canning clubs, acre of corn contests and garden contests

Meetings will be held in every town in the county to explain the work As an incentive, the winner of the acre of corn contest will be sent to the international stock show in Chicago in December In addition to this, it is planned to send the winner in each township to the annual short course in Ames next winter

VERDICT IS SUICIDE IN CASE OF BEACH, N. D., MAN

LeMars, May 5—Evincing no more concern than if he were lying down to rest, Oscar Anto Peterson, of Beach, N D., prostrated himself in front of a speeding train in the Omaha railway yards here last Sunday night, and went to his death, according to testimony given before a coroner's jury this afternoon by the only two men known to have witnessed the fatality The men who saw Peterson die were Charles Gatz, a freight brakeman, and W. R. Wyre, the engineer on the passenger train which killed Peterson. Both men testified that they saw the man walking between the rails ahead of the train They declared that when the engine arrived to within a few yards of him, Peterson threw himself forward, and lay with his head on one of the rails. Peterson had worked for a time with a section crew at Salix. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide. There was nothing to indicate the motive.

103 SAC COUNTY MEN ARE NOW SERVING WITH COLORS

Sac City, Ia., May 5.—Sac county now has 103 men enrolled in the army, navy and national guard, and in every town in the county reports indicate that many now are awaiting a more definite call, will also enter the war forces before conscription becomes effective. Of the 103 now enlisted 62 from this county are enrolled in Company B of Ida Grove, the others being divided between the army and navy. Lake View heads the list of Sac county towns with a total of 31 in the government's service; Sac City is second with 18, Odebolt third with 13, and Schaller fourth with 10. The other towns rank as follows: Auburn, 9; Early, 8; Lytton, 7; Wall Lake, 5; Nemaha, 1; Carnarvon, 1.

CHEROKEE TO CONSTRUCT TWO LARGE NEW BRIDGES

Cherokee, Ia., May 5.—Cherokee will build two permanent bridges within the city limits this summer, both of which will be substantial structures. The Euclid avenue bridge will have a 34-foot roadway, with a six-inch curb, and a six-foot walk on each side, the contract price being $5,344.40. The bridge on East Maple street will have a 40-foot roadway, with six-inch curb and five-foot walk on each side, which is estimated to cost around $5,500. Both bridges will be equipped with electric lights.

IOWA WOMEN ENROLLING FOR SERVICE DURING WAR

Dubuque, Ia., May 5.—Great success is attending the efforts of the Iowa Equal Suffrage association to register the women of the state for war service School teachers, housewives, professional women, college students, high school girls, clerks, stenographers, homekeepers—all that have been able to procure registration cards are manifest—their eagerness to do what they can to serve their country

Enrollment in the divisions of thrift and agriculture is taking the lead.

CHEROKEE BOOSTERS EXTEND THEIR WORK

Commercial Club Now County Community Organization—Seek Summer Normal.

Cherokee, Ia., May 4.—What was the Cherokee Commercial club is now the Cherokee Community club and its work has been broadened to include the whole of Cherokee county This action was taken at a recent meeting and is the result of plans which have been formulating for some time. F. C. Huber, of Larrabee, and W. P Dawson of Aurelia, were speakers at the meeting, both of whom strongly advocated the new plan. The supplying of club rooms and club headquarters was also discussed at the meeting.

The Community club is making an effort to secure the location of a summer normal school at this place. The choice of locations is said to be either Emmetsburg, Sheldon, Cherokee or Spencer

The local board of education has offered the use of the new Wilson high school building, together with its complete equipment, free of cost to the state The Community club has guaranteed to provide boarding and rooming quarters and to meet all the other requirements of the state

There will be two normal schools established this summer one in northwest Iowa and one in southwest Iowa The school will open in June for a session of 12 weeks and it is expected that the enrollment will reach in the neighborhood of 200 or 250 students, the faculty including 11 teachers

FARMERS COMPLAIN OF SMALL LITTERS

Spring Farrows Far From Satisfactory, Ida County Stockmen Say.

Ida Grove, Ia., May 3.—Ida county farmers are complaining about the small number of pigs they are getting from their spring farrow. A. B. Bell, one of the largest hog raisers in the county, reports that out of 30 sows he only got an average of three pigs to the sow. E. W Cubbage, who usually has from 200 to 250 pigs the first day of May, has had 35 sows farrow and has only 100 pigs. The high price of hogs caused many of the big hog raisers to sell their 3-year-old brood sows and the gilts, as a rule, are producing very small litters.

YOUNG IDA GROVE SOLDIER MADE SECOND LIEUTENANT

Ida Grove, Ia., May 3.—George D. King private in Company B, received his appointment as second lieutenant of that organization Vice Second Lieutenant Jepson, of Sioux City, signed it He was appointed to that office while the company was on the border Mr King is a son of Mr. and Mrs G. L. King, of this city, and although only 17 years of age, he made a fine record as a soldier during his service on the border The company now only lacks a very small number of being recruited up to its full war strength eight new members being taken in from three nearby towns last week

MANY WOLF CUBS CAUGHT BY FARMERS IN PLYMOUTH

LeMars, Ia., May 3 —That prairie wolves can thrive on civilization" is indicated by the increasing number of animals being killed in this section.

The claim of some farmers that even with the unexampled prices of foodstuffs taken into consideration there is as much profit in a day's wolf hunt as there is in a day's work on the farm, does not seem far amiss when the cases of U L Tracy, of Perry township, and James Tracy, of Westfield township, are taken into account.

The Tracys are cousins, and they met by chance on a LeMars bound train. FARMERS ARE URGED TO REVIVE SORGHUM INDUSTRY

Ames Ia., May 3 With the price of sugar advancing steadily and in face of the possible shortage the agricultural economic department of Iowa State college is urging farmers of the state to raise more sorghum cane and resume the custom of making sorghum [illegible] A first class substitute for sugar can be made from the product, according to the experts

The practice is especially urged in localities where there are deserted sorghum mills It is estimated that there are several hundred of these old mills throughout the state which were busy years ago when sorghum molasses was in its popularity It served many of the purposes of sugar during the civil war when there was a scarcity of sugar

AMES STUDENTS PETITION EARLY CLOSING ORDERS

Ames Ia May 3 Believing that they can better serve their country by leaving school and entering into some phase of agricultural work, or into some branch of the government service, students of Iowa State college are circulating petitions that they might be allowed to leave school at the present and receive full credit for the entire semester

It is pointed out that similar action has been taken at such institutions as Illinois Missouri and Ohio State college and that Iowa State should not be last in taking such steps, inasmuch as the college is situated in one of the greatest agricultural sections in the country The petitions have been liberally signed by students

IOWA FARMERS HAVE MORE MONEY THAN EVER BEFORE

Des Moines Ia May 3—Iowa farmers this year actually have more money than ever before This is the conclusion drawn by Grant McPherson vice president of the Central State bank In normal years at this time of year banks are lending to farmers every dollar they can scrape up. The demand for money was never so light The high prices that have prevailed the last year explains it This is reflected by the low interest rate and the increase in deposits

Washington, D C., May 3.—Iowa's quota of men to be raised by the draft of 500,000 men is 12,093. In order to bring the regular army to its full quota 1,448 men from Iowa must enlist. These official figures are exclusive of the Iowa guards.

SECRECY VEILS FINDINGS OF RED OAK GRAND JURY

Red Oak, Ia., May 3.—Something has happened to prevent the public from learning what was done by the grand jury which expired by limitation last night Officials, state and county, refuse to talk and the secrecy which has been thrown about the matter increases belief that something big was done which will not permit of publication now.

The report of the grand jury is not accessible and whether or not any indictments were returned cannot be learned A hint was given out that to make public now proceedings of the grand jury would result in a miscarriage of justice. Whether this meant they were waiting for an arrest to be made was not stated.

MANSON PAYS TRIBUTE TO RECRUITS AND VETERANS

Manson, Ia., May 1.—Friday evening the Methodist Social union banquieted and gave a fine patriotic entertainment to the five enlisted recruits yet remaining here, and also to the five remaining civil war veterans. Addresses were delivered by Judge R. A. Horton, Revs Gleason and How. Fifteen enrollments of those enlisted from Manson are in the navy, artillery and ambulance corps.

WILSON FAILS TO SAVE CENSORSHIP SECTION

House Throws Out Attempt to Muzzle Press Sought by the Army, Despite Plea.

Washington, D. C., May 5.—The influence of President Wilson's declaration that the newspaper censorship section of the espionage bill was necessary to the safety of the country failed to save it in the House today and it was stricken from the bill by a vote of 220 to 167.

The vote came after administration leaders had fought hard for the section under a hot fire of attack.

After eliminating the newspaper censorship section the House by a vote of 195 to 183 inserted a new section which makes it necessary to show that publication of phrases of information has been of value to the enemy before penalties of the law can be invoked.

At the same time the Senate, considering the bill and President Wilson's approval of the experimental censorship section was used there.

"A few weeks ago," said Senator Overman, after the House had acted, "it became known that the German agents were sending food, clothing and money and other things to Germany through the agency of the neutrals and the president was forced to ask legislation to stop it."

ITALY SEEKS SAFETY IN UNION OF LATINS

Leaders Say Teutons Would Hesitate to Attack Alliance of 100,000,000 People

Rome, Italy (by mail), April 20.—National jealousies and artistic rivalries which have been noticeable barriers in past years to close cooperation between Italy and France are being forgotten in the stress of the world war and are giving way to a feeling of close unity that may result in a close alliance of the two great Latin countries.

This new condition of affairs was explained before Italy today by a significant article published by the Secolo of Turin. It was headed "Latin Latina" and was written by Senator Romolo Caggese.

"Recent events in Russia, the United States and in Greece have fixed the eyes of the world on the future," Caggese asserts. "One hundred million Germans will occupy central Europe. Several square kilometers of territory stretching across two continents will be peopled by 200,000,000 Slavs. To balance such conditions a large Latin family, holding possessions between the channel and Gibraltar and the Danube and the Yonio must be formed. It must, moreover, be formed at once and solid basis."

Caggese predicts that the world will be "dominated by the law of numbers and racial feelings will become stronger than they have ever been." Otherwise, he says, the results of victory will amount to nothing, and Italy, France and perhaps even will become subject to German rapacity. He predicts that other races would hesitate to fight against a block of 100,000,000 people. He follows with many arguments why France and Italy should ally themselves in alliance.

The newspaper adds that Senator Rome, appointed to be ambassador to the paigning for the cause of the Latin races. Even South American countries, composed of Latin born people, fall into the speculative group.

There is much political significance in the attitude of the newspaper. It often characterizes Rome as the pupil," and Rompolo is a former secretary of state for foreign affairs and was a union of Latin countries.

LEVER URGES BILL TO STOP FOOD ABUSES

Passage of Measure Would Stop Hoarding and Exorbitant Charges, It Is Said

Washington, May 5.—Representative Lever today sought assurance of House leaders that action would be taken next week on his administration bill authorizing the government to exercise broad powers over food production, distribution and prices during the war. A similar bill was ready for presentation to the Senate today and both are supplementary to measures pending in congress providing for a survey of food conditions and looking to prevention of speculation.

Purposes of the new bill, Representative Lever explained, are to stimulate production to reduce waste, to regulate channels of distribution, to prevent hoarding to insure fair prices, to eliminate injurious speculation, to prohibit evil practices and to punish and protect the public against extortion.

Administration officials believe that the measure would have the effect of preventing the evils it seeks to remedy without the exercise of the powers authorized.

JOFFRE AND VIVIANI CHEERED IN CHICAGO

Captain Kidd Outdone By Submarine Crew Who Killed Men and Sank Their Ship

Paris, April 15.—(by mail).—The story of the French schooner "Leontine" is a tale of modern piracy and murder which rivals any of the unauthenticated history of Captain Kidd. Here is what happened on the high seas during the morning of March 25, 1917.

The schooner "Leontine," carrying 280 tons of mine stakes was stopped by shot from a German submarine. The crew of eight, prepared to leave the ship. The submarine was 300 metres away. Her commander and crew watching all that was happening kept up a steady fire deluging the little ship with 40 rounds of shrapnel. The first few shots killed four of the crew and wounded the four others, three seriously. The captain, slightly wounded, carried two of the victims to shelter.

The "Leontine" was now riddled like a sieve but did not sink. The Germans then fired incendiary shells which started a fire in the stern. The blaze however did not spread. Immediately a boat left the submarine, and a party came aboard to sink the "Leontine" with bombs. The boarding party placed their bombs and prepared to leave. On the deck, the firstmate and cabin boy, the latter a child of tender years, fearing the explosions appealed to the enemy. Revolver shots answered their appeals. Aboard the submarine, the crew which crowded its deck applauded this act with laughter and shouts, and steamed to a safer place. The little ship wallowed in the waves and a sudden gust of wind threw her strongly to port, and she capsized immediately.

The survivors, four in number—captain, first mate, cabin boy and a sailor whom the captain aided to hide himself forward, were thrown into the sea. By superhuman efforts they detached one of the "Leontine's" boats and crawled into it.

The boat, battered by shrapnel, capsized. By this time the mate and cabin boy had succumbed to their wounds. The two others crawled atop the capsized boat while the captain, summoning all his strength, appealed by signals to the submarine which lay some distance away watching the show. The submarine then cruised out of sight.

Four hours of intense suffering passed before the survivors were signalled and picked up by a passing ship. They are safely ashore today, recovering.

BERNSTORFF GETS IMPORTANT POST?

Former Ambassador May Succeed Zimmermann in the Hope of Placating America.

Copenhagen, May 5.—Private advices from Germany are that Count von Bernstorff, former minister to America, will be selected to succeed Zimmerman. The appointment would be the idea that Bernstorff might more effectively bring about a reconciliation with the United States.

Hamburg is opposing the German submarine warfare, declaring that it has only succeeded in indemnities being heaped up which Germany may later have to pay, and that Germany's commercial prospects are dwindling.

HOOVER TO DICTATE FOOD OF WORLD SOON

American Will Lay Conditions in Allied and Neutral Nations Before President.

Washington, D. C., May 5.—Herbert C. Hoover, director of Belgian relief and now chairman of the food committee of the Council of National Defense, arrived here today to report on the food situation abroad.

No secret is made of the seriousness of the food shortages in both England and Italy. France is faring somewhat better, but is in need of coal. Mr. Hoover's reports deal also with conditions in the northern European neutral countries and will show how much food must be sent from the United States.

It is understood that after the administration food control bills are passed by congress he may be given wide power in supervising food distribution abroad and perhaps in the United States.

VENIZELOS APPEALS TO HIS COUNTRYMEN

Former Premier Who Broke With King Urges Greeks to Support United States.

Eleutheros Venizelos, former Greek premier and recognized as the strong man of Greece at the present time, has issued an appeal to Greek subjects in America to support America in the war. In a signed statement he says:

"You have expressed the unanimous sentiment of all liberal Greeks in repudiating the king with whom since the tragic events of December the nation has once and for all severed every tie.

"I congratulate you on your resolve to devote all your strength to the noble task undertaken by the United States.

"In your distinguished president's stirring and inspiring declaration, defining America aims in the war, the Star-Spangled Banner has become the symbol of humanity's purest ideal. Devotion to such a cause is henceforth the duty and pride of every free man.

"I am convinced that the Greeks of the United States, imbued with this conception, will succeed in winning the active and highly valued sympathy of the great American nation."—Venizelos.

MORE PAY IN NAVY.

Washington, D. C., May 4.—A $15 increase in the pay of all the enlisted men of the navy during the war, agreed upon by the House navy committee as an amendment to the naval bill, equalizes the enlisted pay of the army and the navy.

THE FRENCH STATEMENT.

Paris, May 4.—Further progress was made by the French last night on the Champagne front, says today's announcement. Yesterday French pilots brought down five German airplanes. A German aviator last night threw several bombs in the region of Dunkirk. There were no casualties and no damage.

DRAFT CONFEREES MEET.

Washington, May 4.—Conferees of the House and Senate, working to reconcile conflicting amendments in the army bill met late today ready to begin consideration of selective conscription. The principal difference is the age limit. The Senate made it 21 to 27 and the House made it 21 to 41.

SWEDEN SENDS ENVOY.

Stockholm, May 4.—(via London)—Hermon Lagercrantz, former Swedish minister to Washington, has left Stockholm for the United States as special envoy. His appointment is the consequence of the feeling in Sweden that the United States may place an embargo on exports from this country.

1,000,000 CHILDREN FROM CITIES WORK FARMS IN GERMANY THIS SUMMER

Berlin (via London), May 5.—It is officially announced that 1,000,000 city children will be placed on farms this summer by the government. Fifty pfennigs daily will be paid for each child except in east Prussia, where the farmers who suffered from the Russian invasion have refused to pay.

14 MEN THOUGHT DEAD AND BOAT ARE FOUND

British Steamer Picks Up Members of Crew and Gunners on Rockingham.

London, May 5.—The admiralty reports that the missing boat from the Rockingham, with all the 14 men, has been picked up by a British steamer.

"The Rockingham victims are only two, namely, Second Engineer Harry Margey and Oiler William Wann, who were both killed in the engine room by the explosion of the torpedo," Captain Edwards, the commander said today. "We were hit at 2 p. m., on Tuesday, 150 miles from land.

"I was on the bridge at the time. I noted through the haze two specks on the horizon, one on the port bow and the other on the starboard bow. The gunners immediately trained their guns, but the visibility was so bad it was impossible to see whether they were submarines or small patrol boats.

"Both the specks disappeared. Then we knew they were submarines. We were already steering a zig-zag course and the gunners were ready to fire. Suddenly there came a terrific explosion the results of which made it impossible to handle the guns.

"The ship sank quickly by the stern, going down in less than 20 minutes. One of our lifeboats was shattered. The other three were launched safely."

GUNS USED ON STRIKERS

Amsterdam, May 5.—The Maasbode of Maestricht says that serious revolts occurred in Berlin last week. According to the paper the mob became so menacing that machine guns were used against it.

PEACE SPEECH WILL BE DELIVERED EARLY

German Chancellor Will Speak on Foreign Situation, It Is Reported.

Copenhagen, May 5.—(via London)—Parliamentary correspondence in the Hamburg Fremdenblatt confirms the report that the German imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, is to speak at an early date in the reichstag on the foreign situation, with particular reference to the peace question.

The chancellor's renewed appearance in the reichstag, so soon after his recent speech on foreign affairs, is due to the insistent demand of the members of the reichstag for more information.

PLURAL FRANCHISE BASIS FOR PRUSSIA GIVEN UP

Copenhagen, May 4.—(via London)—The Cologne Gazette, says that the idea of a plural franchise as a basis for Prussian electoral reform, has been dropped on account of insuperable difficulties. The paper says that the government has apparently in mind now a project for universal, equal, secret and direct suffrage and will oppose an amendment giving an additional vote to electors of a certain age.

SUBS DIVE; TORPEDO SHIP AS GUNS WAIT

Liverpool, May 4.—Captain Edwards, of the American steamer Rockingham, said he had no doubt that the 14 occupants of the missing Rockingham life boat would be safely landed as the weather had been excellent. This boat contained Third Officer McKenny and 13 American gunners.

Captain Edwards said that the submarines dived almost as soon as they were observed and that the ship was torpedoed a few minutes later while the guns were trained on the spot where the periscopes were expected to reappear.

CANADA AND U. S. TO CUT WHEAT PRICE

Minister of Finance Says Joint Action Is Being Planned Against High Cost.

Ottawa, May 5.—Announcement has been made in parliament by Sir Thomas White, the minister of finance, that plans are under way for joint action by Canada and the United States to reduce the price of wheat.

NESTS OF SUBS INFEST SEA LANES IN ATLANTIC

London, May 5.—American citizens landed during the last few days from vessels sunk by German submarines tell remarkable tales of the strenuous exploits of the U-boats. In one case three undersea boats appeared simultaneously along side the ship, one being a submarine cruiser 300 feet long and the others, old fashioned submarines with a length of about 120 feet.

In another case a German submarine wore an elaborate disguise of a fishing boat. In at least two cases the crews of vessels sunk by submarines were rescued from open boats by a passing ship only to suffer a repetition of the disaster, when the ship on which they had taken refuge fell prey to an under water boat.

The captain of an American sailing ship, which sunk 10 days ago said: "Submarines are lying along the sea lanes in regular nests."

VILLA WITHIN 50 MILES OF AMERICAN BORDER

El Paso, Tex., May 5.—Francisco Villa, with his main command, is believed by American secret agents to be within 50 miles of the American border southeast of Juarez. Reports received here from the border said a large Villa command had been seen on the Calderon ranch, 50 miles southwest of Fabens, Tex., and an equal distance from Juarez. Villa himself is believed to command this body of troops.

GIRL STUDENT HURT.

Norfolk, May 5.—Daisy Davenport, a high school junior, was run over last evening by a jitney, and seriously injured, when she was returning home from rehearsing a play to be given Monday night. Her clothing was badly torn, her lambs bruised and several stitches had to be taken in her face. Doctors say internal injuries are not apt to develop.

ROCHAMBEAU ESCAPES SUB.

Paris, May 5.—The French liner Rochambeau, which recently arrived at a French port, narrowly escaped a torpedo fired by a German submarine, according to the passengers today. The torpedo was seen to pass not 10 yards away. The liner immediately fired a dozen shells. Only the liner's speed saved her.

WAR CONFERENCE ENDS.

London, May 5.—The imperial war conference, which has been in session for several weeks, and has been attended by eminent representatives from all parts of the empire except Australia, is nearing the end of its labors.

The secretary of state for colonies, Walter Hume Long, says that home matters dealt with are of a confidential character, and it probably will not be possible to publish them until the end of the war.

NATIONAL RESERVE PLANNED.

Washington, D. C., May 5.—Plans for a great national service reserve made up of men not subject to draft into the army and of women, already approved by the war department, were submitted to the council of national defense at a conference of the council with state governors and representatives of state defense councils.

Members of the reserve would be available for any service they could perform for the government.

ZAIMIS TO FORM CABINET.

London, May 5.—Alexander Zaimis has accepted the task of forming a new Greek cabinet, says a Reuter dispatch from Athens.

Alexander Zaimis, a former premier of Greece, recently was reported to have promised the British minister in Athens to form a ministery acceptable to the British and French governments on condition that the blockade of Greece should be lifted. He is said to be loyal to the king.

ENGINEERS TO RUSSIA.

Washington, D. C., May 5.—In addition to the political and economic commission, which President Wilson will send to Russia, a special commission of eminent railroad engineers will be sent immediately to help reconstruct that nation's transportation system. It will be made up of four men including John F. Stephens, one of the principal engineers employed on the Panama canal.

GERMANS RETREATING FORCE.

London, May 4.—Addressing the Primrose league in London, Earl Curzon, of Kedleston, member of the war council, said there was no military front in the world-wide war where at the present moment the enemy was not a retreating force.

J. R. WOOD DIES.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 4.—James R. Wood, former passenger traffic manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad company and one of the most widely known railway executives in the country, is dead at Atlantic City.

DANTAS SUCCEEDS MULLER.

Rio Janerio, May 4.—Dr. L. Martins De Souza Dantas, under secretary of state, has been appointed to succeed Dr. Lauro Muller, as foreign minister. Dr. Souza De Dantas was formerly minister to Argentina.

TURKS TO KILL JEWS.

London, May 4.—According to the Jewish Chronicle the Turkish governor of Palestine has publicly proclaimed the intention of the authorities mercilessly to destroy the Jewish population.

ASKS IRISH HOME RULE.

Albany, N. Y., May 4.—The assembly unanimously adopted a resolution favoring the extension of home rule to Ireland.

PLANS VAST MOBILIZATION.

Washington, D. C., May 4.—In announcing that department of labor employment agencies throughout the country had registered 15,000 skilled shipbuilders for work on the great wooden merchant fleet, Secretary Wilson said this achievement was "only a minor step in the nation wide mobilization of labor."

U. S. TO BUY UP SUPPLIES FOR ALLIES

Washington Succeeds New York as Money Capital of War as Nation Supplants Morgan & Co.

COMPLETE PLANS SATURDAY

Bank of England and Bank of France Will Become Branches of United States Reserve Bank.

New York, May 5.—Washington is replacing Wall street as the world's financial power today. Several reserve banks are taking charge of the $2,000,000,000 loan.

J. P. Morgan & Co. will no longer be the allies' representative for loans. The United States government is succeeding to the job. The United States government has become both purchasing agent and controller of allied loans and is the capital of the money of the earth as well as the world war.

William McAdoo was in New York today for a conference with bankers to cooperate with the federal reserve board and the loan board.

Washington, D. C., May 4.—Linking of the American and British governments in direct and permanent financial relationship, a step deemed desirable in view of American loans to the allies, probably will be accomplished this week by the formal appointment of the Bank of England as correspondent of the federal reserve bank of New York.

Appointment of the Bank of France in a similar capacity is expected to follow.

ARMY BASE HOSPITALS GO TO EUROPE SOON

Medical Branch Will Be First Section of U. S. Forces to See Action.

Washington, May 5.—Definite plans have been completed for sending United States army base hospitals to the fighting front in France. The number of the units, the time of their departure, the means of their transportation and their exact destination cannot, for obvious reasons, be disclosed.

The sending of the American hospital units is in accord with the plan to increase hospital facilities behind the front and reduce the number of hospital ships which have become special targets for German submarines.

Despite protests of the Red Cross, ruthless destruction of ships bearing wounded soldiers, including Germans, continues. Since Germany declines to hear the protests of civilization the only course open to the allies is to reduce the opportunity for violation of humanity's laws.

Other American hospital units probably will be sent from time to time.

BRITISH MISSION TALKS WITH HOUSE COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C., May 4.—The British mission today began wider and more public conferences with American officials. Rear Admiral Sir Dudley R. S. De Chair conferred with the House naval committee, and Foreign Secretary Balfour conferred with the Council of National Defense.

Mr. Balfour, after a visit to Secretary Lansing, went to a joint meeting of British embassy and mission members which took up shipping, food and munitions.

URGES AUSTRIANS TO HONOR ADOPTED LAND

Tarnow, Never Received by U. S., Sails for Home After Parting Advice.

New York, May 5.—Count Adam Tarnowski von Tarnow, the unreceived Austrian minister to the United States, before sailing today for his home land, issued farewell greetings to his countrymen here and advice to "honor the land whose hospitality they enjoy and in which they earn their livelihood."

RUSS TROOPS TAKE OATH TO SUPPORT NEW RULE

Saloniki, May 4.—All the Russian troops on the Balkan front have now taken the oath of allegiance to the new Russian government. Russian soldiers in the vicinity of Saloniki were marshaled on a parade ground for the ceremony of swearing allegiance to the provisional authority.

Not a dissenting voice was raised.

The general in command explained that in future the men must not address him as "excellency," but simply as "general."

"Yes, your excellency," replied all the men in chorus.

DARLING GOES TO RUSSIA.

Washington, D. C., May 4.—H. J. Darling, a western railroad man, will go to Russia as a member of the special railroad commission selected by the council of national defense. Howard Elliott, former chairman of the New Haven road, may be the railroad member of the political and economic commission to be sent by President Wilson.

ARGENTINA SATISFIED.

Buenos Aires, May 4.—The newspapers, commenting on the German note expressing regret for the sinking of the Argentina ship Monte Protegido and the promise to make reparation, describe the solution or the trouble as a triumph for the Argentina government. Public opinion generally appears to be satisfied with the amends offered by Germany.

WILL HUNGER COME?

We may put it down as a self evident fact that if the people of this country persist, during the coming year, in living on the same extravagant scale of former years, we as a nation will strike the rocks.

Experts in the agricultural department have estimated that the actual waste of food in the United States is $700,000,000 annually. This is in addition to the enormous consumption in excess of what is really needed to support life comfortably.

The International Institute of Agriculture sends this solemn warning from Rome: "The world's food crop is deficient and the situation is becoming alarming."

Now we are doing much talking as to the duty of raising bumper crops of increasing our production in every way possible, which is perfectly right But more than this is needed. We must act as well as talk

Heretofore the United States has always had a safe surplus of foodstuffs from one harvest when the next was garnered. This very fact possibly, has had more to do with fostering our extravagance than anything else. We have felt that our resources were boundless and that we could never come to want

Now, however, that surplus has vanished, and in its place we have only gold, the most useless commodity in the world unless it can be exchanged for that which we need. And at last we must wake up and face the fact that we are up against a food shortage, and gold can not buy food where no food exists.

The solution of the food problem is up to every man, woman and child in the country. It is useless to mince words for fear of hurting some one's feelings— EXTRAVAGANCE AND WASTE MUST CEASE. It is useless to undertake to solace ourselves with the prospect of a large increase in production. ALL must exert themselves to PRODUCE, and ALL must exert themselves to SAVE.

You, our farmer friend, because you have plenty and are raising plenty more, have NO RIGHT to waste that plenty or to throw it away in needless extravagance. Others will NEED it, and it is their RIGHT they should be able to get it

You, Mr. Rich Man, just because you have plenty of money to pay for it, have NO RIGHT to waste that which OTHERS NEED, and of which your extravagance will deprive them

Let us not be deceived It is up to each one—rich, poor, high or low—to conserve the food supply. Food waste this year will be nothing less than a CRIME, and should be so recognized and treated.

A few months ago, when gold was flowing into our coffers, in yellow streams, we strutted and boasted of our boundless wealth. We compared ourselves to Midas—that everything we touched turned to gold And now we are in grave danger of finding ourselves in this predicament—our gold useless because we can not eat it.

Economy in any line is praisworthy but economy in food products just now is the highest type of patriotism, and the most disloyal of all is the man or woman who wilfully wastes the nation's food.

WHY NO SURPLUS OF FOOD PRODUCTS

It has been a good many years since the United States carried over a large surplus of wheat, corn or other foodstuffs from one year to another This is not because the country is producing less than formerly, but because of the trmendous increase of population and the fact that a much larger proportion of the people live in towns and cities than was the case twenty or more years ago. They have joined the ranks of what we are pleased to term "consumers," rather than producers.

In the last fifteen years the population of the United Staes has increased no less than 20,000,000 [illegible] teen years ago the total yeild [illegible] in the country was 2,523,648,000 bushels; last year it was 2,582,241,000. Only once in the fifteen-year period did the yield reach the three-billion mark and that was in 1912.

The number of cattle in the United States in 1916 was estimated at 61,920,000; in 1902, fifteen years ago, the number was 61,424,500. There have been ups and downs since that date but the average has been near the figures quoted—while the population has been growing at the rate of more than one million a year.

Mutton also shows a decided shrinkage. In 1902 there were 62,039,000 sheep in the country; last year only 48,625,000 were reported, a decrease of 13,000,000. Hogs alone, of all the meat animals, show a marked increase in number, although not quite in harmony with the growth of population.

SWAT THE NEWSPAPERS

During the past week the Reporter, and we take it that every other country weekly, has received matter sufficient to more than fill every available column in the paper. This matter pertains to advice and other matters that intend to stir up the patriotism of the people. Now it is all right and the Reporter believes in being patriotic, but newspapers have their living to earn and they must earn it from their papers or go out of business. We do not know why, but beginning with the city then going to county, state and nation, the average man that is placed in positions of legislation wants to hit the newspapers a rap by adopting all kinds of adverse legislation to the interests of a newspaper they possibly can. Everything that costs a cent by printing in a newspaper is cut out, and every one of these fellows are always great on practicing economy when it comes to a matter pertaining to their own financial interests. Why should men who have the matter in charge, insist that the law must say must instead of may in the publications of really needful things for the knowledge of the people in order that they may act intelligently Yet they all do it In March we sat in the House of Representatives in Des Moines and a member wanted what he said was important matter passed upon. It was absolutely necessary for the interests of his district and he wanted the law to become effective as soon as possible Another member arose and moved that a publication clause be attached to it so that it could go into effect as soon as published. The fellow that had the measure was willing, providing that the newspaper hired a man at five dollars per day to run a linotype to set it up on, a machine that cost him from $3000 to $5000, and then disseminate it through a circulation that cost his newspaper plant several thousand dollars more to build up In other words he wanted the help and the use of a ten thousand dollar plant for nothing That same fellow wanted the newspapers to publish all board proceedings for the benefit of the people free of charge Yet we venture that that same man would kick like a bay steer if a proposition was made for a farmer to furnish certain amount of food from his farm for people who had to be kept by the county, instead of raising the money to pay for this food by a general tax Swat the newspapers is the policy of the general state and city governments, and yet in times of emergencies like the present, they ask the newspapers to expend thousands of dollars in disseminating matter for the enlightenment of the public The newspapers are just foolish enough to fall all over themselves in doing it—Palo Alto Reporter.

Former Senator W. B. Seeley of Mount Pleasant offers prizes amounting to $100 in cash to stimulate food production and conservation in that vicinity.

Mr. Quinn of Pocahontas found seven small wolves in a straw stack on his farm west of town. The mother wolf was not caught, but has been seen several times.

More garden lots have been offered by the people of Iowa City to the Commercial club than men can be found to cultivate, according to the report of Chairman B. Shimek.

A signal reserve corps company has been organized among the telephone and telegraph men of Des Moines under the direction of Captain Frith, supervising officer of the regular army.

Under Iowa's bone dry law police records were shattered. Not a single drunk was arrested for seven days, in Waterloo, a record unapproachable since the place was a mere village in the early days.

Two thousand five hundred dollars was raised by popular subscription for the American ambulance field service in France at the close of a lecture by Lieutenant Roeder, given at a Des Moines church recently.

At the big sale of Hereford cattle held recently at the farm of G. A. Tow, near Norway, one hundred and fifty-six head of stock sold for a total of $135,000, an average of $365 a head. More than a thousand buyers attended the sale.

Humboldt is making a strong food growing campaign for the coming season. County Agent Noble has established a labor bureau to find and distribute farm hands, which at present are very scarce at wages from fifty to sixty dollars per month.

Oscar Anton, 45 years old, was run over and kiled by a midnight train on the St. Paul road at Le Mars. His body was found half a mile north of the union depot. It is not known whether he met foul play but the supposition is that he was a suicide.

Marion Stevens, of Blockton, a member of the Iowa National guard, stationed at Des Moines, went home to see his parents before he was called to war. When he returned to Des Moines he brought 12 recruits back with him to join the regular army.

Dr. Irving L. King of the faculty of the Iowa University has discovered that about one half of the girls of the school have left shoulders higher than the right and that out of the 600 taking gymnasium work 121 have spinal curvature and 172 have broken arches.

Farmers near Westfield in Plymouth county are agitating the formation of a drainage district in Westfield township. Hundreds of acres are annually flooded in that locality and rendered untillable at the proper season or at least too late to derive profit from the immense acreage.

J. Wilfred Fletcher and his father, Rev. Dr. Fletcher have volunteered their services to their country. The son has enlisted in the cavalry and has been sent to Ft. Logan, Colo., for training and the father has offered his services as an army chaplain and may be called at any time.

Farmers have put in small fields of wheat, though ordinarily none is grown, to make up for the reduced acreage in winter wheat because of unfavorable conditions at seeding time last fall. More barley than usual has been seeded and a large acreage of oats. Seed corn is germinating unusually well.

Mrs. Julia M. Ely has four sons in the service of Uncle Sam. The first is a major in the regulars, the second is a captain and another is organizing a company of volunteers at Davenport. Her grandson is taking the examination to enter West Point. She says that she is proud that her sons can be of service to their country.

The war with Germany promises to stimulate plans for Memorial day throughout the country. At the Iowa Soldiers' home at Marshalltown, plans more elaborate than usual for the celebration are already being perfected. The school children are to take an important part including 200 or more members of the high school military companies.

Through correspondence with county crop agents and others, J. C. Nietzel in charge of the state free employment bureau, has secured a list of farmers in several of the counties of the state who want help. The wages offered for farm help are from $25 to $45 per month and in some instances as much as $50 per month. Board, room and washing are included.

At its recent meeting the Cherokee Westminster Circle decided to do their share in helping conserve the food supply of the nation, when they adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, That we, as patriotic women taking heed of the president's recent proclamation urging housewives to conserve the food supply of the nation, do hereby agree that we will serve only the simplest of refreshments at our meetings."

Plowing and seeding is pretty well along in the vicinity of Postville, although the cool nights are not very promising for planting. A prominent farmer said good weather for corn planting ought to materialize in a few weeks now. Corn needs warm weather at planting time. But a lot of seed potatoes are being shipped into different parts of the county, although many prefer the home grown seed for planting.

Five high school boys of Dunlap have gone to war. School closed and the town gave them a rousing send off.

Farmers at Riverton report that wheat is dead. Most of them are plowing up their fields and will replant them with corn.

Traer is making gardens on every spot available. Four business men have rented fifteen acres near town and are raising truck on it.

Anita has another championship record to its credit. Sixteen young men of that town drove to Des Moines recently and enlisted in the navy.

Active participation in a thrift and conservation campaign has been started by the Waterloo Equal Suffrage association. Elimination of food waste is the aim.

The Des Moines office of the United States Weather bureau and crop service station is starting the work of taking a seed and crop census of the state, with a view to equalizing the distribution of seed.

The men of Oskaloosa voted down the proposition to issue bonds for $45,000 for the new high school building at the recent election there. The women cast a majority of their votes in favor of the proposition.

Small grain is almost all planted now in the vicinity of Decorah. The weather promises a big grass crop. There is more oats and wheat planted than usually, but less barley.

J. A. Isakson of Alta sold 2,500 bushels of corn to an Alta elevator man for $3,250, the highest price ever paid in that section. There is little produce in the country, the bins being emptied because of high prices.

The farmers in the vicinity of Marshalltown are busy plowing up ground that had been in winter wheat and getting it ready for corn. Most of the winter wheat in that part of the state was killed by the cold weather.

Four commissioned officers of the university of Iowa battalion have been successful, according to communications from the United States war department, in passing examinations and commissions will be granted them soon.

Alta was invaded by a gang of twenty-five New Orleans negroes who had been shipped north by the Illinois Central railroad for special track work and who had struck because they alleged they were promised $1.90 per day and were paid $1.75.

A serious epidemic of meningitis is prevalent in Waterloo and Dr. Mark F. Boyd of the state university bacteriological laboratories has been summoned to investigate the trouble. Water supplies and other sources of infection will be closely examined.

A preparedness demonstration in chemistry was given by the advanced students in that subject at Grinnell recently. The making of gun powder, chlorine, and bromine, the deadly trench gases and other materials of a military nature was demonstrated.

More than 400 boys and girls have joined the garden clubs in the city schools of Iowa City—organized by Superintendent L. F. Meade. They are eager to help solve the food problem and much good work is expected from the youngsters during the next few months.

At the meeting held regarding the building of an armory and getting a military company for Newton, committees were appointed to take charge of the affair. The armory is assured and plenty of stock will be sold to build at least a $20,000 building.

Albert City is enjoying a building boom this spring. A fine block 50x100 feet, is to be used for a hardware and furniture store is being put up by E. E. Danielson and O. N. Nelson. A new garage of brick is to be built. Several new residences are also under construction.

Pure blooded Aberdeen-Angus cattle sold for record prices at the P. J. Donohue sale near Holbrook recently. The prices on cows ranged from $200 to $1300 and on bulls from $900 to $1500. Cattle buyers from Canada, South America and every section of the United States were present.

Harrison county has caught the fever of patriotism and a national guard company is being organized at Logan. A big mass meeting was held recently and Speaker M. B. Pitt of the Iowa house of representatives was one of the principal speakers and has volunteered as a private in the company.

Practically every relative of Prof. S. B. Kuzirian of the chemical department of the Iowa state college at Ames was killed by the Turks according to an official report received by the professor, from his home in Husenik, Armenia. One of his cousins escaped death by being abducted into a Turkish harem.

Women will "man" street cars in the Tri-Cities as motormen and possibly conductors unless there is an improvement in the local labor situation, according to reports from Davenport. This is the statement coming from officials of the Tri-City Railway & Light Co. and officials of the United Light & Railway Co.

While many raw recruits are learning nowadays how to right face and shoulder arms, cadets of the state university, part of whom are finishing two years of military drill and the rest are finishing a year's work, are practicing skirmishing, trench digging, marches and other advanced phases of the service of a soldier.

Mayors and the owners of elevators all over the state have been urged to take extra precautions to prevent attempted destruction of elevators and grain stores by fire. Clyde E. Roe state fire marshall has sent out letters warning them of the experience of others and declares that he is suspicious of the origin of many of the recent fires.

BROKEN DOWN IN HEALTH

Woman Tells How $5 Worth of Pinkham's Compound Made Her Well.

Lima, Ohio.—"I was all broken down in health from a displacement. One of my lady friends came to see me and she advised me to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I began taking your remedies and took $5.00 worth and in two months was a well woman after three doctors said I never would stand up straight again. I was a midwife for seven years and I recommended the Vegetable Compound to every woman to take before birth and afterwards, and they all got along so nicely that it surely is a godsend to suffering women. If women wish to write to me I will be delighted to answer them." —Mrs. JENNIE MOYER 342 E. North St., Lima, Ohio.

Women who suffer from displacements, weakness, irregularities, nervousness, backache, or bearing-down pains, need the tonic properties of the roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Arras Before the War.

Tapestries are no longer woven in Arras, but the city was a thriving industrial community at the outbreak of the war. Its chief articles of manufacture being hosiery, ironware, oil products, beet sugar and agricultural implements.

In the Petit place and the Grand place Arras boasts some curious old architecture, dating of the period of Spanish occupation in the seventeenth century. Houses of brown stone whose upper stories project beyond the foundation walls and are supported by pillars which form arcades over the sidewalks. Beneath the streets are huge cellars or catacombs which were originally quarries. The Hotel de Ville is a fine existing sixteenth century building with a belfry 245 feet high in which hangs a great nine-ton bell called Joyeuse.

Not So.

"Oh, see!" exclaimed little Marie. She had been rummaging through a drawer in the parlor table. "Here's a funny old key this is."

"Yes," replied her grandmother. "That was your grandfather's key to the—"

"Why, I thought it was to the old day."

"No, dear. It was to the old mystery."

True, True!

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK

CHAPTER XXII (Continued).

"Who financed your campaign? Who sent you to the Senate? Who owns your senatorship now?" He laughed again. "Who told you to forbid John Smith this house? Who ordered you to do it?"

The senator moistened his lips with his tongue.

"Young man," he said, attempting the insolent tone, "you are crazy, insane!"

Waller laughed again.

"Don't say that to me," he commanded. "I tell you I've got the goods on you. Whiffen Mcnearoyd did the work—the great and sublime Whiffen McNearoyd! You and he made the political bargains after you and Whiffen, and Silas Unterby, and Horace Gardon, and Larry Demonet held the conference that saved you from bankruptcy. If you want more, I'll give it to you, the details—Silas Unterby, the distiller; Horace Gardon, the bottler; Larry Demonet, another distiller, and Whiffen—oh, the sweet scented Whiffen — their jack-of-all-trades in crooked work — Whiffen, the man who could buy a vote or steal a legislature as remorselessly and as quickly as he could starve a child or send a widow into the street!"

Mallon protested:

"Nothing but a string of names! It's all gibberish and stuff!"

"Oh, you big four-flush!" he said harshly. "You hypocrite — blood sucker in the dark—sinner in secret places—drinker of vile waters—eater of unclean food! Owned, body and soul, by the whisky trust! People throw up their hands in holy horror and ask how whisky keeps itself intrenched. You're the answer to that. They do it through men, through things, like you. They go out into the state and buy you, buy you where they please, buy you like cattle on the hoof, and then they pack you up and keep you in cold storage until they need you, until they dress you up in the clownish costume of a would-be statesman and send you to Washington! They buy you and use you, use you until you haven't a backbone left! Bah! You, you—old man Mallon—are the worst of all of them. You cap them all. You strike against your daughter's happiness when they call! A senator, a statesman! That's enough to make the gods laugh!"

The senator started to rise, but Waller thrust him back into the chair.

"Now listen to me!" The young man's tone was matter-of-fact, cold as steel. "From now on, your attitude toward the relations—whatever those relations may be—between your daughter and Mr. John Smith undergoes a complete reversal of form."

It was evident that Mallon saw the futility of resistance.

"What do you ask?" he inquired, his voice shaky.

"I'm not asking anything," Waller replied. "I am telling you things. Some day, when I have the time, I may print a list of the members of congress polluted by this whisky ownership. But, for the present, I merely tell you that you are to cease interfering with John Smith. And today you will give out no denial of this reported engagement. Does that go?"

"Oh," Mallon evaded, "I don't want any argument here about—"

"The society reporters, Miss Whiting and Miss Hubbard," announced Wales, holding aside the hangings to admit the two women.

At the same moment Edith and Mrs. Kane entered through the music room door. Smith turned to speak to them.

"Step into the music room, Mr. Smith. We can't have a scene here," Mrs. Kane suggested quickly.

Smith, without a moment's hesitation, followed her advice. He made his exit without having been seen by the reporters.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Miss Whiting and Miss Hubbard made what might have been termed a breezy entrance—this, in spite of their physiques. Miss Whiting was tall and thin, and she had a restless, mechanical smile. Her manner was one of forced effusiveness, a nervous, ineffective pretence of great energy, which made her seem birdlike in the way in which she moved and darted about. Each of her gestures was a sharp, stabbing motion. Miss Hubbard was a trifle thinner than Miss Whiting, and seemed, with the exception of an expression of complete resignation to an unkind world, a pale likeness of her companion.

"This is Senator Mallon?" Miss Whiting began the conversation with a group of people who, because of the sweeping emotions they were then enduring, thought of nothing to say. "And Miss Mallon?" She bowed to Edith. "How very, very nice! How very nice!"

Mallon murmured something about being glad to see Miss Whiting and Miss Hubbard.

"We came to get the denial of the engagement story" Miss Whiting's words flowed from her birdlike throat. "You see, in a story like this, the young lady, the heroine, becomes the most interesting personage in modern life. She is discussed over the teacups and across the wine glass. And details are essential."

"So very essential, Myrtle," Miss Hubbard agreed with her friend.

"Yes. If she likes immortelles better than roses, for instance, or if she had a favorite rag doll when she was a baby, or if she believes onions quiet the nerves—anything of that sort, senator, is absolutely essential."

"If you will permit me, Miss Whiting," Waller stepped forward, prepared to make a suggestion.

"Just one moment, Mr. Waller, please," she went on, again devoting her attention to the senator. "It would so improve the story if we knew Miss Mallon's views on marriage. Has she ever read any books on trial marriage, for instance, or does she admire the feminist movement? You know, they say the feminists don't believe in the marriage ceremony. It's quite shocking, I know, but in these days things have to be shocking in order to be interesting. And details are so essential for——"

The two reporters had been standing near the door through which they had entered. Miss Whiting's frantic fishing for details was ended, necessarily, when the hanging were lifted once more by Wales.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Mallon," he said, "but Miss Mary Leslie wishes to see you—one of the Thursday young ladies."

"Oh, I had forgotten," Edith reproached herself. "Tell her to wait a moment in——"

But the visitor evidently had thought she was to follow Wales. She came past him slowly, almost timidly, and, when she saw the group in the room, stood, a fearful, shrinking figure clothed in black, just a step over the threshold. Wales dropped the hangings behind her and disappeared.

"I—I wanted to see Miss Mallon," she said in a colorless, uncertain tone.

"I am Miss Mallon," Edith told her, and started toward her with the intention of asking her to wait in another room.

But the newcomer hurried to meet her and clasped her hand.

"Oh," she said, sobbing a little, "I'm so glad! So glad!"

Edith felt that the girl's hands trembled. Her plain, felt sailor hat was rusty on the edges of the brim, and her black suit was shabby, ill-fitting. But she was not a girl. She was a woman of 27 or, possibly, 28. That was evident in the pale face, a face which had in it too many lines, as if the years had been far more heavy than happy. Her black hair was done in exaggeration of the prevaling mode. Her eyes, Edith thought afterward, were uncanny. They looked old and very worn, as if they had seen many places and many different kinds of men and women. And yet, for all their wisdom, they looked, also, like depths of sorrow. The wisdom she had gained was not such as to quiet the sobs in her throat or to make her hands cease trembling.

For a moment Edith forgot the others around her.

"Ah," she said kindly, "you are troubled, aren't you? Come with me, won't you?"

As the two women turned toward the door into the hall, the change in positions made Mary Leslie face the music room.

Her eyes rested on somebody beyond the doorway. The click in her throat was audible to everybody in the room. It sounded as if her leaping heart had crowded the breath from her body. For an instant she stood, her face blank from sheer incredulity. Even her wise looking eyes were blank, as if they had been curtained. She slipped both her hands from Edith's grasp and let them fall, limp, at her sides. Her lips shaped a slow smile, and light came back to her eyes. She leaned toward the music room and held out her hands. They trembled. Every bit of her trembled.

To the others the thing was big, crushing, grim. All of them—even the society reporters—knew that they looked on a tremendous scene, something vital, stark. In the dead silence they almost could hear the footfall of tragedy, so entirely did the emotion of the shabby looking, black clad woman dominate their minds.

Her thin, white hands trembled oddly before her for a few moments before she let them drop again to her sides. She still leaned toward the music room.

"Why," she said in an awed, wondering voice hardly above a whisper, "there's Jack!"

The smile stayed on her lips and went up into her eyes.

Mrs. Kane was the first to find voice. Edith's fascinated gaze was, like the strange woman's toward the music room.

"What did you say?" Nellie asked, her voice strained.

"There he is—in there," Mary Leslie answered. She did not shift her gaze, but she brought both her hands up to her chest and folded them there. The gesture looked like mute prayer.

Mallon, appreciating at last what the scene meant, took one step toward the doorway through which the woman's steady gaze went.

"Mr. Smith!" he called out loudly.

There was a brief pause, during which the others could see that Mary's and Edith's eyes followed the progress of some one toward the doorway.

The suspense, cruelly heavy, hung on all of them.

Smith appeared in the doorway and came into the room. His expression was one of curiosity. He looked first at Edith, then at Mary Leslie. Evidently, he had not heard what Mary had said about him.

Mallon turned to Miss Leslie.

"Well?" he questioned her a little sharply.

She held out her hands toward the agitator again, supplicating him.

"It is Jack!" she said, music in her voice for the first time, like the whisper of happiness. Her eyes had never left him.

He looked at her gravely. It was apparent that he was utterly bewildered.

"My name is John," he answered firmly.

Her hands were still toward him, trembling, white, and thin.

"And I am Mary," she said simply.

He answered her with two slow words.

"Mary who?"

The smile gradually faded from her face. It was as if a brutal, irresistible hand slowly dragged down into the mud a beautiful thing.

"You don't know me?"

She said that in a curious, frightened way. She seemed to view the thing in some strange, detached manner, as if she mechanically calculated the degrees of her own sorrow. There was in her question so much panic, and at the same time so much flat disappointment, that she might have been a musician testing a few mournful notes on a flute. There was in her tone all the flutes of fear.

"No," Smith replied very quietly; "I don't think I do."

"But you must!"

She made the words a lamentation.

A little pallor came into his face.

"But I don't—really," he contradicted her again.

She let her hands fall again, slowly, making the gesture eloquent of complete surrender, and, ceasing to stare at him, surveyed the others a little blindly.

"He says he doesn't know me!" she mourned, addressing nobody definitely.

Smith, quiet and dignified, looked at her intently.

"That is true," he told her gently; "I do not know you. I do not, I assure you."

She returned his intent gaze, but she seemed to be trying to look within herself, to examine her own processes of reasoning, to assure herself of her own sanity. There was in her glance incredulity, distrust of herself and of him.

"Do you mean to say," she wondered in a low voice, "you wandered in a low voice, "you don't remember me — you don't remember Shanghai—the time we were there six years ago?"

Smith drew himself more erect. Waller thought he braced himself, like a man facing bravely a great and unexpected torture.

"I do not," he repeated.

Waller stepped forward and addressed Mary Leslie.

"May I suggest, madam," he said firmly, "that this is hardly the place for a discussion of this sort?"

She took no note of him.

"Jack, you do remember," she said to Smith, her voice raised. "You must remember!" Entreaty was strong in her words. "If you don't, I'll remind you." She took one short, timid, creeping step toward him. "You remember Charlie's place—and Josie the Spaniard—and the boats down on the river in the moonlight"—her voice broke on that—"You remember the boats down on the river, don't you?"

He stared at her, and paused before he could find words with which to express some of the things that went whirling through his brain. His gaze was enough to explore her very soul.

Waller turned to him.

"Oh, come, old man!" he implored. "This won't do at all. Why listen to such a thing?"

Mallon contradicted the suggestion.

"We'd better listen," he said roughly.

"It won't do at all!" Mary acknowledged Waller finally. "Well it won't!" Her anger was for Waller, not for Smith. That was quite evident. "I've found this man again, and you say it won't do!" Scorn and contempt made her words quick, strong. "He ran away from me—ran away!" She struck her thin, white fists together. "Do you know what that means? I tell you I am his wife—I was——"

She turned suddenly to Smith and implored him with outstretched hands.

"Why do you stand there and pretend that what I say is not true?" She sobbed once. "Oh, why?"

To that he made no answer. For the moment his mind was busy with Edith, who stood back of the other woman, her hands clenched in front of her, her face a colorless model for grief.

"You can't deny it, can you?" Mary Leslie challenged him, personal anger against him lively in her voice at last. "Why don't you speak?"

He stared at her fixedly. His nostrils dilated with the rapidity of his breathing. His features twitched as if the gray fingers of the pallor that was upon him twisted them sharply.

"Tell me" she begged, seeing his suffering. "Don't you know me?"

He answered her with a great effort:

"I don't know," he said, hoarseness in his throat.

He heard the half audible cry from Edith, and, without looking at her, saw that she winced as if she had been struck. A smile of derision was on Mallon's face. The two reporters stirred slightly, anticipating even a greater sensation than that which they had just witnessed. Mrs. Kane went close to Edith and put an arm about her waist.

Mary Leslie fell back from Smith a step and wailed:

"You don't know?"

They watched him as he stood, drawn to his full height like a man facing execution.

Waller broke in again.

"This is a frame-up!" he declared angrily. "That's what it is—a frame-up! Old man, don't fall for it!"

Smith did not answer him.

"What do you mean?" Mary's thin, wailing voice tried to break Smith's silence. "What do you mean—you don't know?"

Waller grasped his shoulder.

"Don't pay any attention to her" he begged. "This is a frame-up, I tell you. Come with me!"

"Don't!" the plaintive voice persisted. "Don't! Don't run away from me again!"

Specifically this is a recommendation for one method of reducing the cost of living. Let the [illegible] departments of large cities publish a bulletin each weekly bulletin the number of calories that $1 will buy in foodstuffs—at the market prices prevailing. The ordinary food budget covered in not to exceed four dollars, which, when the bulletins were issued weekly, would mean a new list once a month. This would be frequent enough to take care of changes in prices.

The calorie basis for judging value of foods is all right in most particulars. Its most striking shortcoming is that it does not properly measure the value of food as a repairer of waste. For instance, lard is high in calorie value, but if a man [illegible] he would waste away, because there are no food elements in lard that can be used to repair the waste in muscle or other tissues.

There should be another figure which would give the cost per unit of this tissue repairing element. Still another possible in such a bulletin would give the proportion of different foods consumed lost in trimming and cooking.

In case the department of health could not maintain a weekly bulletin, the newspapers would be glad to publish such weekly lists.

In 1916, Dr. Rose wrote a book in which such information is given. For instance, in Dr. Rose's tables 1 bought 39 calories of [illegible] cream, 50 calories of [illegible] ories of mashed potatoes [illegible] quets, seven calories of tomato with rice, or two calories of cantaloupe. One cent bought 247 calories of oatmeal, 232 calories of cracked wheat, calories of rice, 108 calories of cornmeal flakes, or 70 calories of [illegible] fried rice.

A quart of milk costing 9 cents has as many calories as one pound of round steak at 20 cents and nine pounds costing 18 cents. It is plain to any one that prices have risen since Dr. Rose wrote her book.

The waste repairer unit of Dr. Rose is protein calories. One hundred protein calories in dried navy beans costs 3 cents; oatmeal, 2 cents, white bread 5 cents; cheese, 6.3 cents macaroni, 3 cents; leg of mutton, 7.3 cents; rump beef, 6.3 cents, milk (9 cents a quart), 7.5 cents; lean round beef, 5 cents; eggs (24 cents a dozen) 7.7 cents; halibut, 8 cents; porterhouse steak, 5 cents.

These figures are given merely for the purpose of stimulating interest. They are not of particular value in view of the uneven increase in the prices of foods during the last 12 months.

Health departments proceeding along the same lines could prepare lists based upon the prices obtained in the local markets, which lists would prove a great assistance to persons trying to beat the high cost of living. The high cost of living increases death and sickness rates.

CATHEDRAL PLASTER FALLS

Rheims, France, (by mail) [illegible] and then rain, have caused the plaster to become loose from the arches of the famous cathedral which, during the war was badly damaged by [illegible] shells. Large pieces fall frequently are strewn about the stone floor particularly in the side aisles. There are large pools of water. The director of fine arts of the French government being requested to hasten the protection and repairing of the cathedral.

Cardinal Lucon remarked that much of his work being done for people whose homes have been destroyed by the German bombardments and distributing supplies sent by the American Red Cross. Many packages are sent to the poor come directly from the United States from individual donors and the cardinal is kept busy acknowledging gifts.

The Name of Old Glory.

Old Glory! say who
By the ships and the sea
And the long, level lea
And the blue—
Who gave you, Old Glory,
you bear
With such pride everywhere
As you cast yourself free
And leap out full length you to?—
Who gave you that name of the same,
And the honor and fame
you?—
Your stripes stroked in and of red,
With your stars at their overhead—
By day or by night
Their delightfullest light
Laughing down from the haven of blue'—
Who gave you the name
say, who—
Who gave you the name

The old banner lifted, and tattering
In vague lisps and whispers fell again:

Old Glory—speak out'—we are all about
How you happened to "favor" a name
so to say;
That sounds so familiar and careless gay
As we cheer it and shout in our breezy way—
We—the crowd, every man of us, can you that—
We—Tom, Dick and Harry—each swing his hat
And hurrahing "Old Glory!" like were our kin,
When—Lord!—we all know we're as mon as sin!—
And yet it just seems like you hum
all
And wait us you thanks as we hall and fall
Into line, with you over us, waving
Where our glorified, sanctified have gone,
And this is the reason we're waiting know—
(And we're wanting it so'
Where our own fathers went willing to go).
Who gave you the name of Old Glory
ho!—
Who gave you the name of Old Glo

The old flag unfurled with a billowy
For an instant, then wistfully sighed was still.

Old Glory: the story we're wanting hear
Is what the plain facts of your chris

For your name—just to hear it,
Repeat it, and cheer it, 's a tang spirit
As salt as a tear;—
And seeing you fly, and the boys m

There's a shout in the throat and a in the eye
And an aching to live for you alw or die,
If, dying, we still keep you wavin

And so, by our love
For you, floating above,
And the scars of all wars and the

Who gave you the name of Old Glory
why—
Are we thrilled at the name of

Canadian Farmers Profit From Wheat

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The war's devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and wheat near $2 a bushel offers great profits to the farmer. Canada's invitation is therefore especially attractive. She wants settlers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves by helping her raise immense wheat crops.

You can get a Homestead of 160 acres FREE and other lands at remarkably low prices. During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre, many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax.

Mixed farming as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses full of nutrition are the only food required for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, churches, markets convenient, climate excellent.

There is an extra demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. The Government is urging farmers to put extra acreage into grain. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or Help Straighten the World.

The world is topsy-turvy today, but real and permanent equilibrium will be restored in time. It is to be a big task to accomplish. Whether this restoration be as it should be the new order of things will affect every country in the world, every nation, this nation; every individual, you. It is incumbent upon you to be a factor, an influence, in the right result, no matter whether as individuals are rated you are small or great. And the time to begin is now, today; for the way is long, the problems ahead are almost insuperable, and the world is in sorry need of the combined thought and wisdom of all.—The Forum Partners.

Government Issues Warning Against Fly Poisons

This is an extract from "The Relation of Disease by Flies," Document No. 29 to the Public Health, Toronto, April, 1916.

"Some fly poisons mentioned should be made, merely for the sake of condemnation, of these of arsenic. Fatal cases of poisoning of children through the use of such compounds are far too frequent, and owing to the resemblance of arsenical poisoning to cholera infantum, diarrhea and cholera infantum, it is believed that the cases reported do not, by any means, cover the total. Arsenical fly-destroying devices must be rated as extremely dangerous, and should not be used, even if other means are not at hand."

"Fly poisoning cases have been reported to the press within the last month. As stated above this number is but a fraction of the real number. Protect your children by using the safe, sane, non-poisonous fly catcher

ANY CORN LIFTS OUT, DOESN'T HURT A BIT!

No foolishness! Lift your corns and calluses off with fingers—It's like magic!

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn, can harmlessly be lifted right out with the fingers if you apply upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

For little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain.

This simple drug dries the moment it is applied and does not even irritate the surrounding skin while applying it or afterwards.

This announcement will interest many of our readers. If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to surely get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

BIGGEST LAND ESTATES IN WORLD IN ENGLAND

London (by mail)—The duke of Atholl has just died leaving an estate of 202,000 acres in the Scottish highlands of Perthshire. At 640 acres to the square mile, this is over 315 square miles, or about the size of those sections in southern Europe which desire to be liberated and "nationalized." It compares also with some of the Indian reservations in the western states, but is not as large as any of the American states. It is not all fertile land however, but is mountain and valley with the intervening sections of farm land, towns and villages, all maintaining the old time feudal loyalty to the lord of the manor.

Although the United Kingdom is comparatively small in extent of territory, it has more of these vast properties than any country in Europe or the world due perhaps to the law and customs of primogeniture by which estates are kept intact and pass to the eldest son. There are 180,000 comparatively large holdings running into the hundreds of acres and averaging about 100 acres whereas the average of larger holdings in France is 32 acres, Germany 37 acres, Belgium 18 acres, Italy 36 acres and in continental Europe at large 48 acres. The average in the United Kingdom is about eight or 10 times that of other parts of Europe, and about three times as great as the United States average.

The very large properties are estimated to number about 10,000 with an average of 2,200 acres, and a value of 50,000,000. Then among these, there are comparatively few of vast extent, running into the hundreds of thousand acres. The duke of Atholl estate Mr. Money, the member of parliament who is an authority on land, claims that one-seventieth part of the population owns two-thirds of the entire land. Another authority estimates that the 180,000 larger landlords own ten-elevenths of the total area.

Lord Mostyn, whose death also was announced recently, was the former owner of the Llewenni estate of 35,000 acres or about 55 square miles, part of which he disposed of on the ground that 3,000 acres of English land is too much holding to be prudent."

The still more recent death of the duke of Norfolk further reveals the existing feudal holdings among the noble. He was possessor of immensely valuable estates, among them that of Arundel castle, which dates from the time of King Alfred who mentioned it in his will. The late duke's income from his estates amounted to about $1,500,000.

Measure of Damages for Infringement of Copyrighted Song.

The case of Haas vs. Leo Feist, 234 Federal Reporter 105, involves the infringement of copyright of a song pathetically entitled "You Will Never Know How Much I Really Cared." The song was a lamentable failure, possibly because the public is as little interested in the lamentations of a discarded suitor as it is in the sorrowful exclamations of a deposed Southpaw. Or maybap the talk of pre-paredness pro and con, had temporarily turned the public attention from love songs to war and peace hymns. For when the erstwhile famous song "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier" came out and its chorus contained the music of the best named song yet the martial song sales during the first three months of 1915 totaled more than 650,000 copies.

The United States district court, Southern district of New York, in the case cited holds the defendant published of the infringing song, liable in damages regardless of his innocence or intent. In this instance the publisher made a bona fide purchase from the infringer, and the court limited damages to the time of the discovery of the fraud, the opinion by Judge Learned Hand stating: "A few weeks delay in the case of a song so ephemeral as this may have the same effect as 10 years when the publication is a legal encyclopedia in 30 volumes."

Birds Noted Change of Clock.

From the Youth's Companion.

The author of a communication to the Societe de Biologie reports that for two years she had been accustomed to walk through the Luxembourg Gardens every morning at 8 o'clock and to give bread crumbs to the birds, who knew her well and who gathered every day to wait for her. On June 14 she walked through the gardens at 8 o'clock, as usual, but as the clocks had just been set forward an hour she was really 60 minutes ahead of time. Nevertheless the birds were there waiting for her apparently already familiar with the change. The incident seems to show that city birds, at least, depend for their knowledge of time more upon the life and movements in the streets than upon the height of the sun.

Brazil's Army and Navy.

Washington, D. C.—The possibility that Brazil may follow the example of the United States and sever diplomatic relations with Germany, as indicated in recent cable dispatches from South America, gives timely interest to the following war geography bulletin issued by the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington.

Should Brazil, like the United States, be forced into war with Germany her peace-times nucleus of an army (25,000 men) will be supplemented by a well organized and thoroughly trained police force of 20,000 men equipped for military service. The strength of the South American republic's reserve army is in excess of 500,000 men, while the total available unorganized strength of the nation is 4,300,000 from a population slightly less than one-fourth as large as that of the United States.

For nine years Brazil has had in force a universal military service law, every Brazilian between the ages of 21 and 45 being affected. The terms of service under this law require two years in the ranks, followed by seven years in the army reserve in the territorial army, and eight years in the national guard. Reservists are called up for four weeks training annually and are given rifle practice once a month. The territorial army's training varies from two to four weeks a year.

HYMN OF HATE.

Herr Lissauer, author of the German "Chant of Hate," was decorated by Emperor William with the Order of the Red Eagle of the Fourth Class after his song was published. It first appeared in Jugend, an illustrated weekly of Munich, and was translated into English verse by Miss Barbara Henderson. Its full title is "A Chant of Hate Against England," and it is as follows:

French and Russian, they matter not;
A blow for a blow and a shot for a shot;
We love them not, we hate them not;
We hold the Weichsel and Vosgesgate.
We have but one and only hate,
We love as one, we hate as one
We have one foe and one alone,
He is known to you all, he is known to you all,
He crouches behind the dark gray flood,
Full of envy, of rage, of craft, of gall,
Cut off by waves that are thicker than blood

Come, let us stand at the judgment place,
An oath to swear to, face to face,
An oath of bronze no wind can shake,
An oath for our sons and their sons to take.
Come hear the word, repeat the word,
Throughout the Fatherland make it heard
We will never forego our hate,
We have all but a single hate,
We love as one, we hate as one,
We have one foe and one alone—England!

In the captain's mess, in the banquet hall,
Sat feasting the officers, one and all.
Like a saber blow, like the swing of a sail,
One sec zed his glass held high to hail;
Sharp snapped like the stroke of a rudder's play,
Spoke three words only "To the Day!"
Whose glass this fate?
They had all but a single hate,
Who was thus known?
They had one foe and one alone—England!

Take you the folk of the earth in pay,
With bars of gold your ramparts lay,
Bedeck the ocean with bow on bow,
Ye reckon well, but not well enough now
French and Russian, they matter not,
A blow for a blow a shot for a shot
We fight the battle with bronze and steel,
And the time that is coming Peace will seal
You will, we hate with a lasting hate,
We will never forego our hate,
Hate by water and hate by land,
Hate of the head and hate of the hand,
Hate of the hammer and hate of the crown,
Hate of seventy millions choking down
We love as one, we hate as one
We have one foe and one alone—England!

Reform in Germany.

From the Duluth Herald.

Democracy in Germany, asking for bread is given the stone of promises of "reform" after the war or of the kaiser's reluctant concession of half way reform now.

What Germany should have is government by and for the people, and it should have it even though many of the people are indoctrinated enough not to want it. A system of government whereby a voter in one class has as much power as 7 voters in another class is a travesty on democracy, and the kaiser's latest proposal of "reform" would change the form but not the substance of that travesty. Nothing short of the total equalization of political rights will content the German people, and to the extent that they should even contribute that will make the government completely responsive to the public will.

Property should not have a vote, but it should not have a vote. The owner of $500,000,000 should have only the same vote as a man with no money at all, and the man with a pedigree a mile long should have no more voting power. Put the man who doesn't know what his great-grandfather's father was and does not ... people might as well realize ... does not come from the ... can be no real reform ... comes from the bottom ... with a rush that ... sends crowns and ... the dust heap.

Prussian royalty ... bargaining to hold it ... hope of keeping the ... a false show of concession ... show and the less substance ... these reforms the better.

There is just one hope for reform from the bottom up; that no vestige of kingcraft and coil of black art statecraft.

Speed the day when the great people, who are too great a people, to rest supine forever under the nightmare weight of privilege, will in one mighty heave toss their kaisership and their junkerthum into the rubbish pile of medieval history and take their waiting place among the free, self governing peoples of the earth.

If that happy day could come tomorrow, peace would not be delayed 24 hours.

Four-Poster Bedsteads.

From the London Standard.

In medieval times, when life was very insecure, it was usual for people to sleep on a bed which was surrounded by sides of boards with strong posts at the four corners. These sides contained sliding doors, which could be fastened inside.

When men retired to rest they took a weapon with them. If attacked in the night they were aroused by the noise made by the crashing in of their wooden defense and were able to defend themselves.

When the law became strong enough to protect human life the sides of the bedstead were gradually dispensed with, but the four posts remained. The box-like bedstead still survives in the rural parts of Scotland, and is almost necessary where the earthern floors and imperfect ceilings cause much damp. Emily Bronte in "Wuthering Heights" describes one of these bedsteads in the old mansions as forming a "little closet." Mr. Lockwood, who had to sleep in it, says, "I slid back the panel sides, got in with my light, pulled them together again and felt secure."

An Important Rite.

Marrk Bennet, in Yankton Herald.

The writer planted a few potatoes yesterday every spring, but yesterday there tomed to perform more or less perfunctorialy every spring, but yesterday there was an air of care and deliberation about the function that gave it dignity. We remember that last April when the ground had been put in proper condition, we went out and rounded out the necessary niches in old nature's crust to hold a handful of emasculated and mutilated spuds and having thrown the latter into their respective places with a free wholearm movement ending not lower than the waist line, we raked enough dirt over the despised remains to hide them from the birds and spring winds and declared it a day's work.

Yesterday it was different. Having pummelled mother earth's generous bosom until there were a succession of nests as soft as elder down for our valued contributions, we took two pieces of precious potato, whose ewes were in proper focus and on our bended knees we laid them carefully topside up and with plenty of kicking space about them into the soft, moist earth. Then with the solemnity of laying away a beloved friend we dripped more soft moist earth upon them. After we had laid away as much of our wealth in this manner as it used to require to fill the coal bin for the winter we went indoors and showed our wife why we couldn't buy that automobile next year. If this war continues, we are not going to plant potatoes next year. Mentally and financially we went our extreme limit to be able to do it this year.

Change in Army Rations.

A new army ration to replace the familiar "bully beef" has been issued to a large section of the home armies in Great Britain. It is known officially as "beef brawn" and resembles in appearance the familiar pressed beef. A sausage ration has proved a great success in another section of the home armies and arrangements are being made to increase its use, while further large issues of Canadian fish and home grown rabbits have been ordered, replacing imported cold storage beef.

NOW IN GOOD HEALTH.

Mrs. Joannah Straw, 526 N Broadway, Canton, S. D., says "For three years I suffered terribly from rheumatic pain in my limbs and a steady ache in my back. I was weak and languid. I had terrible dizzy spells and headaches and the kidney secretions caused me no end of distress. My health was rapidly breaking down and I was losing my vitality. The benefit Doan's Kidney Pills brought me was marvelous. Since taking them I have been in good health. I eat well, sleep well and am able to do my work without suffering. I wouldn't be without Doan's."

R. Ed. Murphy, Pierre, S. D., says "Kidney complaint crippled me and I was confined to bed for a month at a time, unable to move. My limbs swelled to twice their normal size and my whole body was racked with pain. Doctors seemed unable to help me. A friend urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I did. Before long I began to improve and continued use cured me. I owe my life to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Luminous Radium Paint.

A luminous compound containing radium has been developed by an American manufacturer for use in locating electric-light switches in the dark, marking watch dials, etc. In powder form the compound is of about the same fineness as ordinary talcum powder, and is nearly as white, says Electrical Merchandising. This powder may be mixed with adhesives or varnishes and used as a paint. The compound is also furnished in flexible sheets which can be cut and shaped as desired, and can be applied to uneven or broken surfaces. This form can be used in making self-contained brass-backed buttons for glue on electric switches already installed and for manufacturers to fit into the hard rubber portions of new switch buttons. The enamel is said to be waterproof and immune to damage from vibration, and may be applied to watch dials and indicating devices of all sorts.

Lloyd made many friends while here and the writer has known him since he was a "kid" in knee pants, and all wish him God speed and a safe return.

Harry Bonwell and family leave the latter part of the week for La Verne, where Harry has secured a very lucrative position with a large mercantile firm. Harry has been an efficent clerk in the Wellemeyer Department store for some time He and his wife and child will be greatly missed in our little city but they have a host of friends who will wish them the best of everything in their new home and hope that they will like it.

A. D. and Gittie White left Sunday for Torrington, Wyoming, Ed Hughes taking them as far as Belmond in the White car. Mr. White is going out to look over the country and to see what the girls are doing. He intends to be gone two or three weeks, but if he likes it as well as the girls do, we doubt if three weeks will find him back here.—Goodell Globe.

On Dec. 26th last, Jake Rohrbach purchased a postoffice money order and sent to relatives in Germany as a holiday gift. Last Thursday he received the order back and withdrew his money from the local post office. The letter containing the draft had not left this country. Jake states he has not heard from his relatives in Germany for more than a year. It is not probable that he will be in touch with them until peace is declared between the United States and Germany.—Britt News.

NOTICE OF PROBATE OF WILL
State of Iowa, Hancock County, ss.
To Whom It May Concern

Notice is hereby given that an instrument in writing purporting to be the last will and testament of Joachim Schuldt, deceased was filed in the office of the undersigned on the 24th day of April, A. D., 1917 and that Tuesday, May 22nd, 1917, was fixed for hearing proof in relation thereto

Witness my hand and the seal of the District Court attached at Garner in said county this 24th day of April A. D., 1917

Clerk of the District Court,
Hancock County, Iowa

We cannot honor our country with too deep a reverence; we cannot love her with an affection too pure and fervent; we cannot serve her with an energy of purpose or a faithfullness of zeal too steadfast and ardent.—Grimke.

SAIL ON, O SHIP OF STATE

Sail on, O ship of state,
Sail on, O Union, strong and great.
Humanity, with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.

Sail on, nor far to breast the sea.
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee;
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears
Are all with thee are all with thee

FOLLOW THE FLAG.

IT is the right of the American people to enjoy a monopoly for their own flag within their own jurisdiction, it is the right and should be the duty of those who follow other flags to follow them elsewhere.—The Century Magazine.

Niagara at Night.

Generally speaking, it is hard to improve on nature, but those who have seen Niagara falls lighted at night by electricity are agreed that the effect is far more impressive and beautiful than anything that daylight affords. The lights are of more than a hundred million candle power.—Youth's Companion.

Origin of Billiards.

Many men believe that billiards was not an invention, says the Providence Journal, but a growth, while others maintain, most likely because of the name, that it was a French invention, and they contend that it was played by the Germans, Dutch, Italians and French long before it appeared in England. But on this matter, says the New York Sun, there is room for doubt. A number of literary references to the game may be found in Elizabethan days.

Where Cranks Abound.

If ever you want to hear nonsense talked you should go to a conference. I don't care in what department of human life or thought, whenever you get a conference cranks are always to the front. Newspapers will not print their views, so that when they have a conference at their mercy and can insist on being listened to, then is the happy time of the crank.—Sir Edward Clarke.

Where Your Breakfast Comes From.

Brazil, using only a small fraction of the land adapted to coffee cultivation, produces three-fourths of the world's coffee supply—over a billion and a half pounds yearly. Enough sugar is produced in one province of Argentina to sweeten this giant coffee cup. The province of Tucuman yields nearly 5,000,000 pounds of sugar a year.—World Outlook.

Ben Katter Barn Burns

Last Saturday evening, shortly after 10 00 o'clock the Ben Katter barn, north of town was discovered on fire and together with everything it contained was a total loss. Mr Katter lost six of the best horses in this community besides all harness some hay and grain. One calf was also very badly burned and had to be killed Some insurance was carried on the live stock but the barn was not insured and is a total loss. It wsa one of the largest barns in the neighborhood and practically brand new all of the biuldings on the place were erected less than two years ago How the fire started is a mystery but the general opinion prevails it was set afire, but who the guilty party is is a mystery but perhaps the work of some tramp who crawled into the hay mow to spend the night and set the hay on fire while smoking. Mr. and Mrs Katter came to Klemme to spend the evening before sun down and so did not use any light around the barn in doing chores

The Wilson Highway

At a meeting held at Garner last Friday afternoon a new auto route was established that will mean a short cut between Des Moines and the Twin Cities. The route will run directly north out of Des Moines and connects with the Jefferson Highway at Albert Lea and passes here on the road running north and south on the west edge of the corporation. The following are those who represented Klemme at the meeting M O Hocum, P M Griesemer, J W. Berggren and F J Wenck. The following are the officers who were elected, President, H H. Emmons of Emmons, Minnesota, Vice President. Wayne F Waller of Garner; Secretary, M A Aasgaard of Lake Mills; Treasurer, F J Wenck of Klemme.

Brugman-Wilkins

Maude Wilkins and Lloyd Brugman were married in the Catholic church at Goodell last Wednesday morning at 8·00 o'clock, Rev. Father Eardley preforming the ceremony. Only the immediated relatives of both parties being present

The bride wore a gown of light blue crepe de chine and the groom wore the conveneional blue serge

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Fred Wilkins living south east of town The groom is one of our prosperous young farmers.

After the ceremony the party went to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding breakfast was served

The young couple will go at once to housekeeping on a farm southeast of town.

The Call of the Woods

A story dealing with the picturesque and wild Hudson Bay country, was first at the Lyric Theatre, New York City where it remained for a full year It then moved to Chicago where it remained for several months The 7 Cairns Bros have been very fortunate in securing this production for the season of 1917 in their big Tent Theatre with the entire scenic equipment and an excellent cast It is remarkable when one stops to realize the public will be able to see this production at the prices announced for this occasion "The Call of the Woods" will be presented at Klemme on Tuesday May 29. The fact that the company is personally owned and conducted by the 7 Cairns Bros. is a guarantee that the play and company is first class in every respect or your money will be refunded.

Domestic Science Girls Entertain School Board

On last week Friday our class in Home Economics under the direction of Mrs Powell prepared and served a supper to the members of the school board, their wives and others connected with and interested in our school work

The occasion was one which afforded genuine pleasure to the Board and all have expressed their wish that the opportunity would present itself when when they might have another invitation to such an excellent supper. Much can be said in praise of the manner in which the young ladies of the class demonstrated their application of the lessons given under the able and thorough instruction of Mrs Powell and the Board take this means of expressing their thanks publicly for the entertainment.

What Happened to Ole

The above is the title of the play. George E. Engesser brings here on Friday evening, May 25th under water proof canvas. Local theater goers will remember this company as the one who presented the "Two Oles" at the opera house last fall and gave such good satisfaction. They are now coming with an entirely new bill which is guaranteed to please. If you enjoy a Swedish comedy don't miss "What Happened to Ole."

7-Cairns Bros. Coming

"The Call of the Woods" is from the pen of W. C. Herman, author of soveral dramas, but is so different from the usual run of plays, that it leaves a distinct impression of its own on the mind of the spectator. The story and theme are new-there is an abundance of bright dialogue, droll humor, and the pathos and sentiment of the play are not of the artificial sort. The stage settings are remarkably elaborate, and many of the scenes are so well managed as to receive hearty applause. The 7 Cairns Bros. Company this season is by far their best effort with an entirely new Tent Theatre with a seating capacity for fifteen hundred—with a company of twenty-five people and Cairns Bros. Concert Band and Orchestra, including Warren E. Cairns, America's best trombone soloist and the Famous Megaphone Quartette. "The Call of the Wood" will be presented in Klemme Tuesday May 29, and performance at night only

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But, at least, we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease-carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

With coal selling at $60 a ton in Italy and the government gradually taking over all existing supplies and prohibiting its use by hotels and boarding houses and with gas and electricity dear or the supply reduced, Italian householders and business officers have had to revert to the ancient methods of burning finely powdered wood charcoal dust in a two-gallon earthen jar. The jar is filled half full of charcoal dust, placed in the open air or near an open window and some live coals of wood or charcoal put in the center of the dust. Slow combustion is started and gradually the entire surface of the dust burns to ashes while the smoldering fire reaches downward. When, after twelve hours, no more smoke or little gas is given off, the heated jar is placed in the cold room and let stay there for twenty-four hours, after which a fresh layer of dust is placed in the jar and the process repeated. Before the war this means of heating had been abandoned except by the very poor.

A letter from Princess Catherine Radziwell says that Sweden is practically cut off from the civilized world. For a month residents in Sweden were unable to send any letters anywhere except to Russia and Holland, and during that time they had received only one post which came through Norway. She goes on to say, "My husband's youngest sister, passing through Munich, was arrested by the German military authorities in mistake for myself, and was nearly shot as the suspected author of my book, 'Because It Was Written.' It would be inadvisable to tell you how she was saved, but she succeeded in escaping from the clutches of the Huns and is now in Switzerland. It seems that the Germans are greatly incensed by my description of the battle of Tannenberg."

Recent excavations in Mexico City in Reloj and Maria Teresa streets have uncovered 55 splendid exampdes of Aztec tile work. These tiles form a portion of what once was a floor of the grand temple of Tenoxtitlan and portray the mythological wars and dances of the Aztec gods. As the rainy season is approaching during which the tiles might be damage they have been removed from the ruins to the department of inspection of archaelogical monuments.

Count Plunkett, newly elected member of the British parliament for North Roscommon speaking at a public meeting at Sligo the other day, said that home rule for Ireland was at present a "dead horse." "We have" the count continued, 'a scheme of which you will hear very soon, under which a body will have the duty of presenting the claims of Ireland to complete independence before the peace conference.'

American capitalists have submitted a proposition to the Russian government for construction of more than 800 miles of railway between Moscow and points on the Sea of Azov, at a cost of approximately $173,000,000. The railway if constructed will tap important coal fields in southern Russia.

TWO DES MOINES MEN SENT TO LEAVENWORTH

Des Moines, Ia., May 12.—With the exact nature of their offenses in doubt, and the evidence on which their arrests were made shrouded in secrecy, Hermann Kirch, a jeweler, and Arthur B. Hartung, former employe of the Des Moines City Railway company, last night were ordered interned at Leavenworth, Kan., for the duration of the war. Secret service operatives, aided by members of the local detective force, took Kirch and Hartung into custody yesterday afternoon and they were incarcerated in the county jail charged with being "alien enemies of the government of the United States." They were held incommunicado and it was announced would not be admitted to bail.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL AT SHELDON IS DEDICATED

Sheldon, Ia., May 12.—The new $100,000 high school building was formally opened with appropriate exercises. Boys and girls from 10 nearby schools gave talks as part of the program, as well as High School Inspector Foster and Mr. Fuller of the state department. The new building is complete in every detail and will make a fine equipment for the summer extension normal.

SHELDON MAN WILL GO TO FRANCE FOR SERVICE

Sheldon, Ia., May 12.—Homer Myers, son of Dr. F. L. Myers, mayor, will sail soon for France as a member of base hospital corps No. 12. He is a graduate of Northwestern university and is a junior in the Northwestern law school. The company will be made up of 25 doctors, 50 nurses and 150 civilian helpers.

HAWARDEN MAN LUCKILY ESCAPES DEATH IN AUTO

Hawarden, Ia., May 12.—While returning from Chatsworth, John Muth, of this city, slid off the grade just north of Chatsworth with his big Chalmers and turned completely over. He escaped with a cut on his hand and slight injury to the car.

SHELDON—The man murdered here on April 16 has been identified as Jerry McCarty, of Kansas City. He was identified through the effort of an I. W. W., who is working on the paving here. No motive is known as yet for the act.

HAWARDEN—The funeral of Mrs. R. A. Shriner was held here yesterday, and interment was made at Vermilion. The trip was made by motor, the motor hearse of W. L. Summer, followed by six cars, making the 85-mile trip easily.

REDISTRICTING IS FAVORED BY KAISER

Modern Germany May Cast Aside Plan in Use Since 1870.

Copenhagen (via London), May 12.—A dispatch received here from Berlin says the German government has indicated its intention to submit to the full redistricting of the reichstag districts. This would meet one of the most widely urged demands for reform and give modern Germany a more adequate representation in parliament, the members of which are still elected on the basis of the one in 1870.

DUTCH RESUME COMMERCE.

Copenhagen (via London), May 12.—The German newspapers this morning publish no news of the peace errand of the Danish socialist, Borgbjerg, to Petrograd, or the nature of the peace terms alleged to have been transmitted to Germany. Borgbjerg claims to be acting as the spokesman of the German socialists.

No General Attempt to Apply "Blue Laws" Next Sunday Is Anticipated.

Des Moines, Ia., May 12.—The blue law enforcement will not be state wide next Sunday. Des Moines seems to be the only city in which the county attorney has been ordered by Havner to enforce the Sunday statute.

Reports gathered from all corners of the state today failed to uncover any other city. County attorneys outside of Polk said that they had received no order and no action to enforce the statute until further directions. However the report brought movie to fight Havner's edict.

County Attorney Henry officially notified Chief of Police Jackson today to rigidly enforce any "breach of the Sabbath laws" Sunday. These businesses are called illegal, cigar stores, movies, candy stores, temperance bars, ice cream parlors and shining parlors. No reference is made as to baseball, but Tom Fairweather, owner of the team, and his attorney have had conferences and Fairweather has asked that there be no demonstration when he is "pinched" Sunday. It is reported that he will ask an injunction to stop putting of the laws into force so as to make the test without being arrested.

SIBLEY GRADUATING CLASS TO WEAR UNIFORM COSTUMES

Sibley, Ia., May 12.—The Sibley high school class of 1917 will be graduated at the opera house on the evening of June 1. The exercises will consist of musical numbers by the class, assisted by the high school orchestra, and addresses by representative men of the community.

The class will wear uniform costumes.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Rev. J. F. Parsons in the Congregational church Sunday evening, May 27.

RIFLE CLUB AND RED CROSS CHAPTER FORMED AT LEMARS

LeMars, Ia., May 12.—Citizens of LeMars, including several former members of the national guard, at a meeting in the armory organized a rifle club. A charter is to be issued to the club by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, and guns and ammunition are to be provided by the government. Lieut. J. C. Peters, publisher of the Globe-Post, directed the organization work.

Men and women yesterday afternoon formed a LeMars chapter of the National Red Cross society. The organization meeting was held in the public library. Officers of the chapter said they would not be satisfied with a membership of less than 500, for the city and county. A membership registration booth, which will be presided over by various ladies of the city, will be opened in a down town store, and will remain open all day until further notice. Officers of the chapter are Mrs. J. M. Fettes, president; Miss Margaret Sammis, secretary; E. A. Dalton, treasurer.

MONONA COUNTY DOCTORS OFFER SERVICES TO ARMY

Whiting, Ia., May 12.—The Monona County Medical society, at a special meeting held May 8, at Castana passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, By the Monona County Medical society in special session assembled, that the members volunteer for service in the medical reserve corps of the United States army.

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to Dr. MacRae, of Council Bluffs, and spread on the minutes of this society."

The signers were: Drs. C. C. Herren, M. O. Stauch, F. S. Spearman, G. S. Waterhouse, H. S. Gillespie, M. F. Minthorn, J. A. Thomson; F. J. Scheffler; R. R. Gingles, W. W. Gingles; A. L. Allison, J. H. Sherlock, E. C. Junger, C. Harman.

SIBLEY HAS SENT 27 OF ITS YOUNG MEN TO ARMY

Sibley, Ia., May 12.—On Friday, the 11th, Sibley will hold a patriotic celebration at the opera house. The speaking will be by local men and the old soldiers. This celebration is not to raise recruits for the army, as Sibley has sent 27 men already which is most of the younger men of the town but to show its loyalty and support of the country.

DISMISSES COURT TO LET FARMERS RETURN TO WORK

Webster City, Ia., May 12.—Because the jury list, drawn for the present term of the district court and called to report here Monday, was composed almost wholly of farmers, Judge E. M. McCall, of Nevada, dismissed the whole panel and will hear no jury cases this term. His action was taken to permit these men to give their full time and attention to farm work, which he considers of vastly more importance just now than the operations of his court.

PLANS TO REGISTER ALL CAPABLE OF WAR SERVICE

Des Moines, Ia., May 12.—Governor Harding has announced that he will make an effort to secure the registration of all the men in Iowa between the ages of 16 and 65 years and have them put down in writing what kind of work they can do. In this way he hopes to get everyone engaged in something which will count during the war. If they can't shoulder a musket and go to the front they may be able to help produce stuff or do work outside which counts. He says he is not sure but that he might require the women also to register.

HEAVY FIRE LOSS.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 12.—Carl Mitchell, a farmer residing near Marion suffered the loss of about 12 horses, 1,500 bushels of corn, valuable business and other property of a total value of $15,000 by fire this morning.

IDA GROVE—John Finley, one of the pioneers of the Maple valley, died at his home in this city Monday and will be buried Thursday. Mr. Finley located in this section of Iowa about 30 years ago and was engaged in farming for many years. He is a veteran of the civil war, serving four years, and the burial will be in charge of the G. A. R.

SUTHERLAND AIRMAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Carl Mather's Machine Crashes to Earth When Birdman Hits Air Pocket.

Sutherland, Ia., May 10.—Carl Mather narrowly escaped death last night when, while on his third flight in one day, he struck an air pocket and his airplane crashed to the ground.

The fact that the plane landed in a plowed field and that Mather was wearing a safety helmet alone saved him, as the helmet was dented and Mather rendered unconscious for a time.

Mather is badly bruised but in no way seriously hurt. The plane will be repaired and in the air again within two or three days.

O'BRIEN COUNTY FIELD MEET DELAYED BY RAINS

Sheldon, Ia., May 10.—The O'Brien county field meet was postponed until May 19 on account of the poor auto roads last September. Eighty-eight boys are entered in the 20 events and after the meet the participants will be banqueted at the Arlington hotel by the Sheldon Commercial club.

BODY OF MYSTERIOUS GIRL SUICIDE NOT IDENTIFIED

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 10.—Coroner has had inquiries from many cities and from several states from persons who seek for missing women and who believe the mysterious "Miss Smith, Waterloo, Ia.," who committed suicide in a cheap hotel in this city, may be the one they seek. It has been ascertained that she was unknown in Waterloo and no inquiry promises to clear the mystery. The body is being held for identification.

COUGAR IS KILLING STOCK OF EASTERN IOWA FARMERS

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 10.—A predatory cat, variously known as cougar, catamount and striped panther, is making itself an object of interest near Waubeek, Linn county, on the Wapsipinicon river. It has been seen at close range on one or two occasions, the observer in each instance being unarmed. Its depredations are not numerous, but the killing of a 600-pound hog on the Bowdish farm makes them an item of expense. A cougar supposed to be the mate of this one was killed in that vicinity about two years ago.

TOWN MARSHAL MURDERED; CIRCUMSTANCES BAFFLING

Shellsburg, Ia., May 10.—After an examination of the remains of Harry King, town marshal of Shellsburg, whose dead body was found some time ago in the town power house under circumstances suggesting suicide, Drs. J. P. Whitney, T. L. Charbourne and F. E. Lashbrook have filed an opinion that King was murdered. There were two gunshot wounds in the head. The first would not necessarily have been fatal but the physicians hold that it would have instantly produced unconsciousness, rendering impossible the self infliction of the second and fatal shot.

STATE-WIDE HOME GUARD TO TAKE PLACE OF MILITIA

Des Moines, Ia., May 10.—Plans for the organization of state-wide home guard were announced here last night following a conference at which were present Governor Harding, Adjutant General Mac M. Acker and Ralph Lee, secretary to the Des Moines chamber of commerce. It is thought [illegible] will be called up [illegible] state militia [illegible] appointed by governor. Harding has today. The organization would be composed [illegible] the same general lines as the national guard which it is designed to replace in case of mobilization. Governor Harding just back from Washington, declares it probable that the Iowa guard will not be in the state more than 60 or 90 days.

SUES FOR $5,000 DAMAGES ON ALLEGED LIBEL CHARGE

Creston, Ia., May 10.—Frances N. Wise has instituted suit in federal court in Creston against the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers and its officers demanding $25,000 damages for alleged libel.

It is recited in the petition of Wise that letters were written intimating that he had previously sacrificed a hand to obtain $3,000 from the beneficiary society of the brotherhood.

ONE MAN KILLED, ANOTHER HURT, IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Cherokee, Ia., May 11.—R. N. Bjorklund, a young man from Liberty township, was instantly killed when his auto overturned recently near Sioux Falls. S. D. Albert Ware, who accompanied him was severely injured. Bjorklund and Ware left their homes in Liberty township Monday morning for points in South Dakota and were within three or four miles of Sioux Falls when the accident occurred.

SHELDON TO SPEND THIRD OF MILLION THIS SUMMER

Sheldon, Ia., May 11.—The total of the improvements to be made here this summer will be over one third of a million dollars. The big items are the Myers hotel, masonic temple, sanitary and storm sewers, sewage disposal plant, paving and several new homes, the most costly of which will be for Judge W. D. Boies and Attorney T. E. Diamond.

CEDAR FALLS—County superintendents of Iowa school will gather here tomorrow in the second and final day of a conference under the direction of the state department of public instruction and the Iowa State Teachers college. The opening program today included two morning conferences with state officials, a reception in the afternoon tendered by the faculty of the teachers' college, and a Minneapolis symphony concert tonight at which the visitors were guests of the college.

IOWA CITY—Mrs. Emily Wellman, 60 years old, who was run over Saturday evening by an automobile driven by Joseph Paulus, died late yesterday afternoon. She had been unconscious throughout the day from wounds about the head.

SHELDON—Sheldon is to have, according to F. J. Hagy, local manager of the Standard Oil company, a finer filling station than either Sioux City or Omaha. The contract has just been let for it and it will be 20x24, of brick and hollow tile construction with the grounds parked with shrubbery and flowers.

CHEROKEE—Cherokee county physicians have unanimously offered their services to the government during the war. At a special meeting of the Cherokee County Medical society it was voted unanimously to tender the services of its members as volunteers in the medical reserve.

WOMEN TO REGISTER FOR SERVICE IN WAR

Those Living in Iowa Who Have Had Office or Factory Experience Wanted.

Des Moines, Ia., May 10.—Women who have had business or shop experience and who can leave their households for temporary employment in office or factory are urged to register at once with the National League of Woman's Service, 606 Walnut street, Des Moines, Ia., which is expediting the filling of army and navy contracts by helping to obtain women labor for factories that have received government orders but are handicapped by lack of workers. The league has issued from its new national headquarters at 259 Madison avenue, New York City, the following statement explaining how women's organizations for the first time are planning an important part in mobilizing and preparing the country's resources for war service:

"Under the supervision of the department of labor the league's bureau of registration and information at Washington is mobilizing women who have had office or factory experience and are available for industrial service in connection with government war supplies contracts. Through the local branches of the league in the 36 states in which it is now organized the bureau has set out to meet the demand for trained women labor in the government establishments as well as in privately owned factories that have received emergency orders for army and navy supplies.

"Inasmuch as it is expected that every pair of capable hands, both masculine and feminine, that can be called on will be needed to manufacture sufficient munitions and supplies for ourselves and our allies, every woman who has had experience or training, and who is able to leave her present duties in the care of others should register at the nearest registry bureau of the National League for Woman's Service. Women's organizations whose members are available for either paid or volunteer service should register at once, if they have not done so."

COMMUNITY CLUB FORMED BY HAWARDEN CITIZENS

Hawarden, Ia., May 10.—After several attempts in past years to form a commercial club, Hawarden has finally established what promises to be the one successful organization in their 30 odd years of municipal history. This organization is known as the Community Club of Hawarden, Ia., has been incorporated, and has held three highly successful meetings besides the biggest banquet ever served in Hawarden. The officers are B. T. French president; M. Slife, vice president; J. O. Lund, treasurer and A. L. Bennett, secretary, besides a board of regents consisting of 12 men. The Community club has leased and will occupy some time this summer, the rooms formerly occupied by the Eagles' lodge, the Eagles having purchased the G. J. Shoemaker building next door, which they will remodel for their club and lodge purposes.

CONRAD MAN MUST FIGHT BROTHERS IN GERMAN ARMY

Webster City, Ia., May 10.—Bert Hall of Conrad, who was a member of the Second Regiment Supply company on the Mexican border, came to Webster City today to take the federal oath and is anxious and ready to answer the call with the Iowa troops, though to him it means fighting against two brothers in the German army in a war in which nine of his cousins have already been killed.

Hall has sold his live stock and machinery in order to be prepared for the call, which is expected every day. He was born in Germany and lived there until 16 years of age. The family was located at Leer in northwestern Germany.

MATERIAL INCREASE SHOWN IN ACREAGE OF SOME CROPS

Des Moines, Ia., May 10.—A marked increase in acreage of food products and vegetables registers the Iowa farmers' appreciation of the world food shortage and the country's war needs.

County farm agents report from 15 to 20 per cent increase in the potato acreage, a considerable increase in the corn planted, more oats acreage than last year and a much larger part of rural and urban soil in vegetable gardens.

The labor shortage is not being seriously felt on Iowa farms as yet but later on this problem promises to give much trouble.

OFFERS RAILWAY BUILDING OUTFITS TO GOVERNMENT

Washington, May 10.—N. D. Ely, of Davenport, Ia., went to the war department with Senator Kenyon today and offered Secretary Baker the plants and trained railroad construction forces of the Walsh Construction company and McCarthy Improvement company of Davenport and the Dunn-McCarthy Construction company of Chicago, for service in the United States, France, Russia or elsewhere. Mr. Ely said the three companies owned the largest railroad construction organization in the country.

BELIEVE $755,000 T[aken]

In Seven Years Many L[arge] ties Have Been Taken, [Some] Widow Being Short $250,000

Philadelphia, May 12.—Jesse Williamson, II, well known in social circles this city and former secretary of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, has been arrested, it was announced today, charged with misappropriating the company's funds. The amount involved was said to be between $250,000 and $755,000.

Williamson, who is 36 years old, is alleged to have abstracted securities through a period of seven years, the bonds being taken from estates of which one of whom missed $250,000. The losses have been replaced in full, it was stated by the state banking officials.

Williamson was active in the organization of the American Rowing association, which conducts the Annual Henly regatta.

GIRL KILLS CHUM FOR BOY'S LO[VE]

Doris Anderson, 13, Held in Death of Grace Hagemann, Same Age, Shot in Back.

Chicago, May 12.—Thirteen-year-old Doris Anderson is held by the police today on suspicion that she shot and killed Grace Hagemann, her schoolchum, also 13 years old yesterday afternoon, over the love of a boy.

Grace Hagemann was shot in the back, the bullet emerging at the left side of the chest. Doris, the only girl who saw the shooting insists that Grace shot herself, but the police declare the course taken by the bullet proves this was impossible.

The theory of the little girl's confession for Rhine Fleck, a boy friend, held by the police as a possible suspect for the death of the girl. Jealousy is said to have prompted suicide or murder, the police hold, while considering the possibility that the girls had entered a suicide pact and that the Anderson girl lost her courage when she saw her girl friend fall.

CENSORSHIP PROTEC[TS] BLUNDERING GE[NERALS]

Senator Johnson Pleads That Fathers Be Allowed to Read About Conscripted Sons.

Washington, May 12.—Senator Johnson, of California, moved to strike the entire newspaper censorship section from the espionage bill today but the senate, he did not speak for the press.

"They are sufficiently powerful and influential to care for their own interests," he said. "But it is the plain man who reads, who sees his boy conscripted, for the right of free speech and free press, I plead with you."

After reading a letter from President Wilson to a New York editor, saying as chief executive would never consent to be exempted from criticism, Senator Johnson argued that the lives of the general who led armies needless slaughter could not be criticised.

RUSSIA BACKS PEACE DISCUSSION

Leaders Say One More Effort by Army Would Win War, But They Cannot Make Move.

London May 12 committee of the Russian workmen's and soldiers delegates has resolved to convene in a neutral country an international socialist conference to discuss peace a Reuter's telegram from Petrograd says

Petrograd May 12 Thursday being the anniversary of the opening of the first duma, an extraordinary session of delegates and ex-delegates was held at the Tauride palace The members of the provisional government and foreign diplomates were also present

Applause greeted a speech by President Rodzianko in which he repudiated any idea of a separate peace

"The war which was forced upon us which we did not desire and for which we are in no way responsible must be brought to a successful termination" Rodzianko said "In such a manner that the integrity of the country and the national honor of Russia shall be entirely maintained

"The Germans oppose to these splendid ideals their own program the enslavement of the nations

"Do not forget that the working class of Germany however socialistic they may be ardently desires victory for Germany

"That is why I declare emphatically that the Russian people must make every sacrifice to bring this war in concert with the allies to a complete victory all the more because such a victory would consolidate forever the liberties we have just won

"Russia cannot betray the allies by whose side she has been fighting for three years and she will remain faithful to them"

Prince Lvoff the premier also addressed the duma gathering

Alexander J Guchkoff provisional minister of war and navy in the course of a speech which was received with applause said

"Unfortunately the first feeling of radiant joy evoked by the revolution soon gave place to one of pain and anxiety The destruction of old forms of public life had been effected more rapidly than had the creation of new forms to replace them

Anarchy Now Prevails

"How will that state emerge from this crisis? This is the question for solution and on which will depend not only the consolidation of the liberties won, but the issue of the war and the destinies of the country In any case the duality of power and even polyarchy and the consequent evils now prevailing in the country impede its normal existence difficult

"Only a strong governmental power able to rely on the confidence of the nation can save it

"We received a terrible legacy from the old regime, which was incapable of governing in time of peace and still less was able to do so while waging war.

"One more effort an effort by the whole country, and the enemy will be beaten But we have got to know first of all whether we can make this

London May 12 A Petrograd dispatch to the Daily Express says

"Maxim Gorky, whose anti-British outbursts and assertions that Dr Paul Miliukoff, the Russian foreign minister, is in the pay of Anglo-French capitalists, daily mark the columns of his newspaper, New Life, foreshadows another political crisis, in which the council of workmen's and soldiers delegates will endeavor to retrieve their position The council is very angry at the course of recent events

Petrograd (via London) May 1. Twelve members of the council of soldiers' and workmen's delegates, including the president, have gone to Schluesselburg to cope with the situation created by the district committee in declaring itself an autonomous unit

BULLETS OF FARMERS BRING DOWN BALLOON

Craft Bearing U. S. Army Men Is Forced to Land at Carlisle, Ia.

Des Moines Ia., May 12 Army balloons are making trial flights from Omaha to Des Moines, the pilots teaching recruits how to take observations, was disclosed today when Capt. A Stevens alighted from a balloon at Carlisle, Ia., Thursday, after being shot at by farmers nearby "If you see a balloon traveling over your homes don't shoot at it was the first statement made on his arrival here last night."

His rubber balloon was expressed back to Omaha. Seemingly every farmer thought of German Zeppelins and the pot shooting became so frequent and uncomfortable that Stevens had to descend. He was accompanied by Capt. G. F. Geiger and Lieut. J H. Douett

SEIZED SHIPS TO BEAR HONORED GERMAN NAMES

Washington, D. C., May 11 —The two interned German commerce raiders that were taken over by the United States government will bear the names of Germans who fought with the continental army in the American war for liberty Secretary Daniels announced that the Kronprinz Wilhelm will be renamed the Baron Von Steuben and the Prinz Eitel Friederich the Baron De Kalb. Both vessels will be placed in service under the American flag as soon as repairs are completed.

ITALY SINKS 13 U-BOATS IN ONE WEEK

Berlin Admits the Loss of Two Prominent Sub Commanders in Discussion in Reichstag.

NEW DEVICES TRIED OUT

Improvement in Conditions Is Pointed Out by Frenchman, Who Says Successes Are Being Scored.

Washington, D. C., May 12—Advices to the Italian embassy here say 13 Austrian submarines have been sunk in the Adriatic by Italian patrols during the last week The same dispatches giving no date, say that for the fourth time within a year Italian destroyers have penetrated the fortified port of Durazzo sinking four transports loaded with provisions and ammunition The destroyers returned unscathed

Copenhagen, May 12—The loss of two prominent German submarine commanders, in addition to several previously reported, was disclosed in a reichstag speech yesterday. The men named were Lieutenant Commanders Wagener and Rush, who were eulogized by Herr Pfleger of the center party, in remarks giving the necrology of U-boat commanders of prominence who have lost their lives.

Baltimore Md., May 12—The captain of a Norwegian ship has declared that two months ago women were being used at Settin Germany, to load and discharge steamers, even running the winches on decks and docks. He also stated that it was becoming difficult to get men to volunteer to man the submarines of which a number were being built at Settin

Paris, May 12—Both French and British statistics on submarine sinking during the last week show a certain improvement in the situation, says Marcel Hutin, a usually well informed writer on the subject. He adds

I understand that our means of fighting submarines is increasing daily, and without giving details, I can say that the number of submarines put out of action in the last few days has risen in a very satisfactory manner"

MORE RATE INCREASES TO BE ASKED LATER

Frisco Official Says His Road Sought 20 Per Cent Hike This Time.

Washington, D. C., May 12—During his testimony W B Biddle, of the Frisco system, declared

"If the St Louis-San Francisco had alone been involved in this application, we should have asked for not less than 20 per cent, and should the relief granted by the commission, after a fair trial prove inadequate, we shall certainly feel at liberty to again appear before this commission and for further relief"

Julius Kruttschnitt chairman of the Southern Pacific, said the government's bill in connection with the Mexican mobilization was not paid until a few months ago and the railway had lost about $750,000 in interest

In response to questions from members of the commission, Mr. Kruttschnitt said that if his road could get a 15 per cent advance, the increased revenue only would cover increased operating expenses He estimated that the 15 per cent advance actually would give the railroads about 12 per cent additional revenue

Clifford W Thorne representing shippers, asked Mr Kruttschnitt to furnish a statement showing securities disposed of by the Southern Pacific during the last 10 years, and the rates of interest Mr Kruttschnitt had told the commission his line had experienced some difficulty in obtaining money at reasonable rates.

NEW ROW IN HOLLAND.

The Hague (via London), May 11.—The chamber of deputies, by a vote of 44 to 26, has adopted a motion regretting the government's action in calling up the landsturm of 1908, in opposition to the previously expressed wishes of the chamber. The Handelsblad believes that the minister of war ought to resign, but the supporters of the motion have refused to declare that their action is a vote of no confidence in the war minister.

LAMAR RESUMES DEFENSE.

New York, May 11.—The defense of David Lamar was resumed today in the trial of Capt. Franz Rintelen, of the German navy, and six others charged with conspiring to prevent shipment of munitions to the entente allies.

Rintelen declined yesterday to offer any defense.

SECRET COMMONS SESSION.

London May 11 - When the sitting of the house of commons was resumed today the members again went into secret session

IOWA TROOPS WILL CARRY STATE FLAG

Des Moines Ia., May 12 - Governor Harding's committee for state defense met today with Chairman Lafe Young presiding A state banner which will be carried into war by the Iowa troops was adopted, as suggested by the Daughters and Sons of the Revolution. It contains a shield with the eagle at the top and the Iowa seal. Plans for taking a war census were then taken up.

ALLIES STRIKE IN MACEDONIA

Men and Guns Are Massed by British and French for a New Blow in West.

Saloniki May 12 Advanced trenches in the neighborhood of Dobropolye, on the Macedonian front, have been captured by the Serbians

INTENSE ARTILLARY FIRE.

Berlin, May 12 -Mutual artillery firing of the greatest violence prevailed over the entire Arras front in France yesterday Eighteen British and French airplanes were brought down yesterday on the western front.

Along the entire front in Macedonia, from Monastir to Lake Doiran, a distance of about 100 miles, the allies have opened a great offensive.

Bitter fighting is proceeding in the bend of the Cerna river and in the neighborhood of the Vardar the two points on the Macedonian front where the wild, barbarous country of mountains and sterile deserts is broken by fertile valleys. Military critics are agreed that it is up one of these valleys that the allied forces must force a way

In France the deadlock continues, but behind the fighting line the allies are massing men and guns for another tremendous blow

Meanwhile the news from Russia is increasingly gloomy in nature and it becomes more and more a question whether the provisional government can weather the storm which has been precipitated by the radical socialists and visionaries. In any event there seems little likelihood of any effective military action on the part of Russia for a long time to come.

GAIN ON WIDE FRONT.

London, May 12—Attacking on a front of about 4 miles in the Lake Doiran region of Macedonia, British troops on one wing took Teutonic trenches on a front of two miles and on the other flank advanced on a front of about a mile, according to a British official statement The positions were held notwithstanding violent counter attacks. The enemy suffered severe loss

New Divisions Called.

Paris, May 12—Four fresh German divisions have been observed on the Aisne front since May 7 says an official summary.

"This is irrefutable proof of how rapidly these effectives are being used up. German losses exceed all estimates," the statement adds.

FRENCH IN NEW GAIN.

Paris May 12—French troops captured a German position in the region of Chevreux yesterday evening, according to an official statement issued by the war office this morning Heavy counter attacks by the Germans were repulsed

CLAIM ALLIED REPULSE.

London, May 12—Furious assaults along practically the entire Bulgar-German line in Macedonia by the allied forces are reported in a Bulgarian official statement issued on Thursday. The statement claims the repulse of all attacks, but says that the most violent artillery action is proceeding day and night.

ITALIANS COME TO GET MONEY AND SUPPLIES

Head of Mission Says Ships, Provisions and War Materials Are Wanted.

New York, May 12—Enrico Arlotta, head of the Italian commission, which has just arrived in this country, received newspaper men today and discussed with them the purposes of his mission and the war situation generally

"We come," he said, "to show the great satisfaction we had in seeing the United States approve the purpose of our war.

"We do not need men at the front. We, of course, will be glad to arrange a war loan in America with which to pay for what we have purchased here without disturbing exchange rates.

"What we want above everything else is ships to carry provisions and war materials and we are sure the great industrial power of this country will be amply sufficient for our wants."

"Never mind peace talk or separate peace," he replied, with considerable emotion. "Italy will not make a separate peace in any case.

"As for food, our next harvest will be ready at the end of June, so we have only one month and a half to provide for."

GERMANS USE FIRE; FAIL.

London, May 12—German attacks were delivered last night on the British positions east of Arleux and south of the Souchez river. All the assaults in one of which liquid fire was employed were repulsed.

ENGLISH PLANES DROP BOMBS ON ZEEBRUGGE

Amsterdam, (via London, May 10).—English airplanes mombarded Zeebrugge early this morning. At the same time a flotilla of torpedo boats was observed from Flushing, bombarding the Belgian coast.

The torpedo boat action referred to in the foregoing dispatch presumably is identical with the destroyer engagement reported yesterday.

GERMAN AIR PLANES PUT ON WAR PAINT

Air Service as Well as Land Forces Strengthened by Fresh Forces From the East.

With the British Armies in France (via London), May 12.—(From a staff correspondent of the Associated Press) —The fighting in the air has taken on an entirely new interest recently because of the new German policy of painting their machines most grotesque patterns. These seem to have gotten this idea from the old American Indian costum of painting their faces to frighten their opponents or else the spring fancy of the German airmen have been allowed to run riot with vivid color effects.

Nowadays nothing appears too gaudy to meet the tastes of the enemy airmen, who seem to have been given carte blanche with the paint brush. There are green planes with yellow noses, silver planes with gold noses, khaki colored planes with greenish gray wings, planes with red bodies, green wings and yellow stripes, planes with red body and wings of green on top of blue, planes with light blue body and red wings. Virtually all the gaudiest machines go in for red body, each with every possible combination of colors on their wings.

Just as the Germans have thrown in new divisions of infantry and new batteries of artillery to check the allies' offensive so they have sent aloft hundreds of new machines to contest for the mastery of the air, an important phase of modern war.

So it is with bombing raids. Last night enemy machines dropped three bombs near a railroad station in the British lines, but in one of the half score of raids carried out last night by the British not less than 56 big bombs were dropped on a single German encampment. A tremendous German ammunition dump was blown up. The explosion was so terrific that one of the British planes, 2,000 feet above was blown completely upside down and the surprised pilot had a busy 30 seconds getting his boat on an even keel again. One British squadron had had its eyes on the dump for some time, and the fliers were in high glee today over their success.

In the fighting yesterday the British sent six Germans crashing, and drove down 11 out of control. As a result of bombarding and fighting, only five British machines were missing.

The toll of machines brought down is no index of the number of fights that occur daily. Manifestly they are indecisive where belligerent pilots meet and fight unexpectedly without either being able to give the other "the unlucky bullet" All the fighters expect to get bullets through their machines daily, it is only the "unlucky" one that counts. One distinguished young Briton came flying home a few days ago, grinning almost from ear to ear because he had been in a fight with four hostile red scouts. He was sent scouting and out-maneuvered the rest to such an extent that they were able to put only three bullets into his "bus."

Aviators Fly At Will.

It is the custom of all flying services now to permit the better known pilots to fly when and where they will in search of legitimate prey. The before breakfast exploits of a single British pilot, with such a roving commission, may be taken as typical of the daily adventures and not unusual. Taking the air about 6 o'clock he cruised toward the morning sun and saw three British bombing machines fighting five German albatross scouts. He dived at one of the scouts and began maneuvering for position, when he saw one of the British bombers diving steeply with a hostile craft on his tail The British scout dived for this machine until he saw the bomber flatten out and slip away. He then climbed to 7,000 feet, where he fell in with another British fighting machine, but the pair had not proceeded far when suddenly they were set upon by seven German scouts, albatrosses, including the five who previously had broken off the battle.

Rough and Tumble Fighting.

There was rough and tumble fighting for five or 10 minutes, when the British scout, who was mounted on a fleet triplane, got within 20 yards of one of the Germans and fired point blank into him, then watched him stall, turn over backwards, and last, saw him spinning at 3,000 feet.

Turning sharply, the triplane pilot saw his companion heavily engaged below him, and was diving to his assistance when one of the German attacking machine's nose dived into an inevitable crash, and the others made off. The two Britons now were joined by four other friendly fliers and cruised about some more, until they were attacked by a formation of nine German machines.

Again there was a general melee, when suddenly a red albatross, with a bigger engine than any of the rest, dived on the triplane from above.

The triplane's gun, which already had seen much service, jammed and the pilot tried to withdraw temporarily from the combat. He could not shake one hostile machine off his trail. One bullet shot the triplane's pump away, so the pilot kept turning and eventually got right under the German scout and stopped there. He turned whenever the German turned and dived whenever he dived, and the German could not find him. Meantime, he got his gun cleared and filled and fired at the enemy when the latter was about 20 feet in front and 10 feet above him.

The German started to climb, but stalled and began to dive, turning slowly around, until he disappeared in the mist, well below.

The triplane now saw two more albatrosses well to the east and started to attack them, but found all its ammunition gone and returned home for 8 o'clock breakfast.

NO PEACE AGREEMENT.

Washington, D. C., May 11.—Secretary Lansing today denied published reports that the United States has an agreement with the entente allies not to make a separate peace with Germany.

Interest in the attitude of the government springs from announcements that the German chancellor soon is to make another offer of peace terms.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

[illegible] ances and in registering un-naturalized citizens has aroused much interest all over the country. Before the war with Germany was declared the freedom of speech was not restricted. A person could discuss matters of public policy without fear of being molested [illegible] cleared the air [illegible] changed very materially and numerous arrests have been made because of statments that at this time partake of disloyalty. It is very important that all naturalized Germans give the strictest heed to their speech and conduct during the trying and exciting times. Every person who came from Germany and became a naturalized citizen of the United States took the following oath of allegiance:

"I hereby declare, on oath, that I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state or sovereignty and particularly to the Kaiser of Germany of whom I have heretofore been a subject; that I will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic; and that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same —Iowa Farmer.

BETTER TAKE IT

We once knew a man who was too stingy to take the local newspaper and always went over to borrow his neighbor's. One evening he sent his son over to borrow the paper on a saddle horse and when the son was a short distance from the farm the horse shied throwing the boy off and spraining his arm. Hearing the agonized cries of the son, the father ran to his assistance in doing so he ran into a barbed wire fence, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $4 pair of trousers. The old cow took advantage of the hole in the fence, got into the grainfield and still [illegible] herself eating wheat. Hearing the racket the stingy man's wife ran out of the house upsetting a four gallon churn full of cream into a basket of kittens drowning the whole flock. She slipped on the cream fell down the steps breaking her leg and a $19 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone crawled through the spilled cream in the parlor and ruined a $40 carpet. During the excitment the daughter eloped with the hired man taking the family savings bank with them, the calves got out and the dog broke up the eleven setting hens.

MADE THE TEACHER HOIST OLD GLORY

We were informed by one of our readers last week that a certain school teacher in the Cylinder neighborhood does not bear the marks of a true American. Altho a flag pole has long ago been provided by the school board on which to fly the colors she has always until just very recently, refused to hoist the stars and stripes. This, it seems, did not take well with the scholars as they demanded that the flag be raised. Still she refused. This was more than some of the scholars would endure so the matter was reported to the board of directors, and after advising the school ma'am that her position as teacher depended on her future conduct in this matter, she decided to follow instructions of the school board. We refrained from dealing in names here as it might be very embarrasing to the dear little teacher, but it might be well for her to bear in mind the fact that this paper does not make a practice of protecting a person showing disloyalty to the United States government, and any future actions of this kind on the part of this school teacher would prompt us to reveal her identity —Fenton Reporter.

TREAT SEED POTATOES

The Prevalence of Scab on the High-Priced Seed Potatoes This Year Makes it Imperative That They Be Treated With Chemicals Before Planting.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

While the operation of treating is comparatively simply, close attention must be given to the direction and details followed absolutely. Your carelessness may mean ruin of the potatoes or danger to children or stock. Simply—Be Car ful.

According to your conditions and equipment, the seed potatoes may be treated in crates loose in barrels or in sacks. Treatment must be done before the potatoes are cut or sprouted.

The [illegible] method is to mix one pint of formaldehyde (be sure it is full strength) with thirty gallons of water. Soak the seed stock in this solution for two hours, just before you are ready to start cutting. This solution may be reused two or three times, if no time is lost between batches. [illegible] easiest ways is to [illegible] a barrel and [illegible] potatoes in a [illegible]

[illegible] is an excellent chemical to use and will kill rhizictonia as well as scab but it is a deadly poison and must be kept where children or stock will not get it. All vessels used with this material should be [illegible] afterwards. If you prefer this, use four ounces of corrosive sublimate to thirty gallons of water, and soak the potatoes for an hour in [illegible] powdered chemical [illegible] dissolved in hot [illegible] metal vessels. After treating the potatoes should be promptly washed in clean water until all traces of the solution are gone, and the [illegible] should be carefully dried, the sooner the better.

It only takes a little time and very little money to treat all your seed potatoes by either method and it pays big [illegible] bushels of better potatoes, free from disease.

Profit in First Class Seed Corn.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

I have been able to raise 30 bushels of choice seed corn on an acre seed plot. For this seed I received an average of $3.50 per bushel, which makes a return of $105 for this seed alone, in addition to 40 or 50-odd bushels left for feeding purposes.

I have black loam soil that has always been in the highest state of fertility. I apply a heavy coat of stable manure in the fall, plow the field early in the spring, disk four times and harrow until a firm seed bed is obtained. For seed, I used eighteen of the choicest, highest testing seed ears which I could secure.

On May 21st I planted, checking corn into hills forty-two inches each way. At this time I drilled in 450 pounds per acre of a high-grade fertilizer. The corn was given the very best of care and as a result of this intensive cultivation and the balanced plant-food ration, it matured by the 15th of September, at which time I picked the seed corn and put it on drying racks in a heated drying house so as to be in first-classed condition for buyers.—Heiron J. Black, Burlington, Wis.

PROPER SEEDS

There is Still a Fair Supply Quickly Available.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

A great many of our farmers will not plant their full acreage this year on account of a supposed shortage of seeds. We are informed by the wholesale seedsman in the country and the various experiment stations in the states, that there is still a moderate supply of pedigreed barley and certain kinds of corn on hand for quick shipment.

Potato is going to be the hardest seed to obtain. However in most instances, potatoes can go in last. The advantage of a state Potato Growers' Association was never more apparent than now.

OUR PLATFORM.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

The four fundamentals following are being taught where grain is a factor:

First.—Establishment of one variety of each kind of seed best adapted to soil and climate.

Second.—The fanning and grading to obtain a uniform seed, free from trash, immature grain and weed seeds.

Third.—treatment of grain diseases by use of formaldehyde, etc.

Fourth.—Testing for vitality of all seeds with the assistance of the school children of the community.

WHISKERS ON BARLEY.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Considerable complaint has been made in the past on account of the obnoxious character of the beards of barley during harvesting and subsequent handling. This objection has been largely removed since the introduction of the binder, self feeder attachments to threshing machines and self straw stackers. There is little danger in using the straw for feeding or bedding for stock.

FARMING COMMUNITY QUESTION.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Far be it from us to urge the farmers to do anything more than they are already doing, but in case any of our farmers are prevented from planting their maximum acreage through the lack of money, labor, power or seeds, it is a public question and we ought to help them solve it immediately.

The whole panel of the jury drawn for duty at the present term of court at Webster City, by Judge E. M. McCall has been dismissed because of the fact that practically all of them were farmers. Judge McCall took this action in order that these men might be able to give their entire time to farm work, which he considers of much greater importance at this time than the work of his court. No jury cases will be heard at this term of court.

With the idea of establishing a free mental dispensary in every county in the state and also one at the state university a society known as the Iowa Mental Hygiene Society has been organized in Des Moines. The aim is to distribute literature, to educate people along lines of mental health, to raise the standards of the care and treatment and to organize the free dispensaries where nervous and mental disorders can be examined. Many prominent physicians and legal men of the state are among the founders of the society.

BRITISH EXPERT LAUDS RAILROADS OF UNITED STATES

Tells Congress Committee That They Lead World.

NO GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

It Would Mean Political Control and Loss of Efficiency—Declares That Crisis Confronts Country on Account of Transportation Situation—Lowest Freight Rates to Be Found in United States.

Washington, May 14.—That the United States is face to face with a serious crisis in its commercial affairs, due to the conditions by which its transportation system is confronted, was the opinion expressed by W. M. Acworth, England's leading authority on railways, before the Newlands joint committee on interstate commerce at a special session held here to enable the committee to hear his views before his departure for London this week. Two steps are necessary, according to Mr. Acworth, to avert this crisis and to solve the threatening railroad problem confronting the country.

The first is to allow the railroads to charge freight rates sufficient to meet the great advance in operating expenses which is taking place and to enable them to command the credit necessary to provide the extensions and improvements needed to meet the growing demands of business. The second is to do away with the multiple and conflicting systems of regulation that now hamper railway operation and to provide one centralized regulatory agency with such local subdivisions as may be necessary.

Higher Rates a Public Necessity.

Mr. Acworth's views on the transportation situation in the United States were expressed in answer to questions by members of the committee, who asked him to apply his knowledge of railway conditions throughout the world and of the experience of other countries with government ownership to the present problem before the United States.

"The fundamental factor in the situation is very simple," said Mr. Acworth. "It lies in the fact that you cannot get three-quarters of a cent's worth of work done for less than three-quarters of a cent, no matter whether the agency performing it is a government or private enterprise. Freight rates must advance when the cost of performing the service advances as it is doing at present, just as the price of bread or meat or any other commodity increases with increased cost of production."

In answer to a question Mr Acworth said that he thought American freight rates had been at much too low a level for several years past, that they had reached this low point during the period of cutthroat competition among the roads and had since been held there by regulating bodies. Unless relief were afforded to the carriers very promptly, he said, the result would be a tremendous loss to the people of the whole country through insufficiency of transportation facilities.

Weakness of Government Ownership.

On the subject of government ownership of railways Mr. Acworth said:

"It is impossible to obtain satisfactory results on government railways in a democratic state unless the management is cut loose from direct political control. Neither Australia nor any other country with a democratic constitution—perhaps an exception ought to be made of Switzerland—has succeeded in maintaining a permanent severance. In France, in Belgium, in Italy, parliamentary interference never has been abandoned for a moment. The facts show that government interference has meant running the railways not for the benefit of the people at large, but to satisfy local and sectional and even personal interests.

Prussia, Mr. Acworth said, was the best example of an efficient government railway system, and he pointed out that military considerations were treated as of paramount importance in the Prussian railway system. While American freight rates had been reduced nearly 40 per cent in thirty years, rates in Prussia were nearly as high as at the beginning of the period. While the charge for moving a ton of freight one mile in the United States was a trifle over three-quarters of a cent, the rate in Prussia was 1.41 cents.

As illustrating the difference in rates between government and private roads Mr. Acworth compared the railways of New South Wales, Australia, with those of Texas. While the amount of traffic to each mile of line was about the same in both cases, he pointed out, the Texas railways performed for the public four times as much service as the government owned roads of New South Wales. The charge in Texas for hauling a ton of freight one mile was less than 1 cent, while in the Australian state it was well over 2 cents.

"American railways lead the world," said Mr. Acworth. "Nowadays when men in any other part of the world want to know how to run a railway they come to the United States and study your railways here. The American railways are entirely the result of private enterprise, and I think they go a long way toward proving the case against government ownership."

PREPARE MORE LAND —GROW MORE FOOD

"Seed and Feed" the Slogan of the Year.

The papers are filled with the appeal for soldiers, sailors and farmers, and all are timely, all are necessary. The sailor is needed to man the ships that protect the shores, police the seas and clear the ocean of tormenting and meddlesome masked buccaneers, to give help to the allies, to make more efficient the present fighting units that are keeping free the sea lanes and ocean routes. The soldier is required to keep alive and intact the unity of the nation and the freedom of the world to protect the lives of its citizens from incursions without and raids within to guard the honor and preserve the dignity of the great United States, to render not only sentimental but practical assistance to those who for two and a half years on the battlefields of Flanders and the steppes of the East have been fighting for the freedom of the world against a dominant autocratic and militarist Prussianism, which, were it to become successful would mean autocratism militarism and Prussianism, and a "get-off-the-sidewalkism" over the entire world. The allies are proud to welcome these new accessions to the fighting forces, which mean an earlier termination of the war and the dawn of an era that will be historic, one that we will all be proud that we lived in. Throughout all Canada, Great Britain France, and all the allied countries, when the news was received that the United States had entered the war, a thrill went up and down the nation's sides, and the pulses throbbed with a new life, keenly appreciative of the practical sentiment that had brought to their sides an ally of the strength and virility of the United States.

But the soldier and the sailor need to be fed and therefore the cry for agricultural enlistment. The strength of the fighting man must be maintained. In his absence from the field there comes the necessity for provision to take his place. The appeal for farm help is well timed, opportune and important. There are vacant lands aplenty in the United States that, given a fair opportunity under competent advisement and reasonable help, will produce abundantly. Western Canada also presents an excellent field for the prosecution of work in growing wheat and other grains, and while it is not the desire of the Canadian Government to divert from the resources of the United States, believing that it is the duty of every patriotic citizen to do all he possibly can to build up the stores of depleted foods and making use of every energy at home, the wish is to lay before the public the fact that there are millions of acres of excellent land capable of producing wonderful crops. If for any reason the call of a living patriotism and a love of his country in his heart and a desire to forward the cause of the allies does not avail himself of the opportunities offered in the United States, Western Canada will be glad to render him every assistance it can in locating him on vacant areas where large crops can be grown at minimum of cost. Let us grow the grain raise the cattle produce the food to feed our soldiers our sailors and provide food for our allies no matter whether it is done to the North or to the South of the boundary line that in the object in view should not be known as a boundary. Let us keep up the spirit of patriotism whether it be growing grain in the United States or in Canada but Canada fully alive to the necessity, joins in the appeal of its allies—the United States—for more food and more food.—Advertisement.

Smith put Waller's hand away from him.

"I'm not going to run away," he said, with quiet, unnatural calmness. "I shall tell you the truth. I shall tell Senator Mallon—everybody here—and, through them, the world."

He spoke in a low, tense voice, and managed to convey the impression that he pitied Mary Leslie.

"I don't know you, and yet you may have known me. There may have been a time when I was all the world to you. But I do not know. I cannot say."

He passed the back of his right hand across his brow slowly.

"I don't even know who I am—from where I came — my own name. My memory is only five years old." He punctuated that with a smile infinitely sad. "So you see, I couldn't possibly, under any circumstances, know you now. You say you knew me six years ago? Five years ago I lost my memory. Whisky destroyed it—utterly. All the life I had lived all the places I had seen, my whole personal history, all the thoughts of my brain—everything was wiped from my consciousness absolutely and entirely. I say, all the thoughts. There was one that left its shadow, a ghost, a compelling terror, on my mind: That was the knowledge that whisky had dealt me this terrific blow." He spread out his hands and smiled lightly. "That is why I do not like whisky." He spoke very gently. "I do not believe I ever knew you—ever knew you very well. I don't think I ever did. But I cannot say."

On the end of that there was only Edith's shuddering cry as she sank into the chair beside her. Mrs. Kane bent over her, shielding her from the view of the others.

Edith's grief had a great and immediate effect on Smith. He wheeled upon Mallon, and, as he moved, there was in his figure and in his face all his customary brilliancy, all his alertness, all his ardent strength.

"What I do believe," he said in ringing tones, "is that the other side instigated this whole scene to discredit me in the eyes of congress and the country. They think they can defeat the movement for which I stand by branding me as a man with a criminal past. How foolishly they have planned! Even if they could prove me guilty of the most revolting, the most degraded, conduct, they would insure merely their own downfall. I am only one, a unit, an infinitesimal fraction, in the great sum of public opinion against which they fight in vain."

Mallon put up a hand to interrupt him. He disregarded him.

"You will hear me now! Look at me as I am—a miserable man, a makeshift, one who does not know his own identity! Back of me there is hung, from the heavens to my heels, a wall of darkness from behind which nameless horrors may spring upon me in the twinklinge of an eye. Instead of memories to soothe my soul, I have the sword of suspense to torture my mind. Instead of the lessons of experience to light my way, I entertain weird creatures of self-suspicion that drag me back. Look at me as I am!—this miserable man, unknowing and unknown! Think of it!"

He paused and stood a moment, his arms outspread, a statue of woe, a man upon whose head the bolts of the world's anguish had fallen. Waller laid his hand on his shoulder, but he shook it off. His spirit was aflame, brave, in rebellion. He was fighting against the other side. He was possessed with the eager desire to throw upon the world's consciousness the exact picture of what he had suffered.

"There is nothing I care to conceal," he said to Waller, and added to Mallon: "Imagine, if you can, some of the degrees of my infinite misery. Picture my yearning to go back through the years and weep beside the grave of one whose startled soul, following folly with me, may have met death unaware. Measure, if you can, the fine torture born of the fear that some time, somewhere, I stilled the laughter of a child or taught a woman to weep anew."

He pointed, with lightning-like gesture, to Mary.

"Right here, in our very presence, is the concrete example of what I mean. If I have known this woman, if I have brought her to her tears, what would I not give if I had tried long ago to undo the wrong?"

His voice rang with scorn.

"And yet, my enemies think to use me as an argument in behalf of whisky! They believe they can say to the country, 'Look at him, think of what he suffers, and then be persuaded that what he preaches is all wrong!' They jeer at me who, rising from the ashes of my own destruction, dared to lift my voice against the thing that struck me down. I tell you that they are all wrong! Tell the people, tell congress, what I am; describe to them the agony of my appalling repentance; picture me as cut off from the love of woman and the hope of children. Let them advertise the fact that I grope my way through the days and nights with a crippled mind and a trembling and twisted soul. Let them say that I am an exile from love and an alien to peace!"

His scorn possessed the air, like a writhing, lashing, live thing.

"Let them say all that, and let them boast, 'Whisky did these things to this man. Therefore, mothers, give whisky to your sons. Whisky hurt John Smith, who cries out against it. Whisky tore down his ideals and wiped out the dreams of his youth. Therefore, men, give whisky to your women!' There! You have it—their whole argument—the anguish of a man who cannot tell wether in the years that are dead he loved a wretched woman whose shrill voice assails him in the sight of men. Let them make the most of it! Let them blazon it to the world—and spell out of it the certain syllables of their own approaching doom!"

He stood with upflung right hand, his spirit exalted, his whole attitude a brave defiance.

Edith, springing to her feet and indicating Mary Leslie with a gesture, carried the defiance further.

"I know," she said, her voice silver clear, "you never knew her!"

"He did!" Mary shrilled. "He did!"

Suddenly he looked worn, weary.

"I have told you that—already," he said dully. "I—don't—know."

CHAPTER XXIV.

The terrific tension that had held the group spell bound snapped at last. The situation had been sucked dry. Its actors and auditors felt that there was nothing more. The thing was done—played out. They began to change their positions, to breathe more freely. Smith, turning without a word to anybody, followed Waller out of the room. As he went he was conscious that the two reporters rushed toward Mary Leslie to ply her with questions; that Mrs. Kane and Edith started toward the music room door; that Senator Mallon's call to Waller to come back was unanswered.

In the street, Smith moved like a man impelled by a craving for action, speed, hurry.

"I want to go with you." Waller made the first remark since leaving the house. He spoke in a jesting tone, seeking to relieve the emotional strain. "But I can't keep up if you walk like this."

"I wonder," Smith answered him, "if we can get a taxicab anywhere near here."

"Yes; there's a garage around on Nineteenth street."

"Let's go there."

They walked a little farther in silence.

"Of course," Smith said at last, "I'm wondering what effect it will have."

"And I'm wondering," Waller retorted reproachfully, "why you didn't confide in me long ago."

The agitator smiled slightly, touched by the other's evident devotion to him.

"Oh," he said, "what could have been the use?"

They were conversing jerkily, tersely, as men do when they are greatly moved.

"It must have been pretty tough on you," Chollie wollie said. "I never suspected how very touch it was."

Smith was looking straight ahead.

"It has been hell," he agreed simply.

"And yet, you have so much to make you feel at this moment very proud."

"Ah," Smith exclaimed, with a touch of impatience, "how can I feel proud? What can a man boast when he put in more than 30 years of his life doing so little that he left behind him neither sign nor trail? Why, the only way I can guess at my age is to take what the doctors deduct from my general physical condition. And how can I feel at ease? If what that woman has just said is true—if a fractional part of it is true—how can I really know that there isn't murder behind me, that some night I didn't leave a stark, cold thing lying on the roadside with its sightless eyes turned toward the moon? How can I know that the faces of those whom I should have loved have not been ravaged by grief because of me? Those are the things, the thoughts, the fears, that swoop down on me and blot out at times all the light in my soul."

To Chollie wollie, he seemed too near a breakdown. He had never heard him speak with such bitterness.

"There is this to be remembered," the newspaper man took a new tack: "the Leslie woman's story is a lie. That's certain."

"Why is it certain?"

"Somehow, I know it. I haven't been in my business all this time for nothing. I've felt for weeks that the whisky people had something on you. I've been more afraid of it than you have. But this—why, this is a cheap grandstand play. It's too evident."

"She seemed," Smith commented heavily, "tremendously in earnest, thoroughly sincere."

"But she was lying," Waller persisted, and, when the other made no reply, continued: "If I can only write this thing the way it happened! If I can only get into my story all the things you said! It was wonderful, immense. I believe it will do you more good than harm."

The way you will write it, yes, but how about all the other stories that will go out of Washington today and tonight?"

"Leave that to me," Chollie wollie cheered him. "There'll be a parade like a bread line into my office tonight. Every correspondent in town will want the carbon copy of the story of the man who witnessed the scene. And my story will be the thing that will give them their first impression of what happened. That's 50 per cent of the whole thing."

"What would you advise me to do today?"

"Go back to your office and get to work as usual. I know it'll be hard, but it's the thing to do."

"And the newspaper men?"

"Receive them this afternoon as usual. Answer their questions."

"That will be easy," Smith smiled. "I don't know anything."

"Exactly," Waller agreed. "That's what makes it good."

"And what will become of the Leslie woman?"

"Oh, they'll all get statements from her and elaborate her story. You'll have to remember that. Tomorrow will be a field day for her in the papers. Your turn will come later."

"Yes, I understand that."

"But I'm not through with her. I intend to get the truth from her sooner or later. She was lying. I know she was lying."

They reached the garage and took a taxicab, directing the chauffeur to drive to Smith's office.

The agitator sat leaning a little forward, looking through the window nearest him. He was confronted by the big menace of his life, as far as he knew his life. Whether true or false, the accusation that had been made against him might break irretrievably the hold he had had on the imagination and hearts of the country. The people who followed him and looked up to him were, necessarily, the best element of the population, men and women to whom the moral and the decent must make a final and strong appeal. And the thing laid at his door was something that could not be explained away.

His personality, however brilliant and however commanding, might not be taken as a complete refutation of what had been charged against him. Indeed, the chances were that he could not refute it. He confessed his ignorance of all that had been said. "I don't know," did not sound like a convincing denial of an offense against the laws of God and man. These things came into his mind compelling, but, over them all, was his memory of Edith's face, Edith's shuddering cry. The opposition had struck him in the two vital spots: the work and the woman. Unconsciously, as his thoughts whirled, he put out his hand and laid it on Waller's knee.

Chollie wollie knew what the other had been thinking. He knew also, that new thoughts must take the place of those if Smith was to continue his efficiency.

"Crawdlor got back to town last night," he informed Smith. "I told him you wanted him to make the motion from the floor to discharge the committee from further consideration of the prohibition resolution and to pass it by a vote of the House."

"What did he say?" Smith inquired absently.

"He said that, next to being president, he'd rather do that than anything else in the world."

"Crawdlor's a good man,"—Smith gave a little more of his attention to the conversation—"a good man and a good congressman."

"I'm going to put out an interview from him tonight," Waller went on. "I wrote it myself and showed it to him. He said it was all right."

"What's it about, specifically?"

"He enumerates the big men who are back of this movement, the strong fighters who are out for prohibition. You know the lobby has been saying you had no powerful following. Mitchell was out yesterday with a statement that you were the leader of a lot of women and cranks."

"Oh, did he say that? You know nearly all of history has been made by women and cranks."

"That's a good line!" Waller exaggerated his enthusiasm. "I'll stick it into the interview. Anyway, Crawdlor points out that there are 12 men in the House and one in the Senate who had to go to Keeley institutes to get the liquor out of them before they could realize the possibilities for greatness and usefulness that were in them. The list of your supporters is a dandy. It includes three ex-governors of states, two millionaires, a famous evangelist, and a line of senators, cabinet officers, representatives, and big state officials that would reach from here to Baltimore.

When they stepped to the pavement. Waller told the chauffeur to wait and drew Smith aside.

"What have you on for today?" he asked.

"I want to get through with the last details of the line of march."

"What have you decided?"

"It won't do to bring them all down Pennsylvania avenue. It would take too long. You see, we estimate a crowd of 50,000—some of them old, many of them women and children. Besides, I want to carry out the symbolism of the idea that the whole country is marching to the capitol to ask for this thing. I want the marchers to approach the capitol from all four sides—Pennsylvania avenue, North Capitol street, East Capitol street, and up by Delaware avenue. I want the whole mass to come to the doors of that building from all directions."

"That's perfect—and perfectly appropriate."

He started to leave Smith, but hesitated.

"Tell me," he urged; "what's bothering you? There's something puzzling you this minute. What is it?"

Smith looked at him seriously.

"I was wondering," he said gravely, "whether I'd better give up the plan of leading the line down the avenue. I mean, on account of what has occurred today."

"Give up!" Waller exclaimed. "Not on your life! I'd lead that line in spite of hail, high water, and hiccoughs! That's what I would do. Now, I'm going up and get my story out. The sooner the better. I'll drop back here as soon as possible."

He shook Smith's hand and went back to the cab, directing the chauffeur to go to his newspaper office.

He stepped in, took his seat, lit a cigar, and then, as if on impulse, put his head out the window and drawled to the driver:

"It may be of interest to you to know that the man you brought down here has got more real nerve than you ever saw—enough nerve to stand up against what would cut the heart out of 17,000,000 Goliaths in two and a half seconds!"

HYGIENIC AND ECONOMIC

Dr. Charles E. Banks, of the public health service, writes me asking me to call the attention of my readers to the hygienic necessity of using whole wheat bread as a staple food. This time of stress, when economic necessity may cause radical changes in our diets, is an opportune one.

He says that the flour in general use has been bled white by the millers, that it represents the starchy white portion remaining after most of the nutritious elements except starch and gluten have been bolted out. He says that experiments show that test chickens fed exclusively on bleached white flour after 20 days will become paralyzed from malnutrition and that a few days feeding on the parts of the grain bolted out will restore them to health.

White flour has no value except that due to starch and a moderate amount of wheat protein. It appeals to the housewife because it looks white and pretty, it keeps well, it works up well into bread and pastries, and it makes attractive bread. It is commercially attractive because it keeps well in all climates. It is a dead, inert substance that resists bacterial processes well and is not easily fermented.

On the other hand, whole wheat flour contains the wheat germ and in consequence does not keep so well. The very vitalizing quality of the flour makes it less stable.

In the parts of the wheat berry ordinarily bolted out are the vitamines, necessary for continued health, the phosphates, and other mineral matter needed by the human body a considerable part of the proteins, most of the fats, and some of the carbohydrates. The very ingredients of the berry not needed for health are made into by-products and sold to farmers as food for cattle and hogs.

The United States public health service issued a bulletin on this subject in 1916. Any one who reads this bulletin will understand why many Americans are constipated, pasty and anaemic.

As things now are the consumer has trouble in getting whole wheat flour from dealers. Having unsuccessfully tried some of the grocery stores some have purchased coffee mills and grind their own flour.

A person taking a mixed diet expects to get from other foods the ingredients which are lacking in flour. The suggestion offered by Dr Bass is that we change our custom now. The wide demand for whole wheat flour would be followed by an easily obtainable supply of flour and increased healthfulness of bread.

DISCOVERER BORN ON ALL FOOLS' DAY

William Harvey Worked Out His Important Theory, But It Took the Microscope to Prove It.

If not an instance of the irony of fate it is, at any rate, a curious coincidence that April 1 should be the natal day of a man who was very far from being of the sort to whom the day is popularly dedicated. This man was William Harvey, made famous for all time by his discovery of the circulation of the blood. Harvey was born at Folkestone, England, on April 1, 1578.

The tremendous importance of this discovery is indicated by the following excerpt from the biography of Harvey in the new Encyclopedia Britannica: "Aristotle taught that in man and the higher animals, the blood was elaborated from the food in the liver, thence carried to the heart, and sent by it through the veins over the body. His successors in the Alexandrian school of medicine, Erasistratus and Herophilus, further elaborated his system, and taught that while the veins carried blood from the heart to the members, the arteries carried a subtle kind of air or spirit.

"For the practical physician only slight changes had been made in this theory of the circulation between the Christian era and the Sixteenth century. Galen had discovered that the arteries were not, as their name implies, merely air pipes, but that they contained blood as well as air or spirit."

Shakespeare and even Homer knew that the blood was not stagnant, but only one had a conception of a continuous stream returning to its source in the heart in the true sense of the word, either in the system or in the lungs. "Servetus, at one point only was the demonstration of the circulation incomplete. Harvey could not discover the capillary channels through which the blood passes from the arteries to the veins. This gap in the circulation was supplied several years later by the great anatomist Marcello Malpighi, who in 1661 saw in the lungs of a frog, by the newly invented microscope, how the blood passes from one set of vessels to the other. Harvey saw all that could be seen by the unaided eye in his observations on living animals. Malpighi, four years after Harvey's death, by another observation on a living animal, completed the splendid chain of evidence."

Harvey formally announced his remarkable discovery in 1628, but he had begun to expound it to his classes in 1616. It is gratifying to learn now that "Harvey himself and all his contemporaries, were well aware of the novelty and importance of his theory."

How to Have Beautiful Hair.

From the Philadelphia Record.

It is possible for everyone to have attractive growth of hair. Persistent painstaking, however, is needful to bring out the beauty of a head of hair.

First take care of the scalp and hair every day.

Massage the scalp all over the head with the finger tips once a day.

Brush the hair (100 strokes of the brush) every night.

Massage of the scalp increases the flow of blood through scalp and nourishes the roots of hair, promoting growth and giving it luster. Brushing the hair removes all the dust and dirt hidden away among the strands of hair which has collected there during the day from the dust of the streets and the home or workshop.

The hair needs to be shampooed once a week if it is naturally oily, but if it is very dry once every two weeks is frequent enough for the shampoo.

To shampoo the hair, dip the head into a basin of soapy water, never rub soap on the hair; make a suds in the water and put the hair into. Move the head around in the basin of water, run the fingers through the hair and rub the scalp with the water, well into the scalp and hair. After this good rubbing then rinse the scalp and hair in clear water, several fresh, clear waters; then if you can (in your bathroom) spray the hair and head with tepid water until every trace of the soap is removed from the hair. After this treatment dry the hair in the sunshine if possible, lifting the hair and shaking the hair until it is free from moisture. If there is no sunshine dry the hair with towels until it is dry. Dust, dandruff, dirt and grease will ruin any head of hair.

Illinois Siren.

An intoxicated man hailed a cab. After he had climbed in, the driver leaned over and asked, "What street do you want?"

"What streets have you?" he inquired.

"Lots of 'em," smiled the cabby, scoring him.

"Gimme 'em all," he said, waving his arm grandly.

After they had been driving for several hours, the man in the cab ordered a halt.

"How much do I owe you?"

"Seven dollars and fifty cents."

"Well—you better drive back till I get to 35 shents, 'cause thashall I have."

PLACE TO HANG PICTURE

A young teacher of this city, home on kindergarten work in a large western city, told this story, which she teaches for. The teacher was anxious to improve the home life of the little foreigners she taught, so she bought some inexpensive pictures and gave one to each child, asking that the picture be hung on the wall of the home. The little foreigner took the picture with evident reluctance, and the next day brought it back and handed it to the teacher.

"Why didn't you hang it on the wall like the others did, instead of bringing it back?" teacher asked. In the explanation that followed it developed that the youngster lived in a large loft-room, with four other families besides his own. Each of the other families had a wall, while the kindergartner's family lived in the middle of the room, hence had no place to hang pictures.—Indianapolis News.

Dogs and the Dye-Pot.

The Chinese sleeve-dogs, called Pekingese, are so fashionable nowadays and fetch such high prices that dealers of them are making a lot of money in the business. Also dealers.

Unfortunately, the dealers are not always honest, and it is just as well to avoid buying such dogs from street venders and other nonresponsible persons. The animals may not be exactly what they seem.

The color specially desired for a Pekingese is a delicate shade of brown. Dogs of this kind are of various hues; and an unscrupulous dealer finds no serious difficulty in making them brown, to match any shade. He simply dips the dog into a pail of hydrogen peroxide a few times until his coat is bleached and then dyes him, by artificial means, to the fashionable tint.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You say to the drug store man, "Give me a small bottle of freezone." This will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn relieves the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, dries up and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that freezone dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without irritating the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to order a small bottle from his wholesale drug house for you.—adv.

To Keep Tab on Housewives.

Housewives in the canton of Basel-City are in a fever of excitement, according to a Lausanne dispatch to the European edition of the New York Herald. The edict has gone forth that gendarmes in that canton can enter any private house on the meatless days, Tuesday and Friday and inspect what is cooking in the "marmite." One can imagine the welcome a gendarme will receive from a German-Swiss "frau" as he crosses the threshold of her kitchen.

There has been a perfect storm of abuse over it in the grand conseil of Basel-Ville, but the vote was 75 against 16. Cooking meat on Tuesday and Friday is punishable by fines up to 1,000 francs, and one month's imprisonment.

A few weeks after Mr. Newlywed was married he said to his wife one morning: "Martha, I wish you'd write to that old colored cook your folks have in Atlanta, and find out how she makes the splendid muffins that we used to have there for breakfast."

Mrs. Newlywed did so, and about a week later received the following reply:

"Dear Missy: To make the muffins you-all spoke about take as much cornmeal flour eggs molasses sugar salt and butter as you think you need, cordling to the number of persons you think you're going to have stir them all together and bake in a hot oven."—Mrs. Estelle Goodfellow, Maine.

FAIR ELECTION NOW WOULD RESULT IN SOCIALISTS OF GERMANY OBTAINING POWER

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.

Copyright, 1917, The Tribune Ass'n.

Socialism has been growing so rapidly in Germany during the war that if a national election were held today and all men permitted to vote, the socialist party would dominate the reichstag. Officials and army leaders realize this, and it is one of the reasons there were no elections for parliament last fall, as the German constitution provided. Socialism and democracy go hand in hand in Germany. Just before Ambassador James W. Gerard left Berlin every one was talking about the reform which would come after the war. Desiring peace above everything else, the work to be done gratis. The registrars have not received their final instructions yet but it is understood that all those who come within the conscription age and do not register on or before that date are subject to a jail sentence. We have went over the poll book and have found that the following young men in the city of Klemme are within the ages of 21 and 30 and subject to conscription. The list does not contain any of those outside of the incorporation nor does it mean that all of them are subject to military duty because there are undoubtedly a number of them who would not be able to pass the required examination.

The following list may not be complete but it is nearly so

[illegible] with him the food situation. It had a good effect upon the socialists and the people when they read that their kaiser had really consulted one of their number.

Radicals Oppose Credits.

When the war broke out the socialist members of the reichstag as a unit voted with the other members for the first war credits. But since then the party has split, and at present there is a social democratic party led by Scheidemann, and a socialist labor party led by Wolfgang Heine and Eduard Bernstein. Scheidemann's group has been the strongest supporter of the chancellor and the government in the reichstag, and because the chancellor has made so many concessions to this group Scheidemann has been considered a semiofficial spokesman of the government. The radical wing of the party, however, is not only opposed to the principles of the social democratic group, but its members believe the socialists made a mistake in voting for the first war credits. During the last two sessions of the reichstag, when war credits were voted, this minority party voted against the proposed funds for the continuation of the war.

It is difficult to tell in war times which one of these groups represents the most people. In the few elections which have been held to fill vacancies in the reichstag caused by the death of members the two groups have fared about equally. Scheidemann, because of his popularity among the people, and because he is practically the only socialist who is permitted by the government to travel about and lecture, is considered the most influential socialist in Germany. Bernstein and his followers, who are secretary anti-Hohenzollern and anti-army, are prevented from holding public meetings, and the government has refused to recognize their group as a special political party. When the chancellor calls the party leaders to his palace for a conference he never invites the radicalists. But from the standpoint of democracy in Germany this small socialist labor group has the most advanced ideas. Bernstein was one of the first Germans to approve the ideas of the American League to Enforce Peace, and he has been an exponent of American ideas in Germany. He is an old man, and therefore not as daring as Scheidemann or Liebknecht, but having spent something like 15 years in England and having a son in London today, he is a heart a thorough democrat and a man who believes in a republican Germany.

Scheidemann Forceful Leader.

Personally Scheidemann impresses one as being sincere and earnest. He is as well educated as any public man in Germany today. He is one of the most forceful orators there, and impresses every one he meets with his masterful executive ability. He is practically the dictator of the policies and ideas of the "Vorwaerts." Many of the leading editorials in this newspaper are written by him. He has his office on the fourth floor of a factory building, together with other of his socialist colleagues, and because of his advice and help are sought by so many people he is one of the most difficult people in Germany to see.

The chief socialist centers in Germany are Berlin, Munich, Essen, Leipsic and Stuttgart. The Berlin socialists are not as radical as those in Bavaria and in the Rhine industrial section. For instance, last fall when food became so very scarce that many people began to fear there would not be enough for the country to hold out, the Munich socialists wrote to the chancellor suggesting that all food in Germany, even that in possession of private families, be confiscated. The poor know that people with money have been able to buy food in large quantities both inside and outside of Germany and store it for the "siege." The people know, also, that those who live on big estates and farms keep back all the food they need for themselves and sell only what they have to. So the Munich socialists recommended to the government that food be taken away from all persons in Germany. A further proposal was that the government organize soup kitchens and restaurants throughout Germany and compel every one, high and low, rich and poor, to eat the same kind of food in government cafes. This was bitterly opposed, of course, by every one in Germany who had food or who could live at hotels. The chancellor paid no heed to this proposal from Munich, but if this year's harvest should be as bad as that of last year the government may be compelled to accept the Munich plan after all.

Socialists Are Elected.

During the last year there have been elections held in Germany for seats in the reichstag to fill those vacated by death, illness or the retirement of members because of age. When the election was held in Potsdam, the kaiser's home, a socialist was elected to take the place of Dr Karl Liebknecht, who was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. Socialists also carried elections in Cologne and in Essen, where the great Krupp munition factories are located.

The government has been watching this advance in socialism very carefully. It has tried to keep abreast of the times by establishing state socialism in Germany during the war. The present method of controlling and distributing food is purely socialistic. At present the "Z. E. G." which is the official bureau for purchasing and controlling the sale of food, is absolutely socialistic in its nature. No German firm and no private citizen can buy food wholesale or retail in any neutral country in Europe and bring it into Germany without having the supply confiscated by this organization. The result is that no German firm today buys food in neutral countries. Everything available in Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland or Hungary is purchased by an agent of the "Z. E. G." and shipped into Germany in freight cars owned by this organization. Travellers in neutral European countries will see on the railway sidings white freight cars with the following sign in big black letters:

"Zentral Einkaufgesellschaft, Deutschland"—the so called "Z. E. G."

Before this bureau was organized German merchants had been going to these countries and bidding against each other for the available food. The result was that prices became almost prohibitive. Now the government sends one man to buy the supplies and offers a certain fixed price.

This same organization controls the sale of all food within Germany. A Bavarian wholesale grocer, for instance, cannot send food to Berlin or to any city outside of Bavaria unless he sells it to the "Z. E. G." By making the penalty so high—in some cases it amounts to imprisonment—few people try to get around these government restrictions.

Socialist Schemes Succeed.

This is one of the ways by which state socialism has been established in Germany during hostilities. Because the government was successful in the food department, similar bureaus were organized to care for other common needs. A government department to buy, sell and conserve all edible fats was organized. Another bureau to control the oil market and another to purchase old clothes and still another to have charge of wool and cotton were founded.

On the whole these socialistic schemes have been so successful that many socialists and officials are looking forward to the period after the war when these ideas can be extended. It has been suggested already that the government take over what remains of the German steamship companies and establish a government monopoly in merchant ships. It has been suggested that the government import all raw materials and export all manufactured articles. It has been suggested that the government bring the soldiers back from the front in companies and in regiments and run the factories like the army has been run. But while the government may desire to do this, the voters will probably have something else to say.

The socialists are the reformers of Germany, and inasmuch as they have been able to make such progress during the war, when they have been prevented from doing so many things they planned, it is almost certain when peace comes the socialists will play the leading role in reorganization. The growth of the socialists has by no means been in vain. If they succeed in accomplishing the reforms which they expect, there will be a universal peace party in Germany in the future to take the place of the universal war party of the past. The socialists on principle are against war, and the people are so weary of this war that they will not look forward to future wars with any degree of hopefulness.

During the past two years the radical socialists have been fighting hard for recognition, but because the government has been against them and because the army has hated them they have been unable to carry out many of their plans. They can be added, however, by the United States of America and her allies if the present military leaders are defeated and discredited. As long as the army can say to the people: "We defended the country. We kept the enemy out of our country. We fought a successful war," a great many Germans will be misled and the reform movement in Germany after the war will not be as successful as it otherwise will be.

The Girl and Her Job.

From Detroit Free Press.

A Detroit employer in search of a young woman to fill a vacancy in his office staff, told an applicant that though he had several girls in his employ there not one among them whom he could promote to the position, which paid a salary twice that they were receiving. "They're nice girls, sweet as a caramel sundae, but they seem to have cerebral anemia," he said. "They're good for nothing but routine work that's as plain as the nose on your face. They might have familiarized themselves with the business, but their interest in it centers in their pay envelope. All they care for is a little more money for clothes and personal independence."

This employer put into words the usual attitude of his class toward the girls who seek office work. They want places that make the least possible demand on their intelligence. They will work with a fair degree of faithfulness—with one eye on the clock and the other on their pocket mirrors. They have no ambition, no initiative, will not assume any responsibility. They do not grow with their work but remain the same careless, inconsequent creatures as at first, waiting for some unwary man to come along and marry them.

The excuse, "Let him pay more if he wants better work," is putting the cart before the horse. An employer will not have the faith that adds to the pay envelope until it is justified by achievement. No one gets anywhere near the top who shirks responsibility; responsibility and efficiency earn the big salaries. An employer soon realises the animus of his employes.

Our young people have a wrong conception of work. To most, it is the primal curse rather than one of mankind's greatest marches. An existence of all idleness is less satisfactory than one all work; brings less of happiness. Who wants to be a vegetable in this age?

The man quoted above added that the girls who succeed are usually those who feel the urge of necessity. They have their own way to make and are in earnest. The girls whose aim is bounded by their pocket money miss the real benefit they might get, for work should—and will—give three valuable things—satisfaction in contemplating what has been accomplished; development of native powers, and the discipline that makes character.

Investigators have found that electricity applied to soil that has been dampened with salt water will destroy insects without injury to growing crops.

NEW EXPLOSIVE BEING USED

Rochambolite, Introduced by French on Western Front, Has Terrible Effect on Enemy.

Rochambolite is a new and terrible explosive that has recently been introduced on the western front by the French and employed in the defense of Verdun, says the Argonaut. The explosive, when tested in action at Verdun, was found to possess a most terrible and demoralizing effect upon the Germans.

The explosive is a powder which, upon ignition changes into a molten metal and a very large volume of gas in an infinitely small space of time. This sudden change in volume and the terrific heat which is generated cause an immense pressure on the walls of the vessel that contains it, shattering the walls and hurling the molten metal and wall fragments in all directions, spreading death and destruction in their path.

The effect of this molten metal on the Germans can hardly be imagined. Pieces of metal upon striking them immediately burn their way deep into the flesh, even to the bone, causing intense pain and suffering to the victim. So deadly and so demoralizing have the French found this explosive to be that they are now utilizing it on the entire front.

THE 3 D'S IN DODD'S

Mr. Robert W. Ferguson, Hingham, Mass., writes: I suffered from kidney disorder for years. Had incessant backache and trouble. I occasionally use the remedy now in order to keep the kidneys regulated. I have the highest praise for Dodd's. Be sure to get "DODD'S," the name with the three D's for deranged, disordered, diseased kidneys, just as Mr. Ferguson did. No similar named article will do.—Adv.

Not Her Drink.

Little Isabel's mother had very injudiciously allowed her to drink weak tea with her meals instead of milk.

One day Isabel was taken out to lunch at a friend's house, and the friend, never dreaming that a child could drink anything other than milk, placed it before her in a broad, low, fancy cup.

The child gazed at the milk in silence for a while, and then astonished her hostess by remarking disdainfully, "I ain't a cat."—Buffalo Express.

AN OPERATION AVERTED

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides at periods and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I soon noticed a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. Thos. McGonigal, 3432 Hartville Street, Phila., Pa.

Registration Day June 5

It has now been settled that the day for registration for all those who come within the conscription age of 21 to 30 will be held Tuesday, June 5th at the regular voting place in each township The registration hours to be from 7 30 a m to 9:00 p m Sheriff, James Ross, has appointed the following registrars for this township: M. M. Magner, P. M. Griesmer and Dr. L. R. Parsons, the work to be done gratis. The registrars have not received their final instructions yet but it is understood that all those who come within the conscription age and do not register on or before that date are subject to a jail sentence We have went over the poll book and have found that the following young men in the city of Klemme are within the agos of 21 and 30 and subject to conscription. The list does not contain any of those outside of the incorporation nor does it mean that all of them are subject to military duty because there are undoubtedly a number of them who would not be able to pass the required examination.

RAISE WHEATLESS CHICKENS

Not Necessary to Feed High Priced Wheat for Growth or Eggs.

"Save the wheat" by not feeding it to poultry.

Contary to opinion, chickens do not have to be fed wheat for best growth and egg production, say the poultry husbandrymen at Iowa State college. In experiments conducted at the poultry farm at Ames, in those lots fed a ration in which corn was the principal part, there were fewer deaths and heat prostrations and slightly better egg production than those fed wheat. Following are wheatless rations for chicks and laying hens, both of which have given entirely satisfactory results at Iowa State college:

For Chicks.

Scratch Food:
Cracked corn.
Mashed Food:
Cornmeal .....1 part
Wheat Middlings .....2 parts
Wheat bran .....1 part
Meat Meal .....1 part
Bone meal .....½ part

The wheat middlings and bran are much cheaper than wheat and their use will not affect the country's supply, as they are milling by-products. Green feed should be supplied.

For Laying Hens.

Scratch Food:
Coarsely cracked corn ..3 parts
Clean, plump oats .....1 part
Mash Food:
Same as above.

The feed should be fed in suitable hoppers with oyster shell and ground bone supplied. For chickens in confinement supply green feed in lawn clippings, dandelions and onion tops.

The prices of new tires are going up. Save the old ones—have them vulcanized. Ell & Fuller.

Motorcycle Accident

On Sunday afternoon as Bjorn Hancke was returning to his home four miles southeast of Wesley, he ran into a Studebaker car being driven by one of the Fred Lutjens sons, at a point in the road just east of the Axle Tulson farm where the road to Eagle Lake and the Garner road conjoin. The Lutjens boy, with his mother, sister, C. E. Powers, wife and baby was driving to Eagle Lake for an afternoon recreation and was proceeding slowly. Bjorn Hancke, coming west on his motorcycle, turned out to the right of the road, expecting the auto to proceed in a due easterly course At this monent Lutjens started to make the turn north and the two vehicles collided, the force of the intact throwing Hancke onto he hood of the auto and his head pierced the wind shield. His face, forehead and checks were badly cut and a wound was also made in his back. Mr. Powers took off his shirt and tore it into bandages and with the help of his wife was able to so bind the wounds as to partially stop the bleeding. Another auto was stopped and the injured man brought to Britt with all haste and given medical aid. After his wounds were dressed he was taken to the Allison house and put to bed. A number of auto loads of people from the neighborood where he works were over to see him Sunday evening. Oscar Erickson, blacksmith, of Wesley who was with Mr. Hancke on the trip, was over again on Monday.

Mr. Hancke has no relatives in this country. He came to America seven years and has been employed in the Wesley neighborhood all the time since arriving. At present he is employed by George Palmer, residing four miles southeast of Wesley

The injured man was removed to Mercy hospital, Mason City Tuesday evening.—Britt News.

The Call of the Woods

A story dealing with the picturesque and wild Hudson Bay country, was first at the Lyric Theatre, New York City where it remained for nearly a year. It then moved to Chicago, where it remained for several months. The 7 Cairns Bros. have been very fortunate in securing this production for the season of 1917 in their big Tent Theatre with the entire scenic equipment and an excellent cast. It is remarkable when one stops to realize the public will be able to see this production at the prices announced for this occasion. "The Call of the Woods" will be presented at Klemme on Tuesday May 29. The fact that the company is personally owned and conducted by the 7 Cairns Bros. is a guarantee that the play and company is first class in every respect or your money will be refunded.

Mrs. Geo. Ell Obituary

Emmaline Henn was bon in Ackley, August 25th, 1896. At about six years of age her parents moved to a farm about six miles east of Belmond where she lived until her marriage with George Ell, Septembr 30, 1888. With her husband she lived in Ell township, Hancock county, moving from there to Klemme and afterward to Belmond where she has lived for the past fifteen years. About February 1st she was stricken with illness and grew steadily worse until her death, May 15th, 1917. In her youth she accepted Christ and united with the German Evangelical church. Beside her husband, she leaves to mourn her loss two brothers, George W. Henn of Canada, and Jacob T. Henn of Belmond. Mrs. Ell was a lover of home and all her time was devoted to her home life. She has gone to that 'House of many mansions" the "place prepared" by the hands of a loving Christ.

Memorial Day Program

A program will be held at Klemme Wednesday, May 30th, commencing at 1:00 p. m. at the city park. Music will be furnished by the band, and there will also be several selections of vocal music. The address of the day will be given by the Rev. Burris of Belmond who is a very able speaker and one who it is well worth your time and trouble to go miles to hear.

It is our duty to honor our departed heroes and loved ones and so make your plans to enjoy the fine program to be given here. Klemme bids you a hearty welcome.

Flies are More Dangerous Than You Think

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But, at least, we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease-carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

The erection of a 300-foot campanile at the University of California, at Berkeley, Cal., has been delayed by the lack of data on this character of building. This project has been under way for a long time, and the unusual nature of the work required that the builders should study up previous experiences of this kind and the result was that designers and builders were unable to find much that would be of value to them in the present case The campanile has been completed at last, and it is thought to be proof against earthquake shock. It is of steel and reinforced concrete, with a facing of granite. It is 303 feet high and 34 feet wide at the base.

When the sheriff court was removed from Inveraray to Dunoon there was among the documents the proclamation making Rob Roy an outlaw. The letterpress is as black as when it left the press of the king's printer, nearly 200 years ago. The indorsement is as follows. "Proclamation for the accusing and apprehending Robert Roy Campbell, alias McGregor, dated 10th March, 1719 27th March, 1719.—Published at the Mercat Cross of Inveraray by John McPherson, messenger, before these witnesses James Campbel, provost there, Archibald Campbel and Charles Stewart, writers there, and divers others." Edinburgh Scotsman.

Guatemala is buying all of the print paper needed to supply four daily papers, a number of weeklies and several job printing establishments at this time from the United States. During 1915 at least 6,000 reams of news paper, valued at $16,000 United States gold, were brought in, while paper of other classes to the value of nearly $131,000 was also imported. Of this "other paper" the United States furnished $102.000 worth and Spain $29,000 Before the European war the bulk of the paper supply of Guatemala came from Germany and a small quantity from England

Sterilization of soil by steam, formerly so much practiced in eastern greenhouses and to some extent in California has been given up as inefficient and also too expensive in the process. IOWA CLUB WOMEN TO MEET AT FORT DODGE Notable Speakers Will Be Heard by 800 Delegates Who Will Attend.

Fort Dodge, Ia , May 20.—How women can help in war times will be the undercurrent of all the addresses and meetings of the biennial meeting of the Iowa Federation of Woman's Clubs in Fort Dodge, May 23-25. Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, president of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, comes to Fort Dodge directly from Washington, where she has been in conference with legislators over the problems arising from the present situation. Dean Curtis, of Ames, will talk on "How Iowa Women Can Help Win the War" and the subject will be further discussed at the district and committee meetings. It is expected that some general uniform program will be evolved.

The matter of entertaining the 800 women who will attend this meeting has been the chief consideration of all the Fort Dodge club women for weeks. Mrs. Edmund F. Armstrong, chairman of the biennial board, has divided the work among 21 committees. These committees represent the members of the 10 local clubs who have extended the invitation to the Iowa federation The commercial club has cooperated with the women and the courtesy of the Country club has been extended to the visiting guests The hospitality of 400 homes has been offered

The meetings will be held in the new First Methodist church, which is centrally located and ideally planned for such a gathering. There will be three sessions daily The hours between have been filled with teas, dinners, luncheons, receptions and auto rides, so that time will not hang heavy on the hands of the visiting women.

Mrs Francis E. Whitley, of Webster City, president of the Iowa federation, will preside All the state officers will be in attendance There will be a concert Tuesday evening tendered the guests by the city of Fort Dodge. The convention opens formally Wednesday morning and adjourns Friday afternoon

Among the notables who will address the convention are Dr Shailer Matthews, of Chicago Dr Rachelle Yarras, of Chicago, Allen D. Albert, ex-president of the International Association of Rotary Clubs, Mrs. George W Plummer, of Chicago; Prof P W. Dykema of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon, of Evansville, Ind

WOMEN OF IOWA TO MEET TO ORGANIZE WAR WORK

Webster City Ia., May 20 The national committee of the Women's Council of Defense, a national woman's organization just authorized by the government which is in session this week in Washington has named Mrs. F E. Whitley, of Webster City, as superintendent of the Iowa division Mrs. Whitley is widely known as president of the Iowa State Federation of Women's clubs In order to perfect an Iowa organization of the Women's National Council of Defense, she today issued a call to all the heads of women's organizations in Iowa for a meeting to be held at the Chamberlain hotel in Des Moines Tuesday May 29.

The purpose of this Women's Council of Defense is to organize the women of America so they may be of help and assistance to the government in the same manner as are the women of Europe The organization, in fact is directed by and connected with the government In order to prevent any duplication of work, however its work of remediation and alleviation will be done through the Red Cross The idea is to strengthen and enlarge the work of the Red Cross.

CHEROKEE WOMEN START LOCAL THRIFT CAMPAIGN

Cherokee, Ia., May 20—The realth committee of the Cherokee Woman's club has started a patriotic thrift campaign for the conservation of food and the elimination of frivolous pleasures and expensive social functions. Every woman in the city is being urged to sign the following pledge "I hereby pledge myself to render patriotic service to my country by studying food problems, eliminating all waste and conserving food supplies in every possible way To do, this I pledge myself to forego unnecessary, frivolous social pleasures, costly social functions and the serving of any except the lightest of refreshments between regular meals. I pledge myself to the local support of the government by doing all in my power for the cause of constructive, productive, intelligent thrift."

EPILEPSY SEIZES DRIVER; FIVE JOY RIDERS INJURED

Sac City, Ia., May 20.—When the driver of the car was suddenly seized with an attack of epilepsy and the uncontrolled machine turned over twice before coming to a stop, five Lake City boys who were out for a joy ride suffered injuries of varying degrees of severity a mile east of this city Two of the boys gave their family name as Decker and one as Osborne, while the other wo did not give their names to local people One of the Decker boys suffered a dislocation of his right shoulder, while his brother's chief injury was a deep laceration of his right leg The others escaped with minor hurts.

IOWA BOY, WITH BRITISH, IS KILLED IN BATTLE

Odebolt Ia., May 20—Word has been received in Kiron to the effect that Clarence, son of Mr and Mrs. Francis Norelius, had been killed in action somewhere in France. Clarence was formerly in the United States navy but went to France a long time ago as a member of the English army. He was wounded and returned to England to recuperate, and upon his recovery went to the front again. He was a brother of Mrs. L. J. Stratton, of this city.

SPY SUSPECT RELEASED BY GOVERNMENTAL ORDERS

Des Moines, Ia., May 20.—Joseph Zacherle, consulting engineer for the Iowa Telephone company who was picked up with Herman Kirch and Arthur Hartung, as German spies, was released at midnight, Zacherle's release followed the recommendation of District Attorney Claude Porter Kirch and Hartung will be detained indefinitely.

SAC COUNTY LUTHERANS TO CELEBRATE REFORMATION

Odebolt, Ia., May 18.—Rev. Adolph Noack, of the German Lutheran church north of Odebolt, is arranging the retails in connection with a proposed countrywide observance of the 400th anniversary of the "Reformation." Sac county has three German Lutheran pastors serving eight congregations Wall Lake has been chosen as the place for holding the celebration and the date is to be fixed soon by the committee representing the various Lutheran churches of Sac county.

SIOUX CITY AN GETS OUT OF LEMARS JAIL

W. D. Shields, Held for Bootlegging, Makes Good on Second Attempt.

LeMars, Ia., May 19—A man said by LeMars officers to be W. D. Shields, alleged bootlegger, who escaped from the county jail here yesterday, was lodged in jail at Alton last night after he had unsuccessfully resisted arrest.

LeMars, Ia., May 19—Upon his second attempt at jail breaking here within two weeks W. D. Shields, of Sioux City, yesterday afternoon escaped from custody. At Sheriff Hugh Maxwell's office it was said that the method of Shields' escape is a mystery, but that the man probably had assistance from the outside.

Shields, who maintains that his first name is Harry, but who is known to Sioux City officers as Fred Shields and a prisoner by the name of H. Breigle almost succeeded in escaping within a week after Shields was brought here from Sioux City on April 29 Upon the occasion of the former attempted break the men were caught at a time when they had chopped almost through a wall in the jail corridor Loud singing by the prisoners, which was meant to drown the noise of their work, aroused the suspicions of Mrs. Maxwell, wife of the sheriff who lives nearby The sheriff was notified and the men lodged in steel cages.

Shields was indicted by a Plymouth county grand jury several months ago under a bootlegging charge Some three weeks ago he was arrested in Sioux City, where a minor charge was lodged against him by a woman. The Sioux City authorities turned him over to Sheriff Maxwell and he was to have been tried here at the fall term of court.

At the sheriff's office it was said they knew only that Shields was in the jail when the prisoners were fed at noon and that he was gone at supper time.

WOMEN AND GIRLS OF IOWA NOW WORKING IN FIELDS

Council Bluffs, Ia., May 19 American women are not behind their sisters abroad when the call comes to do something for their country, and this spring, with the immense demand upon farmers in the great corn and wheat belts of the nation for more food and more food, some of the wives and daughters of southwestern Iowa farmers are getting out in the fields and helping the farmers to overcome in most practical fashion the general dearth of farm hands.

These women have not been accustomed to work in the fields and it is not the lure of extra yields and high prices, but the urgent plea of the nation's leaders for more production of food that brings them into the fields

Corn planting is well under way throughout this section and the end of May will see thousands of acres all planted, the acreage probably being greater this year than ever before in this section.

SHELDON HIGH SCHOOL TO GRADUATE A CLASS OF 27.

DENISON—There are now under construction in this city of 3,500 people, 40 private residences besides a nair square of substantial business building on the main streets. This is giving labor plenty of employment. The postal receipts for 1916 were such as to give the postmaster an increase of $100 in salary for the coming year.

SHELDON—Jerome Frisbee, a Sheldon boy, who organized Company E here and built the armory and acted as their captain for several years and who was also captain of the famous Uniformed Rank of the Knights of Pythias of Sheldon, has been given a commission of major in the officers' reserve corps His home now is Lindsay, Cal.

KELLY IS REMOVED TO JAIL AT LOGAN

Wife Accompanies Minister Accused of Villisca Ax Murders.

Red Oak, Ia., May 18.—Accompanied by his faithful wife, who entered the county jail with him, Rev. Lyn George J. Kelly, charged with the Villisca ax murder was removed to Logan, Ia., in a fast auto this morning for safety, Sheriff R. A. Dunn, jr., and County Attorney Oscar Westrand left here at 6 a. m., with the prisoner.

YOUNG WIFE ACCIDENTALLY SHOT; FATALITY MYSTERY

Denison, Ia., May 18.—Mrs. William B. Gibson, a young married woman living on a farm between Dow City and Dunlap, was found dead by her husband yesterday morning. Death came from the accidental discharge of a shotgun. Mr Gibson arose early that morning and took his gun out to kill some squirrels which had been bothering the little chickens. He returned to the house, laid down the gun and went to milk the cows. On returning he found his wife dead on the porch, evidently from the discharge of the gun, which was near. How death came will never be known. She had been married but a comparatively short time.

CROPS AROUND ODEBOLT SHOWING FINE PROSPECTS

Odebolt, Ia., May 18 - The crop prospects in this locality are especially encouraging at the present time. The soil is in an excellent state of tilth, corn planting will be practically done this week Pastures and small grain has made a wonderful gain the past week, especially the oat crop, which now gives promise of a normal stand Garden vegetables have been a little backward on account of the cold weather but the early plantings are up and many potato patches are well through the ground

BRANCH OF RED CROSS IS FORMED AT ODEBOLT

Odebolt, Ia., May 18—Preliminary steps toward organizing a local branch of the national Red Cross were taken at a public meeting held in the Presbyterian church last night. Temporary officers were elected and as soon as the necessary authority from headquarters is received the organization will be perfected Over 50 have already pledged their membership. Dr A F Caldwell is the principal promoter of the movement

PLANNING TO PRESERVE OLD FORT AT CHEROKEE

Cherokee Ia. May 18 It has been suggested that the old Cherokee fort, which stands near the brick yard in the southwest part of the city, be preserved. The fort is of historic interest, having played an important part in the history of Cherokee in the early days of its development At present the building is rapidly going to ruin and the plan suggested is that the building be purchased and placed in some park or other suitable place in the city.

GREAT PROGRESS MADE IN WEEK BY IOWA FARMERS

Des Moines, Ia., May 18 The temperature is still considerably below the normal, but the rainfall was light and the week was favorable for farm work, which progressed rapidly. Much corn ground was plowed and cornplanting is well started with the soil in excellent tilth Warmer weather prevailing during the latter part of the week has started growth and all conditions are now promising even though the season is late Corn planting will be general during the coming week, and with favorable weather the bluk of the crop will be in by the 23d The increased acreage and the extra amount of plowing to be done will, however, run planting up to the end of the month The remnant of winter wheat is still improving and all other small grain is looking well. The acreage of corn, spring wheat, oats and potatoes will be larger than last year, but hay will be short. Some alfalfa is beingsown wit hoats, the latter to be cut for hay Early potatoes are coming up. Pastures continue backward, but are improving All tree fruits are in full bloom over the southern half of the state, and are promising except possibly late winter apples, the bloom on which appears to be light in some localities.

CEDAR RAPIDS—Teamsters employed on the Milwaukee grading contract at Atkins have gone on strike It is alleged their action is due to I W. W agitators.

CHEROKEE—The recent compilation of the birth records by the county clerk's office shows that 348 babies were born in the county during 1916, these being 171 girls and 177 boys. Cedar township led all the other townships with a record of 23 births. Tilden township claims the only pair of twins reported

CHEROKEE—The Cherokee Y M C A in their recent membership campaign added over 100 new members to the roll. The campaign came to a close last Saturday and a noon luncheon was served to the workers at the rest room The society is rejoicing over the fact that the aim of the campaign "100 members in one week," has been realized

FIXES MEAT AND BREAD DIET FOR EVERY PERSON

London May 7.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Not long ago there slipped unobtrusively into the British cabinet an untried ministry of food.

Today the ministry headed by Lord Devonport, has not only told the restaurant man when he may and may not serve meat and potatoes, but he has specified the quantities of meat, bread, sugar and flour to which each person is entitled, as follows

Two ounces of meat for breakfast, five ounces for luncheon and the same amount for dinner and none for tea. The weight of the meat is the uncooked weight, including such bone as is usually delivered by the butcher. Two ounces of poultry and game are reckoned as one ounce of meat.

Two ounces of bread for each meal, including the afternoon tea. Only two-sevenths of an ounce of sugar may be had for each of the four meals and flour is limited to one ounce for luncheon and one for dinner.

CITY BUYS BONDS.

Hoboken, N J., May 16.—Liberty loan bonds to the amount of $100,000 will be bought by the city of Hoboken, the first municipality, as far as is known here, to take such a step.

WIFE OF KELLY IN CELL WITH HUSBAND

Penniless and No Where Else to Go—Accused Man Enters Not Guilty Plea.

Red Oak, Ia., May 17.—Rev. Lynn George J. Kelly, the itinerant unordained minister, who was indicted for the ax murder of eight persons at Villisca, Ia., in June, 1912, was given a hearing today and pleaded not guilty.

On demand of his attorney Kelly was not removed to Des Moines. The city is quiet.

Mrs. Kelly is in the cell with her husband. They are penniless. When attorney A. L. Sutton, of Omaha, who ran for governor of Nebraska in the last Nebraska election brought Kelly here yesterday to give him up, Mrs. Kelly had no other place to go so accompanied her husband to the cell. Kelly is held incommunicado. As the result of his own utterances Kelly has been forced repeatedly to say that he knew nothing of the Villisca murder.

County attorney Oscar Wenstrand, to whom Kelly surrendered, would not disclose the nature of evidence but said a warrant for the minister's arrest had been issued following the recent prolonged investigation of the murders by a grand jury here.

The county attorney said Rev. Mr. Kelly's attorney had told him the "defense would not be on the ground of insanity."

Although the attorney general made no announcement as to the charges in the case it was stated by an attache of the department who is reliably informed, that Kelly will probably be brought before a sanity board. A statement issued by Mr. Havner last night shows that Kelly was adjudged insane in 1913 following an investigation of obscene literature writing and was then lodged for some months in a federal hospital in Washington, D. C.

According to the attorney general, an important clue connected with Kelly's arrest was found in a package of clothes left with a Council Bluffs Ia., laundry a few days after the murders. The bundle, which contained a blood-stained shirt, was claimed by Kelly

The indictment which resulted in the man's arrest was returned at a recent session of the Montgomery county grand jury as a result of testimony given by a "reputable witness." This witness was said by the attorney general to have declared that Kelly related the details of the crime to him at Macedonia, Ia., 75 miles from Villisca only a half hour after the murders were discovered. Kelly, who was a Presbyterian minister, according to his own statement at that time, had charge of a parish a short distance from Villisca On the night the crime was committed, he is said to have slept in Villisca at the home of the local Presbyterian minister, and the next day to have taken an early train for Macedonia.

The murders occurred on Sunday night, June 9, 1912. The victims—Joe Moore Villisca implement dealer, his wife and their four children, together with two visiting children by the name of Stillinger- were killed in their beds as they slept. Their heads were literax, which was found leaning against axe which was found leaning against a wall in the house, bore witness as to the weapon used

MANCHESTER MAN NAMED AS TREASURER OF STATE

Des Moines, Ia., May 17.—Gov. W. L. Harding has named Edward Hiram Hoyt, of Manchester, former state senator, to succeed W. C. Brown, deceased, as state treasurer Hoyt was a candidate against Brown when the latter was first nominated. He was born in Manchester, October 27, 1871, and has always resided in Iowa. He is vice president of the First National bank at Manchester, and was formerly president of the Lamont Savings Bank, which he organized. His bond of $250,000 will be approved by the executive council today and he will assume his duties at once. Quincy A. Willis, deputy state treasurer who has been acting during Brown's illness of several months, probably will be replaced.

Two of four bills remaining in Governor Harding's hands were signed by him yesterday afternoon, a third was vetoed and the fourth is being held for further consideration. The automobile license law amendment, restricting the number of machines which dealers might operate on their business number, was vetoed.

The pharmacists' registration bill, and the family insurance bill, permitting fraternal orders to insure children of their members, were signed.

The consolidated school law revision is being studied by the governor.

ITALIAN SLAIN BY SOLDIERS IN FIGHT AT DES MOINES

Des Moines, Ia., May 17.—An unidentified man, known to his associates merely as "Joe," was shot and killed here by Sergeant Pordell, of B company, Waterloo, Ia., national guard. A number of Italians had been shooting at troops guarding the Great Western round house, and soldiers detailed to search a house some distance from the building were carrying out orders when the shooting occurred. As the militiamen neared the house, one of the Italians started for the brush in the neighborhood, meantime firing at Pordell. The sergeant returned the fire, killing the man after several shots had been exchanged. Two other Italians were arrested.

SKULKERS RETURN FIRE OF NATIONAL GUARDSMEN.

Council Bluffs, Ia. May 17.—Federal guards at the Illinois central bridge here over the Missouri, fought a duel in darkness with three men sneaking up on the bridge during the night. When the men refused to halt the guard fired and the skulkers replied. The guardsmen fired 49 shots in all, but the men escaped.

CHEROKEE COUNTY HENS DO THE JOB ALL LAST YEAR

Cherokee, Ia., May 17.—The hens of Cherokee county were certainly on the job during the year 1916. In a report made public today the hens of the county are credited with producing 2,884,892 eggs during that period. Liberty had the lead over the other townships of the county, being credited with a production of 91,001 dozen.

CORN PLANTING IS UNDER FULL SWING IN NORTHWEST

LeMars, Ia., May 15.—Corn planting has been started in various parts of Plymouth county, about a week to 10 days later than usual. Wet weather and a scarcity of farm labor contributed to delay plowing. It is predicted that with continued sunshine, planting in the county will be general by the latter part of the week. Farmers report that the cool weather of the last couple of weeks did not affect growing small grain.

DARING PAIR OF BELGIANS BOMB SHEDS

Havre, May 4 (Correspondence to the Associated Press) The work of the Belgian flying corps has been more important than could be supposed from the limited publicity that has been given to it.

Belgian aviators have participated in a great many of the combined attacks on expeditions of the allied flying corps and have specialized in night bombardments A correspondent of the Associated Press, has just learned of one of these exploits dated months back that seems not to have been told

A Belgian airplane piloted by Adjutant Jenatzy, brother of the automobile racer, with Lieutenant Rolin as observer, took the air about the German lines Rolin was looking for comrades in the air when he sped passing under him in a ray of moonlight a machine that he recognized as a German It was followed by a second and a third Followed To Camp.

The Belgian machine followed the German flotilla until it arrived above the aviation camp of Ghistelles The German machines began to descend in long spirals. Jenatzy and Rolin followed them They saw the German pilots making luminous signals to which a searchlight from the aviation camp responded Then the whole camp was lighted up, sheds landing ground guiding searchlights were all well in view.

One German machine landed when the field was plunged again into obscurity to be lighted up again an instant later, to darken again after each landing The three German machines had reached the ground and in their turn Jenatzy and Rolin cut off the gasoline supply from their motor decided to take the big risk Lieutenant Rolin repeated with an electric lamp the signals that he had just seen the Germans give. The searchlights below responded Bombs Aviation Sheds.

Jenatzy and Rolin saw below a crowd of helpers and soldiers surrounding the three machines that had already landed. Diving down full into the glare of the lights that had been provided for them in the supposition that they were Germans they plunged straight over the sheds at a feeble height, releasing the four bombs they had aboard Four formidable explosions shook their machine as if it were buffeted by mighty waves four immense flames burst into the air followed by a thick white smoke under cover of which the Belgians turned right about opening with their machine guns upon the disarmed soldiers and mechanics of the camp as they fled over the field The lights went out the antiaircraft gun stopped firing the guns searched the air in vain Belgians were already out of range laughing heartily at their swindle the same that is given in Brussels to a first rate joke.

PLOT SEEN IN EXPLOSION

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 19—That the $200,000 worth of distillate destroyed by an explosion at Gerlach, Nev., early today, was the result of a well formed plot, was the news sent to local offices of the Western Pacific and Southern Pacific railways by investigators. The distillate which was contained in 30 cars was on its way to San Francisco.

DRAFT ARMY WILL BE CALLED THIS FALL

President Will Sign Bill Today, and Registration Date Will Soon Be Announced.

Washington, D. C. May 19—After the army bill had been perfected in both houses of congress today and sent to President Wilson for signature the Senate adopted an amendment to the war budget bill to put conscription out of force fou. months after the end of the war.

FAVOR DAYLIGHT SAVING.

Washington, D. C., May 19 The daylight saving plan was today endorsed by the Senate interstate commerce committee, which ordered reported the bill providing that clocks shall be moved ahead one hour during the summer months.

Washington, May 19—President Wilson's approval was the final step necessary today to make the war army bill a law.

As a preliminary Vice President Marshall and Speaker Clark were to sign the bill today, after which it goes to the White House. The president was expected to sign the bill immediately and to issue a proclamation fixing the day for the registration of men for the army The war department then will set in motion the machinery for raising an army of increments of 500,000 men from 21 to 30 years of age by selective conscription.

LINER STOPS SUB ATTACK.

Boston, May 19.—Capt. James McDonald, of Allan liner, Sardinian, reported today that he encountered a submarine off the Irish coast while on a voyage from a British port to this country. The submarine, which was several hundred yards away, apparently was trying to launch a torpedo at the steamer, Captain McDonald said, when a British cruiser hove in sight.

MAKE ROADS LIABLE FOR CAR DELAYS

Complaints, Opening Way for Vast Claims From All Lines of Business, Are Filed by Coal Men.

ASK DAMAGES OF $425,000

I. C. C. Also Asked to Make Carriers Increase Equipment to Keep Pace With Industrial Demands.

Washington, May 19 In one of the most far reaching complaints filed before the Interstate Commerce commission four Utah coal companies today seek to recover approximately $425,000 from the seven railroads as damages alleged to have been sustained through the failure of the roads to supply them with an adequate number of cars for their operations.

The case sets a precedent If decided in favor of the complainants, it would open the way for the filing of innumerable similar complaints, not only by coal and other mining companies but by manufacturers and shippers of virtually all commodities carried in interstate commerce for alleged losses running into many millions

The complainants are the Cameron, Spring Canyon Standard coal companies and the Independent Coal & Coke Co. of Salt Lake City The Southern Pacific Union Pacific, Los Angeles & Salt Lake the Oregon Short Line the Denver & Rio Grande, and the Western Pacific railroad companies and the Oregon Washington Railroad & Navigation company are defendants

Complaints also ask the commission to compel the railroads to increase their equipment to keep pace with industrial demands

SENATE TO REWRITE NEW TAXATION BILL

Long Fight Ahead in Senate for Measure Rapidly Being Changed in House.

Washington D C May 19 -Growing out of the first meeting of the entire finance committee of the Senate today to consider the new taxation bill, indications are that by the time it is through the finance committee and the Senate it will be largely rewritten The members of the committee, democrats and republicans had a general discussion of the bill It was not of a partisan nature but many objections were voiced Both members said the bill would be revised in nonpartisan fashion but that it would take long and hard work They said the bill would be thoroughly overhauled The House plan for a heavy increase of postal rates on new papers and periodicals will be radically altered and made less oppressive

RAILROADS URGED TO REDUCE SERVICE

War Board Suggests Mixed Trains and Fewer Observation Cars.

Washington May 18 —All railroads have been called upon by the war board of the American Railway association to readjust their service immediately so as to make available the maximum transportation energy for moving fuel, food, material and troops.

A notice to the roads, announced tonight by Fairfax Harrison, chairman of the board says

Consolidate where practicable through passenger train service and eliminate those trains which are not well patronized

Reduce the number of special trains and give up running excursion trains.

On branch lines where two trains are operated try to reduce to one train a day.

Where practicable substitute mixed train service for separate passenger and freight service on branch lines. Closely review number of scheduled freight trains where tonnage is insufficient to load them fully with a view to reducing the number of trains.

Where passenger trains are double headed for speed a readjustment of schedules or cutting off cars where possible will release locomotives for freight service

Reduce as far as practicable luxuries such as observation cars In the interest of economy reduce the present rather elaborate and luxurious bills of fare on many dining cars.

Move "company" freight on underloaded trains Operate work trains as far as possible in slack times. Store coal in slack times.

Make proper train loading of primary importance with officials and train crews. Give publicity to those making good and poor records

GUARD CALLED BY U. S. FOR JULY 15

Ordered to Recruit to War Strength, if Possible—Equipment Ready at Camps.

Washington, May 19—All national guard organizations will be called into federal service between July 15 and August 5

Governors have been authorized to recruit all organizations to war strength The dates of assembly in the western states follow

July 15 Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota South Dakota and Nebraska

July 25 Montana, Wyoming Idaho, Washington and Oregon

August 5 Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and California.

It is understood also that the 16 divisional cantonment camps for the guard will all be in the southeastern, southern and western departments. Dates upon which various state units are to be moved to the big camps from state mobilization points will depend upon completion of the quarters and supply system at the cantonment camps.

The war department authorized the recruiting of guard organizations to war strength, or 440,000 men. In case existing organizations have insufficient equipment, full equipment will be assured them when they arrive at the guard camps.

LET NEUTRALS DIE TERRORIST URGES

Prof. Oswald Flamm Says if They Disappeared, Leaving No Trace, Trade Would Cease.

Copenhagen, May 19, (via London)—Professor Oswald Flamm Privy Councillor and a resident of Charlottenburg, Prussia, in an article in Die Woche, (Berlin,) advocates harsher treatment of neutral ships by Germany, with the object of intimidating them into remaining in their home ports and compelling the British to risk their own ships.

"Such reaction against British tonnage" he says, "would be more quickly enforced if fewer crews of torpedoed neutral ships were saved. If neutrals were destroyed so that they disappear without leaving a trace, terror would soon keep seamen and travelers away from the danger zone and thus save many lives."

BRITISH HERO JOINS U. S. PATROL FLEET

Evans, With Scott in Antarctic and in Battle Off Dover, Is With Destroyers.

London, May 19—Commander Edward R. G R. Evans, who was second in command of the Scott Antarctic expedition, and was in charge of the British destroyer Broke when she with another British destroyer defeated six German destroyers off Dover on the night of April 20, has been assigned to advisory duty with the American destroyer squadron in British waters. He will continue in complete touch with the senior officer, giving that officer practical advice on all matters concerning strategy, technique and the latest methods of submarine warfare.

The appointment of the commander of the Broke to duty with the American squadron was received with the greatest enthusiasm by the American forces.

Washington, D C., May 19—Proceeds of the liberty loan, the treasury department announced today, will be deposited in banks and trust companies which have qualified as depositaries, which forward subscriptions of at least $100,000. Where possible other financial institutions forwarding a less amount of subscriptions will be treated similarly later. The government will receive 2 per cent interest.

FRENCH AMBULANCE PLANS BREAK DOWN

Operations in Aisne Battles So Poor Senate Will Make an Investigation.

Paris, May 19—The army committee of the senate, presided over by M. Clemenceau, has unanimously adopted a report of a sub-committee respecting the operations of the ambulance service in the recent Aisne battle. The report formally condemns the officials responsible for the arrangements. It is announced that in view of the gravity of the facts the army committee has decided to bring the matter up in the senate.

TO PAY DEBT ONLY IF GERMANY WINS

German Socialist Also Says Soldiers Were Forced to Give to War Loan.

Amsterdam, May 19.—In the course of the budget debate in the reichstag on Wednesday Deputy Vogthern, socialist, attacked the government for questionable methods in propagating the war loan. He said that soldiers in the field had been forced to subscribe and that similar pressure had been exerted on cooperative societies.

Herr Vogthern said the investment and rate of interest had been rendered doubtful by an article in the Tages Zeitung, which said "Assurances by the government can only be given in the expectation of a large war indemnity."

In reply the finance minister protested against Herr Vogthern's statements and assured him that subscribers would be safeguarded.

Deputy Cohn, socialist, said that all military writers, had counted, even before the war, on a starvation campaign by Great Britain and that it was therefore hypocritical to act surprised.

"Granted that England did proclaim a war of starvation, right must remain right. Before the war I never imagined we should be driven to war by Germany's fault.

KINGDOM OF ISRAEL POSSIBLE WITH PEACE

Dream of Hebrew Leaders May Be Realized as Result of Russian Revolt.

London, April 22.—(by mail.)—The republic of Judea, or the republic of Israel, a home ruled nation under the protectorate of the United States of America. Site, the land of their fathers, Palestine; capital, Jerusalem.

The world war, in the view of many, seems about to bring true the dream that has persisted through the centuries that the Jew has wandered the earth. He is about to have his own home back again to live there or visit in security That this security should be maintained by America is the idea of Israel Zangwill

This statement is significant for its indication of a meeting point between the efforts Zangwill has led and the efforts of the Zionists, of whom Louis D. Brandeis has been the most prominent in America. The Zionists have made Palestine their sole objective. Zangwill's organization has urged that it is more important that the Jews should colonize somewhere at the earliest possible time than that they should return to their own ancient land.

Now he agrees Palestine itself seems within reach.

The eyes of 13,000,000 Jews scattered throughout the world are on General Murray's army, now seeking to drive the Turks out of the country that the Jews once had. From this 13,000,000, perhaps, should be excluded the 600,000 Jews who are fighting in the various armies. They, by fate's irony, will be last to know that the war may mean something for their race.

There is a strong belief in England that restoration of Palestine to the Jews would be a profitable political undertaking for the British.

"It is not expected," said Mr. Zangwill, "that all the Jews of the world would flock there to make their homes. It is my belief that the Jewish agriculturists who find living difficult elsewhere should be aided to return and that they should form the basis of the new nation. Jerusalem's location might make it the site for a great commercial or trading city, but the important thing is not to draw there those who have prospered in other corners of the globe, but to care for the great numbers of oppressed in other lands.

The menace which Turkish possession of Palestine offers Egypt and the trade route to India must be removed, British statesmen agree. Even before the war many considered the recreation of the Jewish state the best solution. Opinion changed, however, during the war, largely because of the sympathy many Jews of German origin in America admitted for Germany. It was feared that a nation sympathetic toward Germany would be a dangerous one to have so close to this strategic link in the British empire.

The Russian revolution has changed this. Jewish sympathy, alienated by the treatment of the Jews in Russia under the old regime, has been won back by the new regime. Jacob Schiff's declaration for the allies, following the announcement of the provisional government of equal rights for the Jews in Russia, was not the only one to come to the attention of the British government. A Jewish state in Palestine now would be a friendly—even grateful—state, it is believed.

Zangwill's idea of an American protectorate is based on the desire that Jewish interests should be protected by a great power that had no self interest there to serve.

Cablegrams received by the Jewish Daily News at New York from Petrograd have stated that Prime Minister Lvoff and Minister of Justice Kerensky, addressing crowds on May day, pledged the Russian provisional government to work for the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine.

HUNDREDS IN FIST FIGHT AFTER STREET WAR TALK

Madrid, May 19.—An extraordinary meeting of the cabinet was called yesterday, evening immediately upon receipt of news of the sinking of the Spanish steamer Patricio, of 3,500 tons. The accounts stated that the crew was saved, but that one sailor was seriously injured. It is supposed that the cabinet decided to send another note.

A violent clash between Francophiles and Germanophiles occured as the outcome of arguments over the recent Spanish note to Germany and Germany's reply. Several hundred persons took part in the fist fighting and some of them used canes during the encounters.

SCOTTISH RITE MASONS OBSERVE "JUBILEE YEAR"

Boston, Mass., May 18.—From 400 to 500 leaders of the Scottish Rite Masonry are gathered here today from all over the United States to celebrate the "Jubilee year," which marks the semi-centennial anniversary of the union of the supreme councils, Scottish Rite Masons, of New York and Boston.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the Massachusetts Consistory will work the 20th degree in the Scottish Rite and at 8 o'clock the 21st grade will be exemplified.

Banks Close, Officials Flee, Records Are Moved and Austria Orders Civilians Out of War Zone.

GENERAL SENT BY KAISER

Von Falkenhayn With Austrians —Men From Russ Front Are Taken—Berlin Admits Defeat—Drive Renewed.

Rome, May 19—Austria has ordered all civilians to leave the sections in which the Italians are fighting Trieste is reported panic stricken All banks there have been closed and the government officers are leaving Business houses have shipped their records to Vienna.

Most of the 6,000 Austrian prisoners were from divisions recently detached from the Russian front. General Falkenhayn, of the German army, is attached to the Austrian general's staff at the front.

BRITISH AID ITALIANS.

London, May 19—British heavy artillery batteries are cooperating with the Italian army in the Italian offensive against the Austrians on the Julian front, according to an official statement issued this afternoon by the British war office.

ADMITS BULLECOURT'S LOSS.

Berlin, May 19—The official statement issued today by the German army headquarters staff says that the ruins of the former village of Bullecourt were evacuated by them yesterday.

ITALIAN DRIVE RENEWED.

Rome, May 19—Austro-Hungarian prisoners taken by the Italians in their offensive on the Julian front are known to number 6,432, says the official statement issued today by the Italian war office.

The announcement says that from Tolmino to the sea the artillery was active. Efforts made by the Austro-Hungarians against the new Italian positions on the Vodice and south of Grazigna were repulsed.

With the British in the Field, May 18.

Lens is being set aflame. Fires and explosions were plainly visible from the British lines throughout last night. The Germans now know that the British will trap them there if they do not beat a hasty retreat.

Rain for the past few days has turned the battlefield of dust into one of mud. Only minor fighting continued today.

ITALIANS TAKE DUINO.

Paris, May 19—A dispatch to La Liberts from Turin reports that the Italian troops have captured the town of Duino.

Duino is on the gulf of Trieste about 12 miles northeast of Trieste, Austria's principal seaport.

BRITISH HOLD GAINS.

London, May 19—The extensive gains made by the British in the Struma sector of the Macedonian front have been held in the face of counter attacks the war office announced today.

London, May 19—"This war will not be over until the full weight of America is thrown into the scales. Not until America begins making war as though it were her war."

So spoke Lord Derby, secretary of war, Kitchener's successor.

"The bigger blow America is able to deliver, the sooner she delivers it, the quicker will the war end. America must strike hard. We hope she will strike quickly.

In reply to questions of training the new American troops he said:

"Three months' training in America, plus a certain amount of training in France, will make the finest kind of soldiers."

"Not until America begins making war as though she alone faced Germany will there be possibility of predicting when the war will end," he said.

GREEN DEFENDS TAX ON 1916 INCOMES

House Refuses to Strike Retroactive Clause, Despite Attacks.

Washington, D. C., May 19—Resuming debate on amendments to the war tax bill the House today by a vote of 123 to 54 refused to strike out the section designed to levy a retroactive tax of one-third the amount of last year's income taxes.

Representative Green, of Iowa, declared members seemed determined to tear down the bill without offering substitutes for sections they would strike out.

SISTERS PLANNED TO DIE AFTER DOCTOR'S DEATH

San Antonio, Tex., May 18.—Developments in the mysterious death of Dr. Sarah Frances Herdman, 54 years old, a physician, who was found dead in her home Tuesday morning, include announcement by the police that Dr. Herdman's two sisters, Miss Alice Herdman, 56, and Mrs. Margaret H. Allen, 60, of Brooklyn, N. Y., were at Dr. Herdman's home when she died and, being afraid to remain in the house, went to the Y. W. C. A., where they spent Monday night.

The police say the two sisters admitted this and also admitted that they intended after returning to Dr. Herdman's home Tuesday morning, to end their own lives.

City Chemist Nestor says that a year ago Dr. Herdman submitted to him for analysis some oranges which she said had been sent to her sister, Miss Alice. Nestor said the oranges contained poison.

Captain Paul Jones

Of all human things nothing is more honorable or more excellent than to deserve well of one's country—Cicero.

History does not relate any more [illegible] stirring story than [illegible] of John Paul Jones in whose veins, although [illegible] Scotch blood there flowed blood staunch and true to the American cause of liberty. While off the coast of Scotland with the Bonhomme Richard and the Alliance and the Pallas he was swooped down upon by the flotilla under Captain Pearson which was convoying a merchant fleet. Jones prepared to meet the enemy as best he could. The British guns had long range and Paul Jones determined to fight close. He brought his ships up to the enemy until the muzzles of his guns came in contact with the enemy ships. Then ensued one of the most frenzied conflicts in the history of naval battles, continuing from seven to ten in the evening. Paul Jones' position was desperate in the extreme. His ship was so shattered that only three guns remained effective, and he then assailed the enemy with hand grenades which falling into the Serapis soon set her on fire. At length her magazine blew up killing all near it. Pearson commanded his officers who wanted to surrender to board the Richard which was also now ablaze in several places. But Jones and his men received them so warmly that they retreated. Pearson's crew was killed, his guns unmounted and his ship on fire and there was nothing else to do but surrender.

Think of These Things.

When thou wishest to delight thyself, think of the virtues of those who live with thee; for instance, the activity of one, and the modesty of another, and the liberality of a third, and some other good quality of a fourth. For nothing delights so much as the examples of the virtues, when they are exhibited in the morals of those who live with us and present themselves in abundance, as far as is possible. Wherefore we must keep them before us.—Marcus Aurelius.

Had Reason to Know.

"Ah, me," sighed the successful man who was revisiting the old village school, "how time does fly! Thirty years ago I sat in this very front seat, and it seems to me as if it were but yesterday. If I am not very much mistaken, you'll find my initials carved on the desk." "They're there, right enough," said the present occupant of the seat. "I got whipped for doing it just because my initials happened to be the same as yours."

Proper Care of Rubbers.

Rubbers should not be dried where it is too warm, nor should they be left caked with mud and dirt. When rubbers become faded and dingy, some people renew them by rubbing with vaseline. If this is done, it should be promptly rubbed off and the rubber polished dry, on account of the effect of the greasy substance. A quick polishing with a banana skin will renew the finish, for a time at least.

Perseverance.

Is there any gift greater than the capacity for steady, patient, unselfish work, sweet-spirited perseverance in the face of needless hindrances and vexing opposition? Sweet reasonableness, which does not insist upon its own way, but bravely determines that in some way the work will go forward, is a rare and precious gift.

Turning the Tables.

"That will do," said an irate lady to her Irish "general;" "you will leave now, and you needn't bother me about a recommendation." "Faith!" replied the girl. "Oi has no intintion o' givin' ye a recommendation. Oi'll tell the truth about ye to ivery girl thot axes me."—London Tit-Bits.

TERMS USED IN FEEDING

Scientific Nomenclature Reduced to Every-Day Meanings.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Stockfood consists briefly of three chief parts or compounds, omitting the water and minerals. They are:

Protein (containing nitrogen), a muscle former.

Fat (not containing nitrogen), a fuel or fattening substance.

Carbohydrates (meaning made of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen).

These three substances are called organic matter, because they will burn.

Mineral matter is called inorganic. An animal can live on protein alone, but would not under normal conditions, because protein (or albumen) is only found mixed with fat in the case of meat and with fat and carbohydrates in the case of plants and cereals. Familiar examples of protein are white of egg, lean meat and the gluten which can be chewed out of wheat. Fat or oil we all know.

Carbohydrates include sugar, starch, [illegible] fibre, gums, etc. [illegible] tissue and [illegible] and also to furnish power [illegible] to move parts and do [illegible] work. [illegible] is all material for [illegible] necessary but abundant in nature. A growing animal needs plenty of protein and ash (bone food) and of carbohydrates and fat. A [illegible] its unborn young.

BUYING FEED INGREDIENTS

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

There are not a dozen feed stores in the country that carry in stock all the [illegible] of a [illegible] and feed at all times and at reasonable prices, and usually they do not carry feeds of the same high quality used by the mixers who work scientifically through a laboratory. This is human nature. Competition compels a dealer to sell the cheapest quality. The best quality of feed is seldom carried, because the average buyer will not pay the highest price. A good many experiment stations in a general way will advocate that a farmer mix all his own feed, but they are human like the rest of us and they will use recognized brands in their own feeding operations rather than go to the trouble and take the time to follow their own advice.

There are a good many herds at experiment stations which are kept as sort of a clinic for professors to practice theories upon. The poor brutes are used a good deal as guinea pigs in hospital practice. On the other hand, at the experiment stations are to be found many of the finest animals ever bred.

The mixed feeds of the first grade can be fed alone or in connection with home-grown corn, oats or barley. To do this widens your ration, and it is correct to do so if it will reduce your cost of feeding. Mixed feeds, therefore, are largely a matter of arithmetic.

You can usually get the result for less money than by feeding more expensive grains separately.

THE MANURIAL INGREDIENTS OF FEEDS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Nitrogen is the most important and most valuable fertilizing element supplied by feeds, and it is in this element that they show the greatest variation.

The Connecticut Experiment Station states that it was found that the average mixed fertilizer contained 2.95 per cent nitrogen and showed in a table that eighteen of fifty-two different feeds contained 3.93 per cent. Among this list is cottonseed and linseed meals, gluten seed, middlings, brewers' and distillers' products, and a few of the feed mixtures. It is obvious, therefore, that a wise selection of feeds enhances the value of the manure and consequently plays an important part in farm economy.

BARLEY PRODUCTS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Prof. J. P. Street, in the Annual Report of the Connecticut Agricultural Station for 1912, says: "That malt sprouts should receive more consideration from dairymen, especially in comparison with many of the proprietary mixed feeds containing only from one-third to one-half as much protein as malt sprouts, prices being considered."

He also states that dried brewers' grains, prices considered, in connection with the feed's high analysis, is one of the cheapest high-grade feeds on the market.

WHAT'S IN A MIXED FEED?

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

A high-grade mixed feed suitable for any kind or breed of dairy cow should have high protein content, with an exact digestible analysis. It can be mixed with corn, oats, barley, hay or other forage, which should be grown upon the farm, provided the mixture would save the farmer any money. As a rule, the ingredients of the highest grades are corn, distillers' grains, gluten feed, cottonseed meal, hominy meal, malt sprouts, brewers' grains, linseed meal, pure wheat bran and salt. The best grades contain no cheap fillers of any kind and so the feed is highly concentrated and roughage can be supplied at home.

DOUBLE DUTY

A Dairy Ration Has Two Main Uses—Life and Product.

[National Crop Improvement Service]

A ration is divided into two parts:

1. The part needed to maintain or keep the animal alive.

2. The part needed to make stored up material like wool, fat, meat or milk.

Milk is roughly in solids, one-third each casein (protein), fat and sugar. The casein in milk can only be furnished by the protein in the food. The fat and sugar may be derived from either protein, fat or carbohydrates.

If a cow has the ability to give 50 pounds of milk containing two pounds of casein, and only gets enough protein to make one pound of casein, then she will only give 25 pounds of milk.

A balanced ration is one that has just the exact amount of protein, fat and carbohydrates that the cow needs. Just what this is we cannot ever say exactly, because the amounts vary from week to week and no two cows are alike, nor are feeds alike.

A practical ration is one that has sufficient protein and enough total food to make the greatest amount of milk without the cow losing weight.

A commercially successful ration is the one that makes the most milk or profit, keeps the cow healthy and enables the use of the most roughage.

All the hay and ensilage a cow can eat will keep her alive and make about 15 pounds of milk. Any more milk has to come from grain or grain feed.

The farm can usually raise carbohydrates cheap in the form of hay and ensilage, and, outside of clover, peas, etc., protein can usually be bought cheaper than it can be raised.

The average price of protein feeds with 20 per cent digestible protein was about $25 to $35 per ton before the war, but the prices are much higher now, while hay (clover) with 5½ per cent digestible protein has been rated at $10 per ton, so the protein feed at $40 would furnish protein about the same as clover at $10.

DIFFERENT COWS, DIFFERENT FEEDS.

[National Crop Improvement Service]

No suggestions that we can offer nor any other formula that can be made can be followed to the letter as a druggist follows the prescription of a physician. Feeds vary in their nutritive values, one being better than the average and some not as good, and cows vary in their ability to digest and transform nutriment. These conditions make it necessary for the feeder to use a good deal of judgment and not follow too blindly the suggestions of others. Any good stock feed is recommended as a base, to be supplemented by home-grown roughage.

CONCENTRATES FOR RATIONS

Taken From an Article by E. S. Savage, Professor of Animal Husbandry, New York College of Agriculture.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

A good rule to follow in all rations is to have at least three plants represented in the ration. There are seven factors which should be considered: (1) Bulk, (2) Digestibility, (3) Relation between the digestible protein and carbohydrates and fat, (4) Variety, (5) Suitability of the feeds to the animal and product, (6) Palatability, (7) Cost.

As an example, choosing the cheapest feeds relatively, considering manurial values, suitability and all, we would recommend the following mixture of grains as suitable for dairy cows at present prices.

600 pounds distillers dried grains.
400 pounds gluten feed.
300 pounds wheat bran or brewers dried grains.
400 pounds hominy feed.
300 pounds cottonseed or oil meal.

SALT FOR CATTLE.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Professor Henry says that a cow requires three-quarters of an ounce per day per 1000 lbs. of weight and six-tenths of an ounce per day per 20 lbs. milk. Therefore a cow, which weighs 1200 lbs. and gives 30 lbs. milk, should have 1.8 ounce salt. It must be remembered, however, that salt is generally included in high-grade dairy feeds. It is well to give cows access to extra salt. They will take what their roughage demands.

THE PRICE OF FEED.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Feed is handled on a smaller margin than coal, ton for ton. The retail feed dealer who buys in carload lots can sell as cheap as the manufacturer can in less-than-carload lots, the difference in freight rates being the dealer's gross profit. In nearly every instance, a group of farmers can order their feed, through a dealer, in carloads and make a material saving. The difference in freight alone will show a good profit.

Take the chill off the drinking water in cold weather and cows will drink more and produce more.

Don't figure too fine on rations. Be liberal but don't overfeed. You can kill all of your profit by feeding more than the cow can assimilate.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

The human element in dairy feed is important. Two men may have the same equipment, one make good money, the other fail, while both are supposed to be feeding by the same system and the same tables.

Horse sense is good cow sense.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati man tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted off root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

An Unlooked-for Present.

Among little Willie's numerous birthday presents were a toy tomahawk, an airgun, and a lasso these being sent by a sport loving uncle who knew the youth's proclivities.

Shortly after breakfast Willie's mother heard a crash in the greenhouse at the foot of the garden, and went to investigate On the way she passed a few uprooted bushes and a flower-bed trampled out of recognition, and in the greenhouse itself many lassoed flower pots. Following the trail she found Willie hiding behind a tree stump

"What are you doing, Willie?" she cried in horrified tones.

"Looking for Redskins," replied the youngster

With a grim look she took Willie by the ear and led him indoors.

"Looking for red skins'" she repeated ominously as she took up a cane.

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

CHAPTER XXV.

When Waller reached his office the storm had broken in the newspaper world, presaging the hurricane of sensation, blame, acclamation, criticism and question that would sweep the country that evening and the following day. He tried to start his story, but could not. Telephone calls came to him one after the other. The news had swept through the newspaper and political part of the city as if by magic. Correspondents were already sending their papers bulletins announcing that they were about to put on the wire the "big story." Men talked eagerly about it in the hotel lobbies, at the capitol, in the office buildings, on the street corners. Waller, sitting in his office, had a mental picture of the excitement, the perturbation among the prohibitionists, the exultation of the whisky people, the doubts of some of the Smith supporters, the quick rallying to his side of his most earnest followers. And he knew that nearly every person was asking another:

"What will people think of it? What will people say?"

He thought, a little grimly, that few people have any opinions of their own, that most of them merely reflect the thoughts of others, that nearly all are too much like sheep. The great thing was to give the sensation the right twist, the proper slant, to make them say, "He's all right," instead of, "He's all wrong"

The telephone calls multiplied and piled up. To all of them he answered that at 4 o'clock he would have his story ready. When the representatives of the afternoon papers said they could not wait, he answered that he was sorry but that they would have to satisfy themselves with what everybody was saying about the incident. In his own mind, he knew that the verdict would come from the morning papers, from the finished and complete stories, not from the sketchy and [illegible] fragmentary articles spoken [illegible] the wire by men who had not time enough to reread their copy in search of mistakes. Finally, he locked his door, took the receiver off the hook, and sat down at his typewriter to get out the story which, he hoped, would turn the tide in favor of the agitator

At the end of an hour and a half, a few minutes before 4 o'clock, he arose from the machine, stretched his tired arms and shoulders, and began to put together the pages of a story which would cover two columns and a half. He had made six carbon copies of it. It was a good story. He "felt" that. It had in it some of Smith's fire and eloquence—and a great deal of Smith's anguish. Afterward, when other members of his profession had time to comment, they said it was a great piece of dramatic writing.

He called an office boy, gave him one of the copies, and instructed him to take it to a public stenographer's office and have 100 copies run off at once. He kept the other copies he had made and called up the Press club and the offices of several correspondents.

"Now," he thought, "let them come! I'm ready for them!"

They did come. In 15 minutes the room was crowded with little groups of men, their heads bent over the various copies, heads which, as the reading progressed, were shaping up the opening paragraphs and the structure of the stories they would get out, stories which, in a few hours, would do more than any other one thing to determine whether John Smith was to survive or go down in obloquy and blame. Chollie wollie had been right when he had said to Smith that he would do much to give the agitator the best of the newsdispatches.

At a quarter to 6 the writers were still coming in. He had instructed the office boy to deliver copies to every newspaper and correspondent's office in town. Now he led the crowd to the cars on their way to Smith's offices.

The agitator, stepping from the inner office, confronted the semicircle of eager faces and bowed his customary:

"Good afternoon, gentlemen."

There was nothing unusual in his demeanor. His smile was the same. He did not even look tired. As always before, he impressed them as a man vibrant with energy. He held in his left hand a paper which, some of them observed, was a map of the city of Washington. Evidently he had just left his desk to meet them. Every man facing him sensed to a nicety how near John Smith stood to tragedy and ruin. They were trained to "get" and estimate the force of events, the probable consequences of national affairs, the results of clashing personalities. And all of them, watching him intently, thought that he must be a brave man.

So keen was their appreciation of what the thing meant, so accurate their prevision of the danger threatening him, that for a few seconds nobody put the question they all wanted to ask.

He bowed slightly again and asked pleasantly:

"What is it you want to ask, gentlemen?"

"They've got all the essential facts, Mr. Smith," Waller spoke up. "They've seen my story, and that covered everything that happened at Senator Mallon's house."

"Perhaps," Smith suggested, "it might be easier for all of us, might cover everything more promptly, if I told you in my own words all there is to tell. In fact, what I said this morning in Senator Mallon's house is all I could say now. It is all—that is, it is all I know. Naturally, a man with a memory five years old cannot speak, either accurately or by gross, of things said to have happened six years ago. That seems quite logical, doesn't it? I realize the things you would ask, the things you would like to know. Believe me, gentlemen, your desire to [illegible] them cannot be one-half so great as mine Here you are, before me, thrusting your heads [illegible] stone wall of my [illegible] own past Well"—[illegible] his hand in a hopeless gesture and smiled—"I have only beat against that same stone wall for exactly five years. Your concern about the facts this evening may give you some idea of what—how shall I say it—of what I have suffered each day and each night You see, that is all. I told my story this morning."

The sallow faced young man who, by this time, had built up a reputation for his questioning powers, put the first querry:

"It is true that Mallon forbade you his house?"

"Yes," Smith said quietly; "that is true."

"And are you engaged to be married to Miss Mallon?" the interrogator went further.

"No," the answer came with the same quietness, the same directness; "that is not true."

There was a stir among the men facing him, as if, in spite of their realization that a public man under fire cannot hope to keep his private life out of the publicity glare, they resented his being wounded unnecessarily.

Avery, tall, snappy, on the alert, gave the conversation a new turn.

"Perhaps, Mr. Smith," he suggested, "you might like to hear the Les — the woman's story as she told it to me."

"Yes," he agreed quickly, "I should like to, very much."

Avery produced a copy of his story.

"I'll read you merely what she said, her own words," he explained.

While Avery read, every man in the room watched the agitator. Apparently unconscious of their scrutiny, he was listening, not so much with eagerness as with a concentrated, calculating interest, as if he strove to remember, tried to drive his brain to do a work of which it was incapable. It was plain that he was groping in the dark, beating aimlessly about in the sea of ideas brought forward by what Mary Leslie had said.

Avery read her words:

I am his wife. My maiden name was Mary Leslie. I was born and brought up in Des Moines, Ia. His name is Jack Gardner. I don't know where he was born, but it was somewhere in the south, in Virginia, I think. We met in Shanghai.' I had gone out there as a trained nurse. He had some money, and he married me a week after he met me. Then he got to hitting the pipe—opium. He had been hitting it before he married me.

You know, without my telling you, what that meant. Things went to pieces. He got me into the habit. We used to go to a place on the Foochow road. I guess it's still there. It was known as the House with the Red-lacquered Balcony, and it was run by a Portuguese we called Charlie.

As I said, things got worse. My husband's money gave out. He didn't have much, after all. Then I waked up one morning in Charlie's place to find that I had been deserted. I never saw the man again until today when I went to see Miss Edith Mallon. I went to see her because I was down and out. I've been down and out a good many times. When Gardner left me in Shanghai, I had to work as a servant. I got back to the states by coming over as a lady's maid. I came to Washington to try for a position as an army nurse. Those are the facts.

Avery stopped reading and looked at Smith.

"That's her story, sir," the correspondent said.

The agitator addressed himself to Avery:

"It recalls nothing, absolutely nothing, to my mind," he said.

Those who heard him recognized the regret, the sadness, in his voice. There could be no doubt of the fact that he was sorry he could get nothing from the story. It was evident that his great desire was to get light on the matter from somewhere.

"Does she explain," Waller asked Avery, "why she is known as Mary Leslie if she is really Mrs. John Gardner?"

"Oh, of course, she explains it," Avery said carelessly. "It's the obvious explanation: She preferred to resume her maiden name."

Smith put one brief question:

"And the proof of this marriage?"

"She has no documentary evidence," Avery replied, "but she claims it was in Shanghai. Several news associations have cabled to Shanghai to get all that end of the story."

Waller explained to Smith:

"Under favorable conditions, we ought to get something from Shanghai in six or seven hours. It's 6 o'clock here now. It's 9 o'clock in the morning there. We ought to hear something tonight."

"That is," Avery modified, "if the men there find anything."

"Look here, Avery," Waller asked; "how did she strike you? Don't you know she was lying?"

Avery hesitated.

"You know," he said, "it's hard to tell when a woman like that is lying—or how much. And it struck me—I'm talking frankly now, Mr. Smith—that she must have some facts to go on. And the way she sticks to her story is immense Five of us put her through a regular third degree, and she told always the same thing. She's game, and, if she is lying, there's another Bernhardt thrown away."

Smith bowed, making no comment.

"Is there anything else, gentlemen?" he inquired.

There was much else they wanted to know, but, realizing his helplessness they filed out of the room. Each one of them was in a hurry. All of them knew that they were about to write the strangest, most fascinating story that had ever come to light in Washington. They were intent on the story as a story, and did not think much then of the probable effect of what they would write. It was their business to tell the news to the country, and they wanted to tell it in the best way possible.

Thanks to Waller and to Smith's own personality, the "best way possible," in their eyes, was to describe the agitator's suffering and to depict the day's events in a way that would create for him sympathy and support

Waller lingered with him for a few minutes.

"I wish you'd tell me exactly how you feel about this thing," the newspaper man asked him.

"How do you mean?"

"I don't like to rush off and leave you here with all this work and the great burden of what the day has brought forth. I'd like to know just how you feel."

"I don't think I feel at all yet," Smith answered him, putting a hand on his shoulder. "I've been making a great effort to dissociate myself, personally, from it, to keep at the work. I can't trust myself yet to consider what it may mean to my personal happiness. And I'm afraid—a little afraid of what the country will say tomorrow."

"Let us attend to that," Waller cheered him. "You do the work—and you'll get by."

"At any rate," he concluded, "I would give almost anything in the world to walk this minutes into the house with the red-lacquered balcony on the Foochow road."

He dined alone that evening in a quiet little restaurant, where he knew he would not be annoyed by the curious. As he left the place, a man stepped up to him and touched him on the arm. He stopped. His thoughts had been such as to make him welcome anybody he had never seen before. There was in his mind for an instant the hope that this stranger also might know something about him. A second glance showed that the man had been drinking.

"What can I do for you?" Smith responded to the touch on his arm and to the close scrutiny. The stranger was about 45 years of age, seedy as to his dress, unkempt as to his linen and cravat. In spite of the onslaughts alcohol had made on his appearance, there was in his face the hint of a bygone decency, the ghost of a real intellect. He was pudgy and short of stature.

"May I walk a little way with you?" he requested, his voice a little thick. "I can tell you some interesting things."

"By all means," the agitator agreed.

They fell into step together. It was a crisp, clear evening. Overhead the moon, dimming the street light, hung in a silver sash of fleecy clouds.

"I know who you are," the stranger began, "the prohibition leader. You can take a look at me and know who I am. I'm the Man Who Could Handle It. I belong to that noble army of sports who drink on a system and have whisky under perfect control."

He spoke in a vein of broad sarcasm, in tune with bitterness.

"That is, I used to be the Man Who Could Handle It. I now decorate the ranks of those who have gone down and out. As the Man Who Could Handle It, I was a star performer. My will power was beautiful to behold. My physique was impervious to all ills and pains. I could work and attend to business all the time—could do it just a little better with a few drinks under my belt. The alcohol was what my system needed. The drinks gave me a whole lot of bright ideas, and it made me sociable and popular."

He stopped a moment, full in the moonlight.

"You've heard that talk before haven't you?" he inquired solemnly.

"Many times," Smith assented, falling into step again.

"I felt a real scorn for the fellows who got drunk. I studied some of them quite closely. They were curiosities to me. The stuff was meant to be enjoyed, not abused. I thought the drunkards were swine. That went on for 10 years. For 10 years I was the Man Who Could Handle It. Other men admired me for it. One or two told me it would get me some day. I laughed at that. I was a genius. I could see all the others going either to the uncomfortable gutter or to the untimely grave, but I could not see how I would ever take either route. I watched the army of wrecks and knew I had something on them. You see, I could handle it."

His self-contempt grew.

"Then one night I got drunk. A year after that I waked up one morning and had to have a drink before I could eat breakfast. Right there occurred the full extinction of the Man Who Could Handle It; and there was born the Man Whom It Handled. That's a grand metamorphosis, my friend. You see I call you 'my friend.' Dissipation makes us familiar. A grand metamorphosis, I say, from the Man Who Could Handle It to the Man Whom It Handled. And you can take it from me that its handling is rough."

"Always," Smith emphasized. He was keenly interested in what the man had to say.

"I'm a type," the other continued. "You can find me in any of the cheap, dirty saloons or in any of the swell clubs. I belonged to a swell club once. However, we'll let that pass. Yes, you can find me in any of those places. There's a big army of me—an inspiring, lovely line of men with their efficiency gone, their livers hardened, their kidneys ruined, their brains foggy, their waistline too big, their reputations too little. They are the boys who could handle it. They're the fellows who despised the drunkards and the spreers."

They had reached the entrance to Smith's office building, where they paused.

A Cheaper and Better Way.

Girard, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Assuming that figures of the allies are correct, 5,000,000 men have died during the war. It has cost $14,000 to kill each man. Properly invested, the money already spent on war would have yielded sufficient income to keep 6,000,000 boys and girls of the world in school and colleges for all time.

It would much more than support all the churches of the world until kingdom come.

Instead of permitting the royal ambitions of a few dynastic families to kill 5,000,000 men at such a cost wouldn't it be much cheaper for the rest of the folks to banish those half dozen monarchs?

The "rule of the road" for drivers in England is to drive to the left, while in the United States it is to the right.

BENEFITS OF A BABY

A year ago the New York milk committee published a [illegible] showing low baby death rates. [illegible] cities led the list. In the baby week campaign bulletin of the extension department of the University of Wisconsin claim is made that Marinette, Wis., Baraboo, Sturgeon Bay, South Milwaukee, Beaver Dam, Madison, Kenosha, Appleton, Racine and Antigo have baby death rates that are as low, practically as low, as that of La Crosse.

The state of Wisconsin has reason to be proud of the way it takes care of babies. Of course, there are many people of Scandinavian stock in that state, and the babies of that stock seem to have an unusually good hold on life. But that is not the only reason for the good showing. For one thing, they have exceptionally good campaigning for babies.

The people of other states could profit from a study of what is done in Baby week there. In the first place they have the baby show idea. They know that it reaches people in a way that counts across. The score card they use is the one gotten up by the American Medical Association.

The women who bring their babies to the baby show learn a lot. In the first place the baby gets free medical examination made by a group of specialists, each expert in his or her line. Then each gets a chance to compare her ways of caring for a baby with that of other mothers. She has a chance to talk over babies with other mothers with an expert on hand as referee. The walls of the showroom are always hung with charts giving information about baby care.

Another line of work for baby weeks advocated in this bulletin is the making of surveys of local conditions. Baby week is a good time for the people in a community to learn about the milk supply. One group of workers in a survey takes samples of milk and has them analyzed for fat or richness, for bacteria, dirt and temperature. Another group visits farms where milk is produced. Another dairies where it is pasteurized, bottled and sold.

Another line of activity is to weigh all babies and see that each receives one or more friendly visits. In addition to these they advocate the use of speeches, lectures, lantern slides and moving picture demonstrations.

They do not limit their baby welfare campaigns to large cities. They have campaigns in small cities, towns, villages and rural communities as well. Even a crossroads town can have a baby afternoon.

Do you know the baby death rate in your community? If not, then find it out. To do so may save you trouble and money.

"Uncle Joe's" First Quandary.

From the Washington Herald.

Representative Cooper of Ohio, in "Uncle Joe" Cannon to go to his home town Youngstown, and make a speech. "Uncle Joe" said he couldn't go. He wasn't in speaking trim but that he'd rather go to Youngstown than anywhere he knew. And as he said it Uncle Joe's eyes got sorter dreamy and he surprised the congressman by wandering off into the following story:

"Cooper, I got my wife out in Youngstown. Seems like yesterday when I stepped before that justice of the peace and were married. I was just starting out to practice law in Ilinois, and besides our railroad fare back home I had $100 in the world I handed that to my little new wife and told her to go to the nearest store and buy what she actually needed while I stepped around to the court house.

"In about an hour, when I went to meet her, I saw her coming to meet me, much perturbed. She had spent $6 over the hill at the store and had come for me to straighten things out. Right then and there I was up against my first big responsibility. I wanted my wife to have those goods that she had selected, but I couldn't have produced another dollar to have saved my life. So I went to the store and told the young clerk who had waited on her just how it was. And he believed in me and shipped us the goods.

"Do you know who that young clerk was, Cooper? It was Marshall Field."

And "Uncle Joe" walked off with a twinkle in his eyes.

Telling a Good Story.

From the Argonaut.

A khaki-clad warrior with a wounded arm entered the train and sat down opposite an inquisitive old gentleman. "Tommy, you're wounded" exclaimed the latter pleasantly. "How did it happen?"

"Well, it was this way, began Tommy wearily, "I was told to get even with a German sniper He was stuck up a tree about a mile away. He was a sergeant as I could see—"

"As you could see?" interposed the gentleman. "At that distance?"

"Yes, I could see his stripes. We fired at each other He got one in at me that broke my bayonet and hit me in the arm. But I soon settled him."

"With a wounded arm?"

"Yes; easy. Suddenly I heard a yell, and a whole lot of them started to climb out of the trenches. I fired as quickly as I could and 50 of them went down."

"Fifty?" said the old gentleman doubtfully. "That's a lot, isn't it?"

"Yes, 50," said Tommy, who was getting annoyed. "Then I fixed my bayonet—"

"But you said your bayonet was broken." This was the last straw

"Look here," said Tommy angrily, "I don't want a story; you want an argument."

Our Bachelor Resources.

From the Council Bluffs Nonpariel.

The Equitable Life Insurance association of New York makes the statement in its regular monthly bulletin for April that we have in this country 10,000,000 married men between the ages of 19 and 44 years. A remarkable fact is also stated in this connection and that is that there are but 12,000,000 men of this age class married.

The number of unmarried women in this classification is 9,000,000. And the question is asked in this connection "Why should we have such a host of unmarried people in our highly civilized and prosperous nation?"

This subject is worthy of consideration especially at a time when we are taking stock of our national assets with more seriousness than ever before in our history and generation.

Of this 10,000,000 unmarried men a large number, at least half, are financially able to support families. Why do they not do so? How does it happen that we have such a large number of matrimonial slackers?

The Paradise of Artists.

From the Youth's Companion.

The death of William M Chase brings to mind a story that artist used to tell in the course of a lecture on Japan

I was standing on a railway platform in Japan, waiting for a train and whiling away my time by watching a particularly beautiful sunset.

Suddenly a freight train pulled in and, stopping in front of me, cut off my view. Being a good American and trained to a very proper respect for "business," I merely turned philosophically away and proceeded to look at something else. The moment, however, the station master appeared at my side and inquired with the politest of bows if I had been enjoying the sunset.

I admitted that I had, and smilingly accepted his apology for the intrusion of the train. Of course I recognized that trains were the first considerations in station, I said.

Imagine my surprise, then, when the little Japanese shook his head firmly. "But no," he said, bowing [illegible] even more deeply than before, "the train must not be allowed to obstruct the honorable artist traveler's honorable aesthetic enjoyment"—or words to that effect. "I will cause it to withdraw"

And he actually did precisely that!

Canada extends to you a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help feed the world by tilling some of her fertile soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think of the money you can make with wheat around $2 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming in Western Canada is as profitable an industry as grain growing.

WOMEN NEVER CAN SEE JOKE

This Was Brown's Conclusion After He Had Recounted One That Had Been Told to Him.

Brown met Johnson the other morning hurrying along the street. The latter had a parcel under his arm and Brown, always inquisitive, wanted to know what it contained.

"Well," said Johnson "if you must know, I've just bought a pair of gaiters—very nice ones too."

"Where at?" asked Brown.

"Oh, I don't know the name, but it's a little shop just down that alley across there," said Johnson.

"Ha-ha!" laughed Brown who always liked his little joke, "then they must be alley-gaiters."

This so tickled Johnson that he made up his mind that he must tell that to his wife, so, on reaching home, he burst into the room, and laughed until his wife thought he would never stop.

She could not make out what on earth was the joke, so Johnson started to tell her.

"Ha-ha, he he! Oh, lor, such a joke! I just met Brown, and he asked me what I'd got in my parcel.

"I told him I'd bought a new pair of leggings, but didn't know the name of the shop, but it was just down the court.

"He immediately made a good joke out of it. He said, 'Good! Then you've got two crocodiles! What! You can't see it? Well, I'm blest!'" said he, as his wife maintained a serious expression. "That's just the worst of women. They can't see a joke when it is staring them in the face. I saw it in a moment."

Then he went out into the fresh air slamming the door as he did so.—London Tit-Bits.

"YOUR LAD AND MY LAD."

(An answer to the song, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier." Written by Miss Florence Northcott, with apologies to Wilbur D. Nesbit.)

Your lad and my lad
  And how he lives today
In your land and my land
  And half a world away.
Your joy and my joy,
  His eyes forever gleam;
Your boy and my boy,
  Some little mother's dream.
Sky blue and true blue
  His eyes still gleam aright.
May God become his guardian—
  His protector through the night!

Your lad and my lad
  And may he live to be,
As were his good forefathers,
  A son of Liberty.
Your hope and my hope,
  And may he never lie,
And honor, then, next to his God,
  His flag that waves on high.
Your heart and my heart
  Most breaking at the sight
When Old Glory calls our lads
  To help her win the fight.

Your price and my price,
  And, oh, how it seems
To send my love and your love
  Out where Old Glory gleams.
Arms ache and hearts ache
  For lads gone from our side,
But your boy and my boy
  Shall be our country's pride.
Your God and my God
  Still rules His world below,
And you're glad and I'm glad
  To send our lads, I know.

TYPHOID CARRIERS.

Seventeen years ago Mrs. Y. had typhoid fever. Later her son had the disease. Her daughter was vaccinated against it. During the last five years six country school teachers had boarded in Mrs. Y.'s home. Four of them had typhoid. Mrs. Y. was the cook in her family.

Last year they had a country school picnic near Helen, Cal., Mrs. Y.'s home. Mrs. Y. made the chocolate ice cream. She skimmed some milk, mixed the milk with chocolate, eggs, and sugar, cooked it, cooled it, added the whipped cream, and put it in the freezer. It stayed in the united freezer from 6:30 until 1 o'clock, when she froze it and took it to the picnic. They had all sorts of picnic foods supplied by the neighbors, according to custom. One neighbor brought vanilla ice cream.

An epidemic of typhoid fever developed in the community. There were 23 cases and three deaths. The investigators were speedily able to settle on the picnic as the time and place of the infection. There were 29 persons at the picnic. Seventeen ate chocolate ice cream but no vanilla. Eight ate both chocolate and vanilla. Of the 25 who ate chocolate ice cream 23 had typhoid fever. The only persons to escape were Mrs. Y. and her daughter. None of those who ate vanilla ice cream but no chocolate contracted the disease.

The evening of the picnic all those who ate Mrs. Y.'s ice cream except Mrs. Y. and her daughter were taken sick with vomiting and diarrhoea. This lasted two days. About eight days after the picnic the chocolate ice cream eaters began to develop typhoid. Those who had eaten the most chocolate ice cream developed it quickest and had it worst.

Upon examination it was found that Mrs. Y. was a typhoid carrier. She infected the ice cream probably when she had skimmed the milk or when she whipped the cream. The mixture of boiled custard and whipped cream set aside in the freezer for six hours before freezing was a fine culture media and the typhoid bacilli in it multiplied greatly. When the cream was eaten the dose of bacilli was so great that it caused diarrhoea and vomiting within a few hours and typhoid a few days later.

Mrs. Y. had been a carrier for years and somebody should have guessed it. Her own son and four school teachers boarding in her home had had the disease in less than 10 years. She was the cook. Yet she suspected nothing and the school teachers secured were willing to keep up the supply of victims.

In spite of this history of typhoid in her household her neighbors and fellow school patrons were anxious to eat her ice cream. No doctor had "smelt a house." The health officers had never wondered why the Y. household had had so much typhoid.

It is the rule of the California state board of health that typhoid carriers must enter into a contract with the state board. In consideration of being allowed liberty to go and come the carrier agrees:

1. To take no part in the preparation and handling of food. Not to participate in the management of a boarding house, restaurant, food store, or to be involved in the preparation or handling of food.
2. Always to dispose of excreta by mixing with 5 per cent carbolic or formalin.
3. To notify the health department of cases of typhoid among persons in contact.
4. To notify the health department of changes of address.
5. To submit specimens on request.
6. To report to the state health department twice a year on a blank submitted for the purpose.

An Innovation.

The girls are wearing overalls, and yet no startled heaven falls. The men who deal in handmedowns, in this and all adjacent towns, are selling now to damsels fair the kind of duds their brothers wear. When first I heard it I was shocked—immodest schemes I've always mocked, but when I saw a transformed maid, I felt my opposition fade. In cottages and huts and halls, the girls are wearing overalls. And they look smooth, I must confess, without the old accustomed dress. They say it is the best of boons to trot around in pantaloons, when they are doing household chores, when dusting chairs and sweeping floors. Their gowns are hanging on the walls; the girls are wearing overalls. It's only in their homes, thus far, these epoch making damsels are; thus far they lack the nerve or heart to spring their garments in the mart, but soon they'll bid their fears retreat, and we shall see them in the street, and all of us will then agree that they're a charming bunch to see. Farewell to aprons, gowns and shawls! The girls are wearing overalls.

Dominion.

Lords of disaster, waiting still to reap
  New glory for the dooms that you have sown,
New glory for the ruins stone on stone,
And bleeding tribute wrung from them that weep;
Great is your faith above the watch you keep
  Till there shall spring some vintage of your own
Out of the tilth of blood and tears alone,
And trodden breath still crying from the deep.
Yet, lords of famine, one gift late discerned
But still a triumph and a dwelling place,
One master-work of night is surely done.
Only your chosen way could so have earned
The men and brothers of the Belgian race
Their everlasting stronghold in the sun.
—Josephine Preston Peabody in "Harvest Moon" (Houghton-Mifflin).

CANADA'S IMMIGRATION

Increased by About Sixty Per Cent in Past Six Months.

That Canada is at war is now more fully appreciated on this side of the boundary line, now that the United States has stepped alongside its northern neighbor and linked hands in the great struggle for a freer democracy throughout the civilized world. As a result of this a greater interest than ever is seen in the mutual effort to develop both the United States and Canada. Recently, just before the time that the United States declared its intention to enter the contest and contribute of its resources to the defeat of the autocracy, whose design was to permeate the world, Western Canada made an appeal for farm labor to till the fields and prepare the soil for the crops of grain that were necessary to feed the fighting forces and keep up the requirements necessary for the Allies. The responses were so great that before half the time limit expired, over six thousand laborers were secured. This was not sufficient, but once the United States was declared to be in a condition of war, and farm labor required here to meet any exigency as to short rations that might arise, the sister to the north, withdrew from attempts, which might mean a restriction of the farm labor supply in the United States. But even with this it is thought Canada will now be fairly well supplied.

Apart, however, from the farm labor proposition, it is gratifying from both a United States and Canadian point of view that the immigration of farmers to take up homestead lands and to purchase improved and unimproved land in Canada, has shown such a wonderful increase in the past three months. The great struggle for increasing the food supply has a broader and greater significance than ever. The food must come into existence, whether the rich soils of the United States or those of Canada be the factor.

It is altogether probable that the action of the Canadian Government in taking the duty off wheat going into Canada thus automatically lifting the duty off that coming into the United States may not be responsible for an increased immigration to Canada. Canada's reputation for growing larger average yields and a better quality of grain, and on lands, many of which are free, as well as those that range from $15 to $35 an acre is an appeal that is being responded to by farmers who are now renting high-priced lands, is another reason for expecting an increasing number of farmers from the United States.

Mr. W. D. Scott, Superintendent of Immigration at Ottawa, Canada, recently gave out figures concerning immigration from the United States, which shows that the increase in the past three or four months was 60 per cent over the same period last year, and Mr. Scott forecasts that during the calendar year of 1917 there will be over one hundred per cent increase and be much heavier than for many years past. Mr. Scott declares that already this spring more settlers' effects have entered Canada than crossed during the whole of last year, and the movement has just merely started.

The new settlers are coming from numerous states through the ports of Emerson, North Portal and Coutts, as well as from Oregon and Washington, through Kingsgate and Vancouver.

There arrived in Saskatchewan during the year ending December 31, 1916, a total of 8,136 persons as compared with 5,812 during the twelve months previous. At the same time nearly twice as many immigrants passed through the immigration department at Edmonton, Alberta, in the last twelve months as for the same period of the year before.

The number of settlers from Eastern Canada migrating to the west also increased. From January 1 to March 31, 1917, the number of cars of stock that passed through the Winnipeg yards was 750, as compared with 361 last year. A fair estimate of the value of each car would be about $2,000, which means that the west has secured additional live stock to the value of $150,000 or more, during the first three months of 1917, not taking into account that brought in by immigrants from the United States.—Advertisement.

Here is Proof by Women who Know.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take."—Mrs. Margaret Quinn, Rear 259 Worthen St., Lowell, Mass.

She Tells Her Friends to Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies.

North Haven, Conn.—"When I was 45 I had the Change of Life which is a trouble all women have. At first it didn't bother me but after a while I got bearing down pains. I called in doctors who told me to try different things but they did not cure my pains. One day my husband came home and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash?' Well, I got them and took about 10 bottles of Vegetable Compound and could feel myself regaining my health. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good. Any one coming to my house who suffers from female troubles or Change of Life, I tell them to take the Pinkham remedies. There are about 20 of us here who think the world of them."—Mrs. Florence Isella, Box 197, North Haven, Conn.

Patents for Poets.

"You are a spring poet, I believe?" began the intruder.

"I am," sadly responded the gentleman of the third-floor back; "although, I must confess—"

"Exactly!" broke in the intruder. "That is why I called."

"You are a publisher?" cried the spring poet.

"No, sir," responded the caller; "but I am general agent for one of the greatest money-making inventions of the age!"

"Alas! I have no money to save!" moaned the man of sonnets.

"But listen," replied the caller. "My invention is bound to suit you. It is a little rubber-stamp with the words 'Declined with thanks' upon it. You write your poem, put it in an envelope, slip in a piece of paper with those words on it, address the envelope to yourself, open the envelope, read the slip, throw the whole business into the waste-paper basket, and by these very simple means," concluded the man of genius, "you may save ten times the cost of my invention in a single week!"

LESS WORK, MORE POTATOES

Straw Mulch Not Only Eliminates Cultivation; But Produces Hardier Potatoes for Seed.

The straw mulch applied to the potato patch will not only grow better potatoes, but will eliminate cultivation the bugbear of the average home gardener, says the experiment truck crops man at Iowa State College.

Experiments conducted at Iowa State college have shown that besides eliminating cultivation the straw mulch produces hardier potatoes because it keeps the soil from 18 to 20 degrees cooler on the hottest days than the dust mulch. The importance of this is seen when it is recognized that one of the limiting factors of potato growing in the corn belt is the fact that the soil gets to hot.

The straw mulch is entirely practical for the home garden potato patch On larger patches it is particularly valuable to apply to two orthree rows for seed production. Potatoes thus grown for seed have proven as valuable as the best northern grown seed, which often sells for $4 a bushel.

Do not apply the straw mulch until the potatoes are up and have been harrowed twice. Then get good, clean straw, free from weed seed. Apply about 12 inches deep. This will settle to the right depth of about 6 inches.

30,000 Food Volunteers

Iowa has responded to date with 30,000 enlistments to the call for recruits in the army volunteer food producers sent out by the agricultural extension departments at Iowa State college Enrollments are still coming in daily by the hundreds to the department.

Of hese 30,000 practically 4,000 have signed up to do farm work this summer, 4,000 for garden work; 3,000 for canning, preserving and drying, 2,000 for poultry production and the remainder for active work in seed selection, fighting insect and other pests, seed storing pork production and health conservation.

It all means that with favorable weather conditions Iowa will produce huge crops this year," says the extension men. "She will plant an extra 1,000,000 acres to corn, which means probably an increase of 34,000,000 bushels at the least.

With the slogan of "A farm bureau in every community in the state" the extension department reports that 57 such bureaus have already been formed in Iowa Each of he bureaus in the 28 organized counties has already placed from 30 to 60 men for farm labor Altho farmers report little labor shortage now they fear it within the next few weeks. Banks, commercial clubs, manufactures and others are expected to co-operate to help solve the problem.

Already several manufacturing concerns have signified their intention of allowing part of their employees a leave of absence to do farm labor in the farm rush season The banks of Creston will allow their employees two weeks extra vacation to do farm work and will pay the difference between farm and bank wages. The commercial club of Bloomfield has pledged that each of its 150 members will work two days on the farm this summer

Nineteen hundered boys and girls have signed up to date for the acre corn contest and 1100 for the pig club cotest

IN ONE HOUSE 60 YEARS.

But few people live in one house for sixty years. Clear Lake has one resident, however who has this distinction. Mrs. R. A. Howard. She came to Clear Lake with her parents in the spring of 1857. They at once once built the house in which Mrs. Howard now lives, it being then one of the best houses in Cerro Gordo county. During all these years alterations have been made on the interior, but the outer part is exactly as built in 1857. A number of the rooms have never been re-plastered and yet the plastering is in perfect condition. The front rooms were all finished in walnut, and the stairway was built entireley of walnut. Mrs. Howard has never become discontented with her home. In fact she would not trade it today for the best place in town. After having spent three score years in this good old home she proposes to remain here the rest of her life. —Clear Lake Reporter.

Flies are More Dangerous Than You Think

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But at least we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

Surprising conclusions are arrived at by an aviation expert, who has been examining the airoplane losses on the western front in the last six months. "If we allow 20 machines wrecked to each one the enemy destroyed," he says, "we see at what a huge cost this war is in the air is being conducted. The average cost of an airoplano roughly is about £1,000, so that at this rate the British loss in material has been approximately over 4,000 machines in six months, costing £4,000,000; the French very nearly the same; while the Germans must have lost 13,320 machines, with a total value of about £13,320,000. It may be that the German loss is not quite so great as we have made out, because there appears to be less actual flying done by the German pilots in proportion to their strength

Lord Davenport, the British food controller, an an interview at which he announced a number of new regulations, observed, with regard to the order prohibiting the feeding of game with grain required for food or stock rearing: "Pheasant rearing and indulgences of that kind, which were all right in happier days, are indulgences we do not wish to see continued, and this is our method of bringing them to an end. I do not suggest that there is much of this going on We mean to be on the right side. The broods will keep themselves alive in the woods if a man allows them to go in the woods. I do not say we are giving the farmer liberty to shoot them, but that is what we mean in so many words We mean the order to be observed, and if there are any abuses proceeding from it we shall take further and stronger measures to put in in force"

An ancestor of count von Bernstorff, the dismissed German ambassador fought against America in our war for freedom The fact is brought out by a passage in the 'Souvenirs du Chevalier de Cussy." Among the acquaintances made by the chevalier in 1820, when he joined the staff of the French embassy in Berlin, was the court chamberlain, count von Bernstorff, grandfather of the former ambassador, Countess Bernstorff,' wrote De Cuddy, "bears a singular forename, America.' This was bestowed on her because she was born in that country during the war of independence Her father was in command of one of the regiments hired out to the English by the elector of Hesse."

One of the most remarkable naps on record is that of Caroline Olson a native of the little island of Oku, off the coast of Sweden, who fell asleep in 1875 and did not wake until 1917 For the first 14 years of her life Caroline Olson was in perfect health Then she fell ill and ultimately sank into a trance from which no one could awaken her Food was artificially administered and for years she exhibited no interest in anyone or anything Then suddenly she awoke and the most careful examination failed to reveal the slightest weakness or mental defect Since then she has enjoyed exceptionally good health

In effects, a recent bulletin of the United States department of agriculture asks why the American farmer can not put straw to the same use as it is put by the European farmer. In Europe the farmer knows as well as the American farmer that straw is not liked by stock, but instead of burning it, or otherwise wasting it, the European farmer chops it up, mixes it with beets, mangels, silage or other feeds, and makes it so palatable that it can be fed to good advantage.

Knitting in church is suggested by the Rev A. M. Mitchell, a Church of England clergyman in his parish magazine "Better to knit in church for our soldiers and sailors in sermon time," he says than to talk and whisper, laugh and giggle, flirt and misbehave, criticise hats, gowns and fur coats. Those constantly knitting learn to do so quite mechanically and their attention is not diverted from speech. Knitting in sermon time would mean a great saving of time."

The torpedo from a submarine can be fired either while the submarine is on the surface or completely submerged. Usually a submarine comes within 10 feet of the surface, with only the periscope showing, and discharges its torpedo If there is danger of the submarine being fired upon by the ship the submarine gets the proper position of the ship, submerges itself completely and then fires.

Photographs purporting to have been taken in Berlin are displayed in London shop windows, showing elephants dragging heavy vehicles through the streets of the Prussian capital. Captions under these photographs assert that the war has so reduced means of locomotion in Berlin that elephants from the zoological gardens have been pressed into the hauling service.

Thousands of British war widows and their children are to be transported to Canada, with the expectation that many of the women will be married to Canadian farmers, according to the plans of Commissioner David Lamb, of the International Emigration society of the Salvation Army

Veldt is a changed form of the Dutch "veld," the same as our English word field It means simply open ground, or prairie Westervelt means west field, Roosevelt, rose field, Plauvelt, blue field There are other Dutch names ending in "velt," and many parallel names in German and other tongues.

Malaria is much less widely prevalent in the United States now than formerly The northern boundary has gradually receded, leaving here and there more or less localized endemic foci It has all but disappeared from Wisconsin and Michigan, states once badly infected

$1,250 IS PAID IN OMMEN-VOGEL CASE

Loser in Breach of Promise Suit Makes Settlement With Former Sweetheart.

Sac City, Ia., May 26.—The principals in the Vogel-Ommen breach of promise suit, in which the jury awarded Miss Vogel $3,000, have agreed to a settlement in order to avoid an appeal, notice of which had been filed by the defendant. By the terms of the settlement, the Chicago girl receives $1,250 and Mr. Ommen also pays the costs of the action. The amount fixed by the jury, $3,000, represented Mr. Ommen's total resources, according to testimony when the case was on trial.

PRIMGHAR SCHOOL TURNS OUT CLASS OF 18 PUPILS

Primghar, Ia., May 26.—The sermon to the graduating class of the high school was given last Sunday evening at the Congregational church, by Rev. W M. Swann, the pastor. The class play Monday evening was a decided success, and was given at Gaza Tuesday evening and will be repeated in Primghar at the opera house next Monday evening for the benefit of the Red Cross society. The title of the play is "A Strenuous Life." Commencement exercises were held Thursday evening at the opera house. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Frank H. Gamel, of Vinton, Ia.

There are 18 graduates this year, a good number for a town of 1,000 people. One, Merritt Whitmer, is already in Boston at the navy training ship. The names of the graduates are George Augustson, Gladys Avery, Ralph Benson, Myrtle Chambers, Stephen De Vries, Clifton Emery, Edward Haibach, Ellen Hendrick, Roy Keene, Ivan King, Myra Metcalf, Edna Norland, William Overcash, Lois Ward, Marie White, Mabel Whitmer, Merritt Whitmer, Julia Wilson.

PLYMOUTH COUNTY WILL SHOW LOYALTY JUNE 5

LeMars, Ia., May 26.—All Plymouth county registrars for registration day have been sworn in, and each man has agreed to give his time without compensation The registrars were enlisted yesterday by Sheriff Hugh Maxwell and Deputy Sheriff James Sickler. Each officer organized a half of the county. The first absentee registration blank demanded in Plymouth county was that filled out today by Paul Leslie Davis, a student at Western Union college, whose home is in Oakland Ia Arrangements were completed today by directors of the Commercial club for a public demonstration on registration day, June 5 The principal speaker of the day will be Rev. D. R. Huber, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church, Sioux City. Music will be rendered afternoon and night by the LeMars city band Ladies of the LeMars chapter of the National Red Cross society will be stationed near the registration booths, and will pin badges on all who register

NO MORE SUNDAY LAW CASES TO BE BROUGHT

LeMars, Ia., May 26 —In an open letter, submitted today, County Attorney Clarence D Roseberry stated that at least until further notice is given, there would be no prosecutions in Plymouth county on account of the sale on Sunday of cigars, newspapers and ice cream It was set forth that garages, bakeries, hotels and restaurants could transact ordinary business on Sunday. County Attorney Roseberry, in his letter, took a rap at the $1 fine farce which is being enacted in some localities"

SAC COUNTY NOW READY FOR REGISTRATION DAY

Sac City, Ia., May 26.—Sac county officials believe that they are among the first in the state to complete all arrangements for the conscription registration on June 5. Sheriff J. H. Stoner has been in every precinct in the county to name registrars and to select places for holding the registration. He reports that he has found everywhere absolute loyalty and enthusiastic war spirit. In his rounds he encountered but one man who objected to the conscription plan.

DENISON RECRUITS 29 MEN FOR IDA GROVE MILITIA

Denison, Ia., May 26.—The 29 young men from Denison who volunteered to serve in the Iowa National Guard with the Ida Grove company have received uniforms and are now drilling daily under a detailed officer They are expecting to be here until about July 15 when enlistment in the federal service takes place.

LEMARS—Carload shippers in LeMars are to receive the benefits of reciprocal local switching arrangements just entered into by the Omaha and Illinois Central railways, according to communications received today by Edward G. Fairfield, secretary of the LeMars Commercial club. The new relations between the two roads will mean a saving to local interests which have cars moved from the tracks of one line to another

DENISON—Sheriff Cummings, of this county, has selected the men in the various townships who will act as registrars on June 5, when the registration is made for the men liable to military duty in the county There is no pay connected with the services, which extend from 7 a m to 9 p. m., as it is held a patriotic duty for men to so serve.

CHEROKEE—The closing event of the high school athletic year will take place Friday when the interclass track meet will be held. The meet will take place in Nokomis park and many big events will be staged. The Cherokee high school has turned out some mighty good material this year and a meet of a high order of merit is expected.

PRIMGHAR—A mass meeting of the citizens of Primghar and vicinity will be held tonight at the court house to effect a permanent organization of the local Red Cross. Already 60 members have been secured by the temporary committee in charge preliminary to the meeting.

SAC CITY—Mayor J. H. Stafford has called a mass meeting for Monday evening, May 28, for the purpose of organizing for affiliation with the American Red Cross society.

SAC CITY—The Sac City Commercial club and a chorus of 60 voices will present a sacred cantata here on the evening of Decoration day, dividing the proceeds between the Red Cross society and the band.

SHELDON—The commercial club is making plans for a big celebration in Sheldon on registration day, with some prominent speaker here.

SHELDON—The Sheldon band has been reorganized with Professor Lohr as leader and gives promise of being the best in years.

CROPS FIFTH LARGER IN IOWA, HOOVER TOLD

Truck Acreage 25 to 40 Per Cent Greater—Harding Is to Cooperate With Hoover.

Des Moines, Ia., May 26.—Gov. W. L. Harding received a telegram from Herbert C. Hoover, food dictator asking that the governor of the state of Iowa for his cooperation with him in the production, conservation, and distribution of foods.

The governor wired a reply informing Hoover the work the state has already done in the matter and asked for suggestions that Hoover might make.

"I believe I am safe in saying," said Harding, "that the acreage of crops raised in Iowa has been increased 20 per cent and the increase in garden truck 25 and 40 per cent.

HAVNER NOT DETERRED BY COURT RULING, HE STATES

Des Moines, Ia., May 26.—Judge Meyer's decision favoring Sunday movies and baseball games will not change Attorney General Havner's Blue bill enforcement policy. Havner stated today that he would not withdraw instructions to suppress these two forms of Sunday amusements.

After comparing the municipal court to a justice of the peace Havner said, "I certainly would not be deterred from the law enforcement by a justice of the peace's decision."

SECRET SOCIETY FORMED TO SPOT ALIEN ENEMIES

Muscatine, Ia., May 26.—That an organization more for reaching and more powerful than the famous Ku Klux Klan of the south which suppressed the danger of negro rule after the close of the civil war exists in the United States and has its representatives in Muscatine was the startling revelation made today.

The body which is even more secret than the Klan is an organization recruited from the civil population of the country and is considered more far reaching than even the machinery of the department of justice in ferreting out anti-American plots.

The movement was begun in the east, it is said, and spread quickly to all parts of the country. Its adaptability to the problem of locating dangerous Teutonic sympathizers led to its recognition by the department of justice, it is stated

CHEROKEE THRIFT SOCIETY ENROLLS SCORES OF WOMEN

Cherokee, Ia., May 26.—The thrift campaign recently undertaken by the women's club of this city is proving to be very successful. Large numbers of the women of the city have signed the pledge and are giving their every effort to the conserving of food. The members of the women's club feel certain that the campaign will prove to be of much benefit and they are hoping that the campaign will be extended to surrounding towns.

COUNCIL BLUFFS—"The purpose of making this deed is to meet an unfounded and damn fool criticism or objection that has been made to a deed which these grantors executed and delivered to M L. Turner on August 12, 1907" Thus tersely reads one paragraph of a deed which was filed for record here by F. A. Turner, a well known attorney of Avoca.

DES MOINES—Millers or other dealers in flour cannot sell 48-pound sacks of flour after January 1, 1918, even though the sack may be marked 48 pounds. The new law requiring 49 pounds to the sack, or 196 pounds to the barrel, goes into effect on that date and therefore no 48-pound sack goes.

CHEROKEE—Miss Kate Logan, formerly of this city, has been appointed to the position of national secretary of the Y W C A with headquarters in New York city Miss Logan will have charge of the town and country work of the association She succeeds Miss Jessie Field, also an Iowan, who resigned recently.

DUBUQUE—A light frost was reported in a number of exposed places in this section of the state this morning It is believed that but little, if any, damage was done

BULGARIAN SOCIALISTS FAVOR RESTORATION

Stockholm, May 26.—The restoration of Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Rumania was demanded by the Bulgarian socialist delegates in a conference with the Dutch and Scandinavian committees. They also declared themselves in favor of a national reunion of Bulgarians as a step to give permanent tranquility to the Balkans.

The Bulgarian delegates further declared that the right to settle their own affairs should be extended to all peoples, such as the Armenians and Poles.

They expressed the hope that the problem of Alsace-Lorraine be settled on these lines. The convocation of a general socialist conference was also advocated.

IOWA FEDERATION IS STRONGEST IN UNION

Women's Clubs Show 20 Per Cent Gain in Two Years—Plan War Work.

Fort Dodge, Ia., May25.—A review of the most successful two-year period in the history of the Iowa State Federation of Women's clubs leading up to the present war and women's relation to it, "which is inevitably to change all of life for many of us," was given by Mrs. Frances E. Whitley, of Webster City, state president, in her report to the biennial convention here today.

An array of scores of contributions by women to the state's advance in social, political and education lines was followed in Mrs. Whittley's report by an outline of the larger issues of the war, predicting that Iowa's womanhood would "nobly, worthily respond" to the country's call.

Intimating that the details of woman's war service remained to be worked out, Mrs. Whitley said.

"We shall set ourselves to the practical and prosaic tasks of food production and conservation, which, we are told, will make woman's work in the home as valuable and patriotic as man's work on the battlefield We shall fit ourselves to do every service for the building up of the industries, the manufactures which are necessary to sustain our forces."

But, Mrs. Whitley said, women also will hold fast in this war time upheaval "in which we are facing the wreck of so much that we had thought secure to the finer issues of life as a sanctuary of the spirit."

Mrs. Whitley, suggesting a division of the legislative committee to provide a subcommittee to work solely for woman suffrage in Iowa, said.

"Here is a movement which this organization has indorsed in three successive biennials.

"This question will never cease to come up during legislative sessions until the ballot is given to women"

Among future legislatfve plans outlined by Mrs. Whitley was an attack on billboards along Iowa's highways.

Of purely organization matters the president suggested formation of two new committees, one on finance and another on ways and means of issuing a state paper for the federation.

The president's report claimed for Iowa 625 more women's clubs than any other state in the union, the most completely organized state federation in the country and a membership today of nearly 20 000, which is an increase of about 20 per cent in two years.

THREE-FOURTHS OF CORN IN IOWA NOW IN GROUND

Des Moines, Ia., May 25 -The weekly bulletin of the Iowa weather and crop service today made public the following summary for the week ending May 22.

The weather was ideal for growth of vegetation and for field work up to Sunday afternoon, when general rains set in with much lower temperature. There were, however, damaging wind, hail and electrical storms over the northeast and north central districts on the night of the 18th, which did some damage to crops and property The temperature was much higher, with maxima up to or near 90 on two or three days Under such favorable conditions all vegetation made very rapid growth and field work was rushed. About 70 to 75 per cent of a greatly increased corn acreage has been planted, and the early planted corn is up and shows a good stand. Considerable plowing for corn is yet to be done, especially on bottom ground. Winter wheat is stooling nicely and all small grain, grass, potatoes and garden truck made material improvement, and will be still further benefited by the copious to heavy rains at the close of the week, although the cool weather will check the rapid growth. Apples, cherries, plums and strawberries are still promising, but cane fruits and grapes will be short. An increased acreage of sugar beets is reported from some of the north central counties.

COUNTY SPELLING BEE TO BE HELD AT LEMARS FRIDAY

LeMars, Ia., May 25 —Next Saturday will be an event for pupils of Plymouth county's schools. In the forenoon will be held in the high school here the commencement exercises of eighth grade pupils of the village and country schools. A spelling contest in which the best spellers of the various schools in the county will compte, will be held in a local theater in the afternoon. All day Saturday the work of pupils who have been instructed in manual training, domestic science and industrial art will be on exhibition in the Commercial club rooms. The LeMars Commercial club will give three prizes to winners in the spelling contest. The first prize is a free trip to the state fair in Des Moines. Seventy eighth grade pupils will graduate.

ROOSTER IS CONDEMNED; "SWAT HIM," SAYS BARNEY

Des Moines, Ia., May 25.—The week beginning June 4, was today officially designated as "swat the rooster week" for Iowa, in a statement issued by W B. Barney, state dairy and food commissioner.

Mr. Barney's proclamation follows

"As a means of conserving Iowa's egg crop, I set apart the week of June 4, as 'swat the rooster week.' Iowa farmers and poultry dealers are urged to cooperate in ridding the laying flocks of roosters, and thus 'do their bit' in helping Iowa produce more food."

Copies of the statement were sent to several hundred dealers throughout the state who handle poultry and eggs at retail. Commissioner Barney announced that a pamphlet on the subject will be issued shortly to 40,000 or 50,000 farmers of the state.

CHEROKEE OFFICER WILL TRAIN GRINNELL STUDENTS

Cherokee, Ia., May 25.—Lieut. Ralph S. Geiger, formerly of Co. M., of this city, has been assigned to Grinnell college, where he will have charge of the training of the students in military tactics. Mr. Geiger is a man of experience, having been a member of Company M for several years and has also had considerable training while on duty with his company on the Mexican border. The Scarlet and Black, the college publication, says that three companies will be organized among the students, each company to receive military instruction twice every week.

BALE RENAMED PRESIDENT; BANKERS TO SPENCER NEXT

Storm Lake, Ia., May 23.—Two hundred members of Group 2 of the Iowa Bankers' association attended the convention in this city yesterday. The feature of the morning session was the round table in charge of J. H. McCord, of Spencer, and the burden of the discussion was the Liberty loan and ways and means of increasing the production of Iowa farms. The principal address was delivered by Dr. A Stanton Olinger, president of Buena Vista college.

WIFE OF CONGRESSMAN HULL DIES FROM DRUG

Swallows Bichloride of Mercury Tablets, Mistaking Them for Headache Remedy.

Washington, D. C., May 24.—The death last night of Mrs. Mary L. Hull, wife of Representative Harry Hull, 46 years old, from bichloride of mercury poisoning, shocked the entire Iowa delegation today.

Mrs. Hull took eight powerful tablets by mistake for headache medicine and died in two hours at the Emergency hospital. The body will be taken to Iowa. Mrs. Hull was Miss Mary Louise Harris. She leaves her husband and 6-year-old son.

Representative Hull, with his small son, will leave here with the body tonight for Williamsburg. Ladies of the Iowa delegation took charge of arrangements today, headed by Mrs. Cummins and Mrs. Towner.

WEGENER KIDNAPING CASE REVERSED BY HIGH COURT

Des Moines, Ia., May 24.—The supreme court of Iowa today reversed the conviction of Ed Wagener, former Valley Junction saloon keeper, in the famous Charles Ashworth kidnaping and robbery case, and sent the case back to the Polk county court for retrial. The reversal was based on the misconduct of the jury, which convicted Wegener, the high court finding that jurors considered other facts not set out in the record of the trial.

Errors in Judge Dudley's rulings were also found. The opinion was given by Justice Gaynor with Justices Preston, Evans, and Weaver dissenting.

Wegener was accused of kidnaping Charles Ashworth, wealthy Valley Junction farmer with the aid of Frank LaVelle, railroad brakeman, compelling him to sign a check for $5,000. He was sentenced to 20 years on a charge of robbery in connection with the affair. He pleaded insanity. LaVelle pleaded guilty, and is serving 20 years now. The robbery occurred in October 1914, and Wegener was convicted in December 1915.

WESTERN UNION COLLEGE TO GRADUATE 19 PUPILS.

Lemars, Ia., May 24.—The week of June 1 to 6 will be one of importance in the life of Western Union college. A class of 19 will be graduated from the several departments, including 10 degree students. This is the largest class that has been graduated for a number of years. Six of this number are to receive the A B., two the B. S., one the B. Mus., and one the B. Accts.

The class play to be given Friday evening is a dramatization of Harold Bell Wright's popular story, "The Shepherd of the Hills." The work was done by three members of the class under the direction of the professors of English and public speaking.

LITIGATION IN PROSPECT OVER IDA GROVE ESTATE.

Ida Grove, Ia., May 24.—Henry Wigand, one of the pioneer and wealthy farmers of Ida county, died April 27, and when his will was probated in the clerk of the court's office it was found that he had given the only son the real estate, with the provision that his widow was to have a life interest therein, and at her death the son was to pay the three married daughters $2,000 each and a single daughter $3,000. The four girls have pooled issues and employed an attorney and unless a settlement can be effected litigation will result. The dead man held real estate estimated to be worth $40,000 and considerable farm equipment, stock, etc., that will make the entire seate worth nearly $50,000.

CLASS OF 52 INITIATED BY KNIGHTS OF LEMARS.

LeMars Ia., May 24.—Fifty-two members were initiated yesterday into Trinity council, Knights of Columbus A banquet which followed the initiation and degree work was attended by 505 members and their friends. The degree work was under the direction of a team from Dubuque. Hon. T. F. Griffin, of Sioux City, was toastmaster Among the speakers were Rev. Christopher Murphy, of Trinity college, Sioux City.

Des Moines, Ia., May 22.—A second letter from Attorney General Havner to county attorneys this week has been made necessary, it was said at his office, because of the close an interpretation on his letter of last week. The attorneys says that garages may be kept open on Sunday, that transportation by rail will not be interfered with and that church services do not in any way come under the ruling of the law. Word from Colfax that the mayor of that city had threatened to stop all trains from operating within that city on Sunday led to the second letter of Mr. Havner.

JAPS BOOST GOLD SCARE U. S. WORRIES

Since January, $35,000,000 Has Been Shipped From San Francisco to Tokio, and More Is to Follow.

MAY CHECK REDEMPTION

Balance of Trade and Payment of Allies' Munition Debts Fail to Explain Sudden Demand.

Washington, May 26 Japan is drawing gold from the United States at a rate which has caused considerable interest and some speculation as to the meaning of the movement. Approximately $35,000,000 has been withdrawn since January 1, and other withdrawals are expected.

Action Puzzles Officials.

Officials here feel that the movement is not fully accounted for by the balance of trade. The possibility that some of the other allied governments are paying their munitions bills to Japan with gold this country made available by the extension of credits by this government, has been discussed, but it is believed that this contingency alone would not account for the strong current of gold shipments westward.

The gold supply at San Francisco, from which shipments to Japan have been made, has at present reached a point where the government has decided that the cost of transferring gold across the country properly should be borne by those interests intending to ship it out of the country. In addition the retention of the increased gold supply largely accumulated during the war is regarded as highly desirable and its export is discouraged.

Powerless To Check Flow.

Treasury officials under existing laws have no power to prohibit the exportation of gold, but must redeem gold certificates with gold The law provides that this shall be done in Washington and the redemption of such certificates at subtreasuries in the past has been purely through courtesy and for convenience of bankers. Should the heavy export movement of gold continue, it is possible that the government may discontinue the redemption of certificates at subtreasuries and require them only at Washington, where the gold thus withdrawn is intended for export.

New York, May 26 Japan's withdrawal of gold from the United States was explained today at the Yokohama Specie bank as being "purely for adjustment of trade balance" and without any further significance It was pointed out that the war has made Japan a great creditor nation, that her exports greatly exceed imports and that the movement of gold has been made imperative by abnormal commercial conditions.

In banking circles the opinion prevails that Japanese bankers have been drawing down their reserves in this country to meet increased expenditures at home, where reserves could be loaned out at better interest returns.

WANT GERMAN SHIPS BARRED; MORE FOOD

Christiania Workmen Present Resolution to Parliament to Keep Supplies at Home.

London, May 26.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen reports that Christiania workmen marched down their tools yesterday and marched to the parliament building where they presented a resolution demanding the prohibition of the exportation of provisions and the seizure of all ships necessary to furnish food and raw materials for the country.

They also demanded that no German ships be permitted to enter Norwegian ports on the ground that they carry food away.

PHILIPPINES BUY LIBERTY LOAN BONDS

New York, May 26.—From the Philippines has come the first "Liberty" loan subscription to reach the liberty loan committee from insular territory of the United States. It amounts to $20,000 from a business concern at Manila, made through the Philippine National bank. Charles C. Robinson, president of the bank here, announced today that the bank had taken $500,000 worth of the bonds to be distributed in the islands and later will take $1,500,000 certificates of indebtedness to be converted into the war loan. He also said, 2,000 men are drilling in the islands.

BALFOUR AND PARTY ENTER CANADA TODAY

Washington, May 26.—The British mission left Washington last evening for Canada. Official announcement was made today at the state department. The mission will cross the Canadian border some time early today.

The mission left here very quietly last night on a special train. The departure was withheld from public notice at the request of the government, as was the case with the departure of the French mission. American newspapers acting under censorship wholly voluntarily on their part, cooperate loyally with the government.

MINERS' STRIKE AVOIDED

DuBois, Pa., May 26.—Representatives of 45,000 miners of the central Pennsylvania bituminous coal field in convention here late today voted by 39 to 49 to accept the wage scale agreement drafted at a recent conference in Washington, avoiding a strike.

GERMANS GIVE FOOD TO FRENCH?

Denial of Gerard's Statement Says Produce of Occupied Land Not Used by Teutons.

Amsterdam, via London May 26.—An official statement has been issued in Berlin in regard to United States Ambassador Gerard's declaration that the inhabitants of Lille were deported from the city in April and May last year and made to work on land for the German army and German civil population. The statement says

"The population of the German homeland did not share in the corn harvest of the occupied territory and the inhabitants of occupied northern France solely benefitted therefrom. Stocks used in feeding German soldiers were replaced by similar quantities taken from Germany

The statement says the population was sent home as promised after the harvest.

BRITAIN AND ITALY GET ADDED LOANS

Each Draw $75,000,000 From U. S., Making Total War Loans to Date, $745,000,000.

Washington May 26 - Another loan of $75,000 000 was made to Great Britain today by the United States, bringing up the total loaned that nation thus for to $400,000,000 and the total of loans to all the allies to $745 000,000

A payment of $75,000,000 also was made to Italy today as part of the $100,000,000 loan announced some time ago. The Italian government already has received $25,000 000 of the loan

Steel common in the first hour mounted to the new maximum of 133¾, an over night gain of 2⅜ points. Rails only were an exception to the upward movement.

LIQUOR WORTH $500,000 SEIZED IN KANSAS RAIDS; STATE NOW "BONE DRY"?

Topeka, Kan., May 26.—More than $500,000 worth of liquor and beer has been confiscated by city and county authorities in Kansas since the "bone dry" law went into effect February 15, according to reports received at the office of the attorney general, as an evidence that the new law is being enforced. Recently the quantity of liquor and beer confiscated has fallen off greatly, and law enforcement officers believe that by the end of this year very little liquor will be brought into the state

RUSS PEASANTS DEFY ALL LAW

Confiscate Property by Wholesale, Burn and Wreck Homes, and Throw Provinces Into Anarchy.

Petrograd, May 26 — Minister of War Kerensky speaking at Helsingfors before starting on his tour of the front, referred to the military situation in Asia Minor, of which the official news agency quotes him as saying:

"There is danger not only of losing Armenia, but possibly part of the Caucasus."

Petrograd, May 25, (via London) May 25.—The agrarian disorders, wholesale confiscation of property, incendiarism and other dangerous symptoms of anarchy which followed the overthrow of the old authority in many important industrial centers and agricultural districts of central and southern Russia, are becoming more serious, according to dispatches from various points in Bessarabia and Siberia.

Lawlessness Spreads.

In many cities the soldiers committees, by taking prompt action, have succeeded in anticipating revolts and in restraining the impulse of the population toward indiscriminate confiscation and all kinds of lawlessness. In others, however, the peasants, defying restraint, have burned or sacked and appropriated government and private properties and a general state of anarchy prevails.

The following resume of telegrams indicate how acute the trouble in the interior has become and how, like contagion, it has crept from one district to another.

Yeniseisk, in central Siberia, reports that during the last three weeks 30 houses were burned and that the population is in a condition of panic. Men of various nationalities, headed by anarchist leaders and escaped criminals, have overrun the district, the advices state. The local council of workmen and soldiers deputies declared martial law and all public institutions and officials are under orders of a military dictator

Soldiers Join in Looting.

According to a dispatch from Tsaritsyn in the government of Saratov, all authority has been overthrown in the city, which is completely in the hands of the peasants The soldiers levied a contribution of 1,500,000 rubles for the increase of their pay and confiscated ships on the Volga.

A farm belonging to Madam Bekmarmaretaba, in the Orel government, was overrun by a mob of 20,000, who wrecked the place doing damage amounting to 750,000 rubles.

Drunken Riots at Minsk.

The latest reports from the Minsk government state that the agrarian disorders have reached such a point that they threaten to completely ruin agriculture there In one district all the wine cellars were sacked and the militia found itself powerless to prevent drunken riots.

Public organizations and committees are striving to stem the tide of anarchy which is sweeping many districts of Bessarabia. The Kishinev peasants have driven cattle onto the fields where grain was being reserved. Food conditions are particularly serious in this part of Russia.

All Farm Lands Taken.

The Pskov district committee has decided that all agricultural lands may be taken free of charge and this has resulted in a general confiscation.

Proclamations are being issued by the various local governments in an effort to prevent the state of anarchy spreading to the thus far law abiding districts.

SAY TWO TORPEDOES STRUCK TRANSPORT

British Soldiers Joke and Sing as Race Against Death Progresses.

London, May 25.—Survivors of the torpedoed transport Transylvania, who are now in England, say that the vessel was struck by the first torpedo at 10 o'clock in the morning. The ship was greatly damaged, but the engines were uninjured and the captain tried to reach shore A quarter of an hour later a second torpedo hit the engine room and the ship was brought to a standstill and began to settle.

The first torpedo is believed to have killed a large number of men while the second caused the death of most of those in the engine room and stokehold. It also struck a loaded boat, blowing it to pieces.

All the boats were rapidly lowered, the nurses aboard embarking first. The soldiers, who were lined up on the deck, shouted jocular farewells and sang "Tipperary" and other soldier songs.

Destroyers raced to the rescue. None of the nurses were lost. The ship sank 50 minutes after the second torpedo struck her.

STRAY CATS AID KAISER BY TEARING UP YARDS IN WHICH GARDENS GROW

Baltimore, Md., May 25.—An administration law was introduced in the city council here putting a tax of $2 on cats Stray cats will be rounded up and put to death on the charge that "they are aiding the enemy" by tearing up gardens planted in back yards.

FALTERING ONLY ONCE, WAITE GOES TO DEATH

Slayer of Rich Fatherinlaw Declines to Send Goodbye Message.

Ossinging, N. Y., May 26.—Dr. Arthur Warren Waite was executed at Sing Sing prison at 11:10 o'clock last night, for the murder of his fatherinlaw, John E. Peck of Grand Rapids, Mich.

The young dentist walked calmly and with a firm step from his cell to the death chamber. He faltered, however, as he neared the electric chair, but recovered quickly and nodded to the group of physicians. Three shocks were administered within four minutes.

The two hours before his death Waite spent in prayer with his spiritual advisor Just before 11 o'clock the clergyman asked the condemned man if there was anyone to whom he wished to send a message of farewell.

"No, thank you doctor," Waite replied with a smile.

"Not even to your mother?" queried Mr. Peterson.

"No sir, to no one" was the answer.

Dr Amos O. Squire, the prison physician examined Waite in the afternoon and was astonished to find his temperature and pulse exactly normal.

An autopsy of Waite's body showed a trace of an old meningitis of the brain. Dr. Squire said it might have led to headaches and pain Wait's heart, it was said, was unusually large.

PARLIAMENT IS CONVENED

Amsterdam, via London, May 26.—A Vienna telegram says that in the course of a meeting of the representatives of the lower chamber, Premier Clam-Martinio expressed the hope that the session would proceed in a manner to increase the reputation of the monarchy abroad. He entioned bills which would be submitted, including a coalition law and one providing for a war profit tax.

The foregoing dispatch gives the first news that the Austrian parliament has convened. The convening of parliament, which has not been in session since the outbreak of the war, has been one of the most acute political questions in Austria. On April 26 the government yielded to the growing popular demand and announced that parliament would meet on May 30.

Premier Clam-Martinio's address was presumably delivered at a preliminary gathering of the deputies.

USE MEAT CARDS IN FRANCE SOON

Country Raises Only Half Wheat Required to Feed Nation This Year.

Paris, May 25.—A decision to introduce meat cards at an early date is understood to have been reached at a conference just held by Premier Ribot. Louis J. Malvy, minister of the interior and Maurice Viollette, minister of subsistance. Maximum prices will be fixed to prevent hoarding and speculation and severe penalties will be inflicted on all acts tending to hinder fair distribution of meat among consumers. The meat card will give the right, not to obtain a fixed quantity, but to buy for a certain sum to be determined by a special scale. Wholesale butchers on their own initiative have fixed maximum prices for the time being. These prices represent a decrease of 10 to 16c a pound.

During a debate today in the chamber of deputies, minister Violette referred to speculation in coal which, bought at the mines at 108 francs a ton, has been sold to consumers at 300 francs. He said that he hoped measures would be taken to restrict the traffic in coal to legitimate dealers and to make a declaration of stocks obligatory.

The minister estimated the 1917 wheat crop at 132,000,000 bushels in round figures, about half the country's yearly requirements. Twenty-five per cent. more will be added by mixing other cereals and 25 per cent. must be bought abroad.

ONION TRUST LOCATED; 88 FIRMS INDICTED

Boston, May 26.—Eighty-eight corporations and individuals were indicted by the federal grand jury today here for conspiring to monopolize interstate commerce in onions.

The following corporations are named in the indictments:

Y.; The Farmers' Merchantile company and the Farr Produce company, both of Greely, Col.: Olathe Produce association, Olathe, Col.; Bridge & Souter company, incorporated, Canastota, N. Y.; C. B. Hoagland & Sons, Williamson, N. Y.

Other indictments include the following: Edward Oliver, Wauban, Wis.; T. A. Austin, Laredo, Tex., and W. J. Hansche, Racine, Wis.

JOFFRE ESCAPES SUBS.

Paris, May 25—The steamer on which Marshal Joffre, former Premier Viviani and the other members of the French mission returned to France changed her course shortly before reaching port owing to the reported presence of German submarines. The warning was received off Ushant, when the wireless reported that one or two German submarines had succeeded in sinking three cargo steamers in the same day in the locality in question.

MOVIE MEN FREED.

Fort Dodge, Ia., May 25.—Three local movie theater proprietors were found not guilty by Justice of the Peace C. A. Bryant today. His decision followed the same lines as that of Justice Joe Meyer, in Des Moines.

McADOO IN KANSAS CITY.

Kansas City, Mo., May 25.—William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, and W. P. G. Harding of the federal reserve board, came to Kansas City today to aid officials of the Kansas City Reserve bank to float the $125,000,000 worth of Liberty loan bonds alloted to this financial district

GERMAN SOLDIERS TOLD THEY WILL BE SHOT IF CAPTURED BY FRENCH

With the French Armies, May 10. —(by mail)—One of the "imperative military necessities" for the incredible devastation and destruction being wrought by the Germans along the pathway of their retreat in France is to convince the German soldiers themselves that if they either desert or surrender to the French they will be instantly shot in reprisal.

German soldiers now being taken prisoners by the French along the entire front between the Aisne and Saint Quentin declare without exception to their captors that they realize they are going to be shot and are quite prepared for it.

The soldiers are told not only that they will be instantly killed if they fall into the hands of the French, but that unless they fight to the death in an effort to keep the allied troops from reaching German soil their own homes, farms and villages will quite naturally suffer the same fate by way of reprisal that they have inflicted on the homes, farms and villages of France.

Hindenburg in his orders to his generals, copies of which have since fallen into the hands of the French, scathed in merciless terms the lack of morals on the part of the German troops which permitted them to surrender by thousands without the slightest resistance. Imperative orders that all responsible officers take immediate steps to overcome this condition were given.

U. S. AID HELPS DESTROY U-BOATS

Heaviest Blows of War Struck Against Under Sea Craft in the Last Three Weeks.

London, May 26.—"The successes against submarines have resulted in a distinct improvement in our food situation," said Premier Lloyd-George today in the house of commons.

The premier said more effective blows had been dealt the submarines during the last three weeks than in any corresponding period of the war.

The shipping losses for May, the premier said, probably would show a reduction from the April figures. In speaking of the success of the anti-submarine methods he said.

"We owe a very considerable debt of gratitude to the great American people for the effective assistance they have rendered and the craft they have placed at our disposal. Now that the American nation is in this war it is easier to make arrangements for the protection of our mercantile marine than it was before."

Mr. Lloyd-George asserted there was no danger to the country from starvation, but that the utmost economy of food stuffs was still essential.

"The submarine menace need cause no fear that the war is going to be lost for that reason," he declared.

"If it is true that the Germans are depending mainly upon submarine warfare for success I am able to say they are doomed to disappointment," Mr. Lloyd-George continued. "The German submarine warfare is destined to be the greatest miscalculation in the whole series of miscalculations of that hated empire."

AGREE ON CENSORSHIP AND EMBARGO ACTS

House and Senate Conferees to Report on Restored Provisions of Espionage Bill.

Washington, May 26.—Conferees on the espionage bill have drawn a so-called modified newspaper censorship section which will be brought before congress with the influence of the administration for inclusion in the pending bill. It must be accepted by both houses to become part of the bill.

The wording of the new section confines prohibited publication exclusively of military information and retains the provision that a jury shall decide whether published information is useful to the enemy.

The conferees also agreed on the Senate amendment to empower the president to declare export embargoes.

BRAZIL TO POLICE SOUTHERN ATLANTIC

Neutrality Revocation Decided Upon—Government Urged to Seize Ships.

Rio Janeiro, May 26.—According to the Jornal Do Commercio, it was decided at a meeting of the parliament and diplomatic commissions, called yesterday by the foreign minister, to adopt the principle of revocation of Brazil's neutrality in the war between the United States and Germany and to police the south Atlantic with the Brazilian fleet.

It is stated in official circles that parliament will order the confiscation of all German ships in Brazilian ports.

Rio Janeiro, Brazil, Wednesday, May 23, (delayed).—Opening of all Brazilian ports to the warships of the entente allies was advocated in the chamber of deputies today by Nilo Pecanha, the foreign minister.

VANDERLIP PREDICTS INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY

Washington, D. C., May 25.—Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank of New York, today addressed the editors of about 300 engineering and trade publications, meeting here to consider cooperation with the government during the war urging thrift.

"We are about to see the greatest industrial activity the country ever has known," said Mr. Vanderlip.

After pointing to the necessity for thrift he continued: "Some think economy will be bad for business, but no; business will be different, it will be a business of necessities. It is unpatriotic to spend money for anything but necessities now."

ITALIANS ADD TO GAIN

New Positions Taken, and Battle Continues, With Number of Prisoners Increasing —Crisis in Austria.

Rome, May 26. via London—Italian troops engaged in the offensive movement south of Gorizia have captured the fortified heights north of Jamiano, the war office announced today. The Italian positions have been extended still farther, the announcement says.

12,450 Prisoners Taken.

South of Jamiano to the sea the Italians also gained ground, driving forward south of the Jamiano-Brestovizza road.

The battle is still raging from the sea as far north as Plava. The Italians yesterday and the day before took a total of 12,450 prisoners and much material.

Paris, May 26.—Turkey is swept with famine and pestilence. Her people are panic stricken and the army's morale is utterly gone, according to information received here today from Berne.

One hundred thousand soldiers have deserted from the army.

Realizing what the loss of Turkey's fighting power would mean, 8,000 Austrian troops have already been sent to Palestine to attempt to bolster up the Turk army.

DEAD MEN FILL SHELTERS.

Paris, May 26.—Part of Chevreux wood, on the Aisne front, was captured last night by the French, the war office announces. The German shelters were found to have been demolished by the French artillery and to be filled with the dead.

London, May 26.—An official statement issued by the Austrian war office on Thursday admits Italian successes on the Carso plateau, but claims that the Austrians inflicetd severe repulses upon their assailants elsewhere.

The Italian blow is struck at a time when political conditions in Austria-Hungary have reached an acute phase. The resignation of Count Tisza, "iron man" of the dual monarchy and staunch pillar of pan-Germanism and junkerdom, comes on the eve of the assembling of the Austrian parliament, a step bitterly fought by the bureaucracy since the outbreak of the war and as bitterly contended for by the democartic leaders. The two events give decided color to the numerous reports that the young Emperor Charles has democratic leanings and is consequently opposed to junker ring in Berlin.

SENATE CONSIDERS FOOD CENSUS BILL

Stimulation Measure Will Be Kept Before Body as Unfinished Business Until Passed.

Washington, May 26.—Consideration of the first administration food bill, designed to stimulate, provide for a national feed census and sales of seed at cost was begun today in the Senate and will be kept before the body as the unfinished business.

Senator Reed opened the debate with "A statement as to the real condition of the wheat situation."

FARMERS BOLT MEETING; HOLD RUMP CONVENTION

Omaha, Neb., May 26.—Alleging that the interests of the "real" farmers were not receiving due consideration by the Omaha conservation conference, a body of farmer delegates bolted and held a rump convention of their own in the banquet room of the Castle hotel. C. H. Gustafson, of Mead, presided. The trouble started over an alleged remark made by Chancellor Avery to Farmer Taylor. Charles Graff, one of the organizers of the conference said "the woods are full of trimmers, professors, jumping jacks in general who are running around slamming men like Taylor."

The closing session of the Nebraska food conservation congress today was devoted to discussion of the questions of transportation conservation, manufacture, the effect of speculation and hoarding, and the importance of financing production. On the last named subject the principal speech was made by Dan Morris, of Kearney, Neb., president of the State Bankers' association.

PARIS STRIKE SPREADS; MEN AND WOMEN OUT

Paris, May 26.—The strike of women workers spread rapidly today and is meeting with considerable success. The milliners, furriers, lace makers, embroiderers, water proofers and feather workers are now on strike and during the day male and female employes of several department stores approached the managements and asked for a Saturday half holiday and extra pay on account of the high cost of living. The stores were closed at 1 o'clock, but were reopened at 4 o'clock, an agreement having been reached.

Similar demands by bankers and brokers' clerks were accepted by a number of houses. The butchers', waiters' and grocers' unions are considering joining the strike.

RELIEF SHIP SUNK FAKE.

London, May 25.—The statement credited in a dispatch from Haugesund, Norway, to an officer of the Norwegian steamer Vibran, that a Swedish ship engaged in work of the Belgian relief commission, was sunk May 18, although it held a German permit to sail, was denied today by the commission.

Once the crisp bills are in their possession they set out upon their unholy pleasures. These generally begin with a fight and end with a complete and druglike drunk. Between these two stages they taste of all the wickedness New York's water front has to offer, and this is no small stock. Generally when the debauch is over the hostler awakes with feeling that his head has been the target of a curtain fire, his limbs ache from innumerable blows that have landed during the encounters that began with the payoff and continued intermittently until his senses departed; usually he is lying beneath some table in a Water street back room, his pockets empty of all the crisp bills. Then it is back to the fetid hostler's quarters on board a horse ship and a long wait until another "vacation."

Live in Darkness.

None but a man who is almost insensible to pain, who has felt every manner of smash and kick and cuff, can stand the hostler's life. Also the candidate for the job must long since have lost all sense of morality and honor The work on board ship is of the same strenuous sort as the "play" on land. The crew leaves them down in the hold with their animal charges and allows them to live in peace or to fight to the last survivor; they live in darkness between decks, with the companionship of maddened, kicking animals and still more dangerous humans. Their places of abode reeks with all the smells that can outrage a set of olfactory nerves When a horse dies it is dragged along a narrow runway and thrown overboard. Some regret accompanies this procedure because the horse is valuable. When a hostler dies he, is forthwith tossed to the sharks. There is no regret at his passing, because he is of no value, and his mates divide his clothes and try to figure out some way of holding up the British consulate for his pay

These are the jetsam of the sea, the men sunk beneath the last surface of humanity The great war has brought them into sight in the mass, revealing numbers of these uttermost "unsaved" that few persons imagined were in existence.

A Proclamation

To the People of Iowa:

In harmony with the Proclamation of the President of these United States, dated the eighteenth day of May, 1917, your attention is directed to REGISTRATION DAY, JUNE 5, 1917.

It is not the intention or desire of those in authority and burdened with the responsibility of conducting this war to make June 5th a holiday, but rather that the ordinary daily activities, as far as possible, be suspended and the day be set apart for the purpose of our common country.

There is much work just ahead for every person within our state, work that will mean sacrifice and self denial. Let this day be one of fasting rather than one of feasting, one of consecration rather than one of hilarity. Let the full meaning of the day and all that it bodes for our people be made a dominant feature in all demonstrations.

THEREFORE, by the virtue of the power in me vested as Governor of the State of Iowa, and the Federal Law and Proclamation of the President, I proclaim and give notice to all persons subject to registration that the time and place of such registration shall be between the hours of 7 A. M. and 9 P. M., on the 5th day of June, 1917, at the registration place in the precinct wherein they have their permanent homes. All males who shall have attained their twenty-first birthday and who shall not have attained their thirty-first birthday on or before the day herein named are required to register, excepting only officers and enlisted men of the regular Army, Navy, the Marine Corps, and the National Guard, and Navy Militia while in the service of the United States, and Officers' Reserve Corps and enlisted men in the Enlisted Reserve Corps while in active service.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the Great Seal of the State. . . . . . .

Done ot Des Moines, this thirtieth day of May, 1917. . . . . .

By the Governor: . . W. L. HARDING

W. S. Allen, Secretary of State.

Fate of Early Poisoners.

In medieval times in Europe poisoners, when detected, were usually broken alive upon the wheel, after having first been given a taste of the rack while in prison awaiting execution, as a sort of gentle reminder of what they had presently got to go through.

Buying at Home.

A surgeon in a Western town, engaged to perform an operation of minor character upon a somewhat unsophisticated patient, asked him if he were willing to have only a local anesthetic. "Sure," replied the other, "I believe in patronizing home industry whenever you can."

In Westminster Abbey.

Westminster abbey is the burial place of 13 kings of England, including Henry III, Edward I, Edward III, Richard II, Henry V, Henry VII, Edward VI, James I, Charles II, William III, and George II, as well as of five queens in their own right, and the queens of many of the kings.

A Bit Slow.

"How are the incubators getting along?" asked a friend of his neighbor who had recently bought some. "Why, all right, I suppose; but although I have had them for two weeks now, not one of the four has laid an egg yet."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Wisdom and Laughter.

INSURE YOUR CORN

Don't Gamble With Your Corn Crop. Test Every Ear Before Planting. Every Weak or Dead Ear Means Dollars Less at Harvest.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

It is a known fact that the simple little act of testing all seed corn before planting will add many bushels to the corn crop and will pay the farmer about five times as much per hour for his labor as will any other farm labor.

There is nothing hard about it, all methods of testing seed corn are easy and inexpensive. You can test the kernels in blotters or "rag-doll" testers at home, making them yourself, or you can invest in a commercial tester that will last for years. Your agricultural college, county agent, or the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington will be glad to give you full particulars.

Seed testing will stop one of these leaks in farm practice that change gain into loss. Figure out for yourself how many hills the six or seven hundred kernels of corn from a dead or weak ear will plant, and figure out how your corn yield will drop if two or three or a dozen, or maybe fifty such ears should get planted.

BY-PRODUCT STOCK FEEDS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

A lot of well-meaning folks think that just because certain materials are left-overs from the manufacture of food for humans, that it is "waste" and of no value for stock feed. Nothing is farther from the truth. In very many cases, the so-called "offal" left after the manufacture of flour, milling, corn products, breakfast foods, etc., are the best of stock foods, and can be bought economically and fed to bring a profit to the farmer. The man who turns up his nose at the thought of combining by-products with alfalfa and other low-priced meat producing foods, is behind the times and usually fails to show even interest on his money at the end of the year. Feeding whole grain, whether it be corn, wheat, rye or oats, is wasteful and is robbing man of his rightful prerogative—that of taking that part of all grain adapted to his needs. It is easy to find out the protein content of any article, or mixture, of stock feedstuffs now on the market, and it is merely a matter of the farmer figuring out the worth of the foods on their nourishing power, and then to purchase that which will give him the most economical feed. In practically all states, all feedstuffs must be labeled with their food content—for those who wish to see, the facts are printed.

Fanning and Grading Seed Barley.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Not nearly enough attention is given to getting the uniform size of seed grain, especially is this true in barley, where it is important that the germination should all take place on the same day. Therefore, the kernels should be of the same size and weight. The very largest should perhaps be removed as well as the smaller ones, leaving the seed plump and uniform. It is true that small seeds and giant seeds will germinate, but the plant food contained therein will undoubtedly make an unevenness in the maturity at harvest.

ROTATION LEASES.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

There is nothing which endangers America so much today as our very much abused farm tenant system. We ought to have something in every lease which will protect land and protect the people as well as posterity. Year to year tenants who scratch a little and move away should be compelled to settle down and landlords should be be compelled to make a time rotation lease. It is easy to talk about compelling this and compelling that, but we mostly are a very sloppy people whose motto is "the easiest way is the best."

If we let our soil run down, our whole structure will fall. In order to obtain a larger yield of grain, this soil must be fed. The colleges and experiment stations beyond the Mississippi river are entirely too timid about preaching soil conservation. In fact, all of us are rather prone to tell our audience what we think they would rather hear.

KILL THE WEEDS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

"Spring plowing, or disking, as soon as the weed seeds have germinated, is usually a profitable practice. Where small grain is to be sown, the sowing should be done soon after plowing; but where corn, potatoes, or the sorghums are to be grown, there is often a period of several weeks between the time of the germination of the weed seeds and the time when the season is sufficiently advanced to plant the crop. This period should be utilized as far as possible for the destruction of weeds before the crop is planted. Much labor in keeping the crop free from weeds during its growing period can thus be saved."—E. C. Chilcott, agriculturist in charge, Washington, D. C.

LOSS FROM BAD ROADS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

The U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates that the farmers of the nation are annually losing $250,000,000 because of their inability to market their produce at certain times of the year. Counties which are rich in agricultural products are burdened with bad roads and it is of much concern to the farmers to see to the building of good roads. Good roads, 365-day roads, are insurance for continued community prosperity.

Economy

Economy is not the low price that buys a car. Economy is the low cost that keeps it.

The minimum maintenance expense of the Chevrolet has excited public comment time and time again. You are assured of economy for economy has been built into this car. This consideration has been uppermost in the minds of the builders.

A car correctly built is easily kept. This means that it must be of light weight, and of lasting construction.

You will find these points in the Chevrolet. For this reason, you will, also, find it an economical car to keep. It is never a burden. We have seen to that. And we have made sure sure of it.

Not to be outdone in the matter of patriotism the little town of Morton Mills had a flag raising and Old Glory now floats from the top of a sixty-foot tower, which some of the men erected in the orchard at the J. M. Focht home.

The guardsmen of Cedar Rapids will not go to war with their teeth in bad condition, nor is it going to cost them or the state anything to get their teeth put in shape. The dentists of that city are going to do the work for nothing.

The farm home, corncrib, barn, garage and machine shed on the place of C. M. Kelsey living southeast of Iowa Falls was destroyed by fire recently, entailing a loss of $6,000. The loss included about 600 bushels of corn in the crib.

The 2-week-old baby girl of Mr. and Mrs. John Hoore, of Kirkman, has aroused the curiosity of the entire community by showing two teeth on the lower jaw, one of which developed within a week, after birth. Other teeth are also coming.

Corn acreage in Webster county has increased from 12 to 18 per cent this year. With the spring planting practically finished, this estimate was made by County Agent H. R. Richardson, who made an automobile trip through the county recently.

A flag with a history is on exhibition in Monona. It is 54 years old and although worn and tattered is still in use. It was awarded the town at a barbecue held in Postville in 1863 as a reward for sending the largest delegation of any town in that vicinity for the celebration.

A large freight truck went through the floor of a county bridge across the Middle Nodaway. The truck was loaded with hogs, which were being brought to market at Villisca. The sway rods of the bridge prevented the truck from being precipitated into the river and the swine were unloaded safely.

Mr. George Van Evera of Des Moines recently toured the central counties of the state by automobile and he reports that the crop conditions in that section are excellent. He reported that most of the spring work is done or nearly so and that the acreage of corn is going to be vastly greater than last year.

Signing the name of J. C. Johnson to lithographed checks of a well known company, a stranger in Sioux City cashed more than $500 worth of forged paper through purchases at the leading stores. Nearly one hundred merchants were "stung". Johnson bought everything from a wrist watch and a lavender suit to a refrigerator.

According to Roscoe Harrison, representative of the Iowa Beef Producers' association, there are more than one thousand calves now represented in feeding contests in various Iowa counties in connection with the Iowa Baby Beef contest. He says that the boys and girls of Iowa are leading the middle west in the enthusiasm with which they are taking hold of this work.

PREVENTING RUST AND SMUTS

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Barley is comparatively free from diseases and insect enemies. It is, however, affected with rust and smut, but not to the extent that oats are usually affected. Little has been done regarding the prevention of rust, but considerable has been done in the eradication of smuts. Ordinary smut can be handled with the formaldehyde treatment the same as oats, but the loose smut is hard to eradicate unless the modified hot water treatment is used. This is a delicate proposition and should be done carefully. Place the barley in gunny sacks and submerge in cold water from seven to twelve hours. Remove and drain for one hour, then submerge for five minutes in a barrel of hot water, held at a constant temperature of 130 degrees Fahrenheit. The water ought to be thoroughly warmed before putting in the barley because it will cool off the water. Boiling water should be kept near at hand which can be added at intervals which will keep the temperature nearly constant, but should never be allowed to come into direct contact with the grain as its vitality will be injured or destroyed. Be careful that your thermometer is correct. You ought to get yours tested at the creamery or the cheese factory.

After this treatment the grain should be spread upon the barn floor to cool before sowing. It should be sown the same day or not later than the day after treatment, for if you don't look out it will swell and start to sprout and it will be hard to get through the seeder. [illegible] treatment for smut, formaldehyde is the best [illegible] it is easiest to handle. Smut is not so very bad in barley this year, which is fortunate because if you wish to make a profit on a crop you can put in after all other crops are planted, except corn and potatoes.

LOCAL LEADERSHIP

Somebody Must Take the Initiative—Are You Willing to Serve?

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Many agricultural plans are like a sky rocket. They make a fuss going up and blow up a few stars and descend like the stick. The reason of this is because few men can make a continued effort. They will get up a little scheme but at the first discouragement, their energy wanes and there is nothing to show for their activity.

Yet it cannot be said that this sort of energy is wasted. Like the overlapping waves of a tide, public opinion is being formed. Things which were ignored when crop improvement began its propaganda, are now adopted as a matter of course.

Local leadership is the weakest spot in this work. Somebody must take the initiative but it is not necessary that one man should undertake the whole thing. In every community there are bankers, commercial clubs, farmers clubs, granges, institutes, millers, grain dealers and public leaders of various kinds who can unite their efforts on a few specific things and after successfully tackling one problem be strengthened to tackle others.

HORSE LABOR ON FARMS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

On the grain farm the heaviest work for the horses comes in April, May and in August, September and October. The rest of the time there is practically nothing for the horses to do. But enough horses have to be kept during the year to take care of the work during these busy months. When averaged up the horse on the grain farm only works three hours a day. These figures were secured in an investigation by the Minnesota Experiment Station, under the direction of Thomas Cooper, now director of the North Dakota Experiment Station. In this same investigation it was found that when the crops are diversified the horse labor is better distributed. There is less work for the horses in the seasons that are the busiest on the all-grain farm, and there is work for the horses when there is no work for the horses on the all-grain farm.

MORE BEANS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

A farmer in Hubbard Co., Minn planted twenty acres of beans from which he received 377 bushels, selling them in the field for $1,185. This is not the highest record.

The Michigan men and the Colorado men and, in fact, all states are turning to beans with a great deal of success.

There are three main principles to be observed in the control of weeds. They are: first, preventing the weeds from going to seed on the farm; second, preventing the weed seeds being brought to the farm, and third, in the case of perennials, starving out the underground parts by preventing them from making top growth.

VALUE OF STRAW.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Don't burn that straw stack. You might just as well burn up dollar bills. In addition to returning actual fertilizing elements to the soil, it adds a large quantity of immensely valuable humus, if carefully spread over the fields.

AMOUNT OF SEED CORN.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

From twelve to fifteen ears of seed corn are required to plant an acre. All corn should be germinated right now in order to test its vitality and you should throw out every weak ear you can find. It will not pay you to plant poor corn this year.

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

CHAPTER XXV.—(Continued).

"But I merely wanted to tell you," concluded the Man Who Could Handle It, "that nobody can handle it. It'll get you in the long run or the short. The shorter, the better. It may take a month or it may take 10 year, but some fine morning you wake up and find your master right there at the side of the bed, and he reaches out and puts his cold, clammy fingers around your throat and leads you to the bottle. When that happens, my friend, it's all over but the shouting. You belong to the saloons or the club bars, and you wonder when the undertaker will come along and be kind to you and bury you. You hope it will be soon, but it never comes quite soon enough. The stuff you could handle, handles you quite thoroughly. It introduces you to the death-in-life." He made an elaborate bow. "Remember me. You can't forget me. You'll see me every day, everywhere—the Man Who Could Handle It."

He turned on his heel and went down the street without a backward glance. Smith, looking up to the sky, wondered how long it had been since the Man Who Could Handle It had been able even to realize that there were nights when the moon hung in a silver sash.

That was a hard night for the agitator. His office force, working overtime every night now, went home at 11. He stayed on until 12, laboring with his work, fighting desperately against depression, denying himself to all callers and telephone calls.

A few minutes past midnight Waller came in and reported:

"There's nothing from Shanghai tonight."

CHAPTER XXVI.

The agitator's first thought the following morning was of a woman's figure leaning toward him in a doorway and swaying like a reed in the flow of heavy waters. And, immediately upon that, came the picture of her as she had stood the day before, grieved but valiant. He put the image of her out of his mind, his effort in doing so being as direct and palpable as if he had tried to lift a tremendous weight with his right arm.

While he dressed and breakfasted in his rooms, he looked at the headlines in the Washington and New York papers which were brought to him every morning. There it was before him: the story of himself, his confession and defiance, Mary Leslie's story, all topped with the big lettered headlines that ran anywhere from two columns wide to the breadth of the whole front page. His photograph and Mary Leslie's were reproduced by each paper.

Few people have had the sensation of being tried by the press. It is, in a way, more terrible than being tried by a court. In court there is always the chance of appeal. against the newspaper court there is no redress. A man, sitting alone at breakfast, sees his face in the printed page, reads the things he has said and the things others have said about him, realizes at first imperfectly that he is the one on whom the glare is turned, and comes to know, finally, that he must stand up and take it all. Big men have spent years trying to overtake the effects of a newspaper article—and have not succeeded.

Smith read Cholliewollie's article to the end.

"Good boy!" he thought gratefully. "At least you don't drawl when you write."

He examined the other headlines and stories with what he tried to make a judicial mind. On the whole, he was immensely gratified. He had been given the best of it so far. Several of the writers had intimated that the woman's story and her demeanor could not command belief. Others had built their lead on Smith's contention that, if her story were true, it merely proved the righteousness of his fight against whisky. One of the New York papers ran an editorial on the matter sounding a ringing alarm against anybody weakening in support of him at such a critical time in the movement.

Thinking gratefully that the world was very kind, he was laying down a paper when his eye caught the Shanghai date line. Evidently, from the small space given to the dispatch, it had come in too late to permit of its being displayed largely.

There was, it said, a house with the red-lacquered balcony on the Foochow road, as Mary Leslie had described it.

There was a Portuguese, Charlie by name, who owned it, and now, since the opium trade had been discontinued, conducted it as a restaurant.

The Portuguese was not rich in details. His memory was vague. But he remembered a wild American named Gardner and a woman who used to be seen with him. He did not know whether they were married.

There had not been time, when the cablegram was written, to make any other investigation, in the official records or elsewhere, regarding the alleged marriage.

He was reading the dispatch for the third time when a bellboy brought him a note. The envelope had not been stamped. It had been left, late the night before, the boy explained, with directions that it should be delivered to him early in the morning.

On a sheet of notepaper was written:

You are your own tomorrow.

It was signed "Edith Mallon."

His brain reeled. The memory of her standing in the doorway, the fragrance of her hair the day she had stood close to him on the edge of the river, the thought of her brave sweetness—these things came as a blessed relief from the momentary but deep depression he had felt after reading the cablegram from Shanghai. He got up and raised one of the windows so that he might breath the fresh air. He drank it into his lungs in great gulps. A group of photographers stood on the pavement below, waiting for snapshots of him as he started to his office on what everybody regarded as the decisive day in his career. He understood some of that.

He thrust Edith's note into his pocket and put on his overcoat and hat.

As he left the room, he was forcing through his brain the triumphant thought: "This is the day! This is the fight!"

It was as if he called his own soul to arms.

Once in his office, he became the storm center of the country's political thought that day. Waller, with both hands full of telegrams, met him in the reception room. Smith did not know it, but the newspaper man had had only two hours of sleep.

"You don't have to read them," Waller said, the drawl in his voice not hiding his elation. "They're all good—all for us."

"This early!" Smith was surprised.

"Most of these are night letters, sent after the afternoon's hit the street yesterday. But some, sent this morning, have come in already."

They were in the inner office, and Smith was taking off his coat.

"What do they say?" he inquired impatiently.

"They say you're all right. Those few words sum up more different kinds of laudation, assurances of support, and genuine admiration than I ever saw on paper."

Smith gave him a swift, keen look, with the question:

"And no other kind?"

"Oh, of course, some," Waller replied, his enthusiasm unabated, "but, so far, we're sweeping the towns and outlying districts!"

The agitator sat down at his desk and opened the first of the letters that had been placed there for him.

Cholliewollie looked at him a moment in undisguised wonder.

"Say! What is this you're exhibiting, real nerve? Or are you just numb and can't think?"

"Why?"

"Here you are, up against the hottest, bitterest fight in the world and you sit down to read your mail!"

"What else is there to do?" Smith inquired, eyeing him seriously.

"Don't you want to read the telegrams?"

"If I did that, I'd put in the whole day at it."

One of the stenographers brought in a new batch of yellow envelopes.

"You see," he added.

"Oh, I know!" Waller admitted. "But can't you show some nervousness, some excitement?"

Smit's smile was one of great affection.

"I can't," he said. "We've got just a week to put this thing over. The days aren't long enough to let us do the work we should do. It is a hot fight, as you say. They think they have a chance to ruin this demonstration. Well, I'm just a little hotter as a fighter than they are. Believe me, I am. And I'm fighting now. I'm going through this mail to see what needs attention. After that, we'll see what else needs attention. Fighting is working."

"By Jove, you're right!" Waller agreed. "But what do you want done with these messages?"

"If you'll do it, keep track of them, read them all, and don't bring any to me unless it deals with some delegation wishing to cancel its engagement to come to Washington. If any others need answering, you answer them. Will you do that?"

"Certainly, you know I'll be on this job until night. But"—he held up several unfolded telegrams—"here's one from a governor, one from the biggest bishop in the west, two from senators, one from——"

"I know, I know. But they were to be expected, in a way, weren't they? Such men as those stand for the cause, not for me. That's the thing I hate. I'm afraid of being a dead weight on the movement, not a help to it."

"You might be a weight," Waller drawled, smiling slowly, "but not a dead one. And how about the newspaper men?"

"I'll see them at 11 this morning, as usual, of course—and this afternoon."

As a result of these arrangements, while the agitator, methodical and effective, stayed at his desk, dictating necessary correspondence, conferring with men and women on countless details of the arrangements in town and out, and maintaining his grasp on the whole scheme, Cholliewollie became the buffer against which the waves of the country's sentiment and opinions broke. He answered innumerable telephone calls, local and long-distance, meant to cheer and encourage Smith. With the aid of a stenographer, he opened and read and, after a fashion, tabulated the telegrams. They came from all sections, from everywhere, delivered in batches of fours, eights, and dozens. They were from politicians, ministers of the gospel, wealthy men, prominent men, women, philanthropists, city and state leaders in the prohibition movement, people representing, it appeared, all walks of life, all professions, and all callings.

The vast majority expressed the determination of the senders to stand by Smith and the demonstration, no matter what was said about him. A few called the story, all of it, including Smith's statement, a fake pure and simple. Others said they knew it was a huge conspiracy hatched by the whisky interests. Some demanded to be told by Smith whether he really had forgotten who he was or was trying to hide disgraceful conduct behind a subterfuge.

From this shade of unbelief others swung to ridicule and abuse a few to vituperation. These were the natural expressions of men who had been opposed to him all along and now seized on the opportunity to harass him. However, they were not strong enough numerically to dash Waller's spirits.

"We've caught them right, so far," he thought. "Now, can we stay on top for a week?"

A few minutes after the agitator's interview with the correspondents at 11 — which brought out nothing new — Cholliewollie walked into the inner office. His face was solemn.

"Here," he said, handing Smith a telegram, "is the first message regarding one of the delegations to the parade."

It was dated Seattle, Wash., and was directed to the agitator.

Smith read it aloud:

Seven hundred leaving this state this afternoon for Washington. Seattle delegation escorted to train by bands and thousands of men and women. We are solid for you out here.

Waller grinned.

"That shows you," he rejoiced, "that there will be no deserters."

The afternoon wore on, Smith at his desk — conferring, arranging, directing, assuring himself by telephone and telegraph that the special trains and railroad fare were being provided as previously stipulated with the railroad companies, the banks, and the county and city managers of the movement—and Waller shouting frantically over the telephone or devouring with his eyes the incessant flood of yellow paper on which were printed the messages of good cheer from almost everywhere.

At the 6 o'clock meeting with the newspaper men several showed telegrams from their papers saying that the proofs of the marriage in Shanghai had not yet materialized.

When the usual routine of questions and answers ended, Avery moved a step nearer to the agitator. Snappily dressed, alert as ever, and speaking in frank, terse sentences, he made an impressive figure.

"Mr. Smith," he said, "we want to tell you we are with you. We've seen your work. We know you. We know what sort of a man you are. And, from now on, you'll get all the help possible from us. We wanted you to know that."

Smith bowed to Avery and swept the semicircle of faces with a glance that seemed to single out each man and thank him.

"Gentlemen," he said, in a low tone, "I cannot find words to bear the burden of my debt to you. It is you who can win this fight. I thank you all. It is wonderful."

He turned quickly and went into his private office.

Waller, arriving at his own office a few minutes past 7, was told by the managing editor:

"A crowd's gathering in front of the agitator's office. They've got a band. They want to show their confidence in him."

"Yes," he replied, "I knew about that."

"I'll get somebody else to cover that," the other went on. "What I want from you tonight is a blanket story covering all the other events of this kind throughout the country. We've got bulletins from nearly every city, saying there will be mass meetings tonight as expressions of confidence in Smith. It ought to make a big story."

"It'll be a crackerjack," Cholliewollie assented.

All that evening Waller, gathering material for his story, read the dispatches that came in from the press associations and the paper's correspondents. From every city came the news that John Smith's name had lit the fires of enthusiasm. The office boy went in and out, piling up the details of the story. It seemed to Waller that the spirit of the agitator rushed from city to city through that marvelous winter night. With his actual physical eye he could see the swaying of the singing, cheering crowd as it swept down Market street in San Francisco. He could hear the singing, catch the gleam of the banners under the electric lights, feel the glow of the people's ardor.

The clicking wires changed the scenes of the drama continuously. It claimed no one city, no one section, for its setting. Washington street in Indianapolis, Second avenue in Seattle, and the East Side in New York were merely flashing parts of the wave of feeling that called men to the streets and made them lift their voices to the stars. Fifth street in Cincinnati, Milk street in Boston, Michigan avenue in Chicago, the public squares of smaller cities—all were places devoted men and women, ignoring the jeers and, at times, the missiles of the other side, congregated to show their scorn of those who fought against the cause and its leader.

And the man whose glowing spirit and unflagging zeal had kindled an enthusiasm which swept from coast to coast stood at his office window, bowing his thanks while a member of congress delivered an address from the pavement below, and a band played, and a crowd that flowed far over into the capitol grounds cheered and sang.

The managing editor had been right: It was a big story.

And the one-time bored and blase Mr. Waller, having crammed all the details of it into his brain, sat down at his typewriter to make it a "crackerjack."

By far the most beautiful of the trees of Uruguay, South America, is the mimosa. This tree is an evergreen, and grows to a height of about forty feet. Even when not in flower it is handsome, on account of its dark green fernlike leaves and gray-green trunk. The flowers are like little balls of golden yellow pollen, and they have a sweet scent. They cover the branches of the tree from top to bottom and at a distance one would almost say the whole thing was made of gold, or had been transplanted from fairyland.

FARMING NOW A BUSINESS

The Modern Day Farmer Applies Business Methods and Seeks More Than a Living on the Farm.

A nation-wide cry is being made for more economy and greater production, and probably never was the need of foodstuffs equal to that of the present. Grain prices are the highest in the nation's history and today the agricultural fields of America offer inducements that are unequaled in any other line of commerce or business. The ideal life is that close to nature, enjoying the freedom of God's great outdoors and fulfilling a duty to humanity by producing from a fertile soil that which is essential to the very existence of a less fortunate people who are actually starving to death for foodstuffs that can be produced so economically in the United States and Canada.

High prices for all grain, undoubtedly, will be maintained for a number of years, and it appears a certainty that the agriculturist will reap a bounteous return for his labor and at the same time carry out the demands of patriotic citizenship. A wrong conception has been generally noticed as to "Life on the Farm." It has been, to a large extent, considered as only a place to live peacefully and afford a living for those who are satisfied with merely a comfortable existence. Such a wrong impression has been created in a measure by the lack of systematic business principles to farming in general. But today farming and agriculture have been given a supremacy in the business world and require the same advanced methods as any other line of commerce. In no other business does a system adoption pay better than on the farm, and it is certain that there is no other line of work, that generally speaking needs it as much. The old idea of getting a living off the farm and not knowing how it was made and following up the details of each branch of farming to get the maximum of profit at the least expense, is fast being done away with.

Farming is now being considered as a business and a living is not sufficient for the modern agriculturist; a small per cent on the investment is not enough, the present-day farmer must have a percentage return equal to that of other lines of business. The prices for produce are high enough, but the cost of producing has been the factor. In many places, that has reduced the profit. It is the application of a system to the cost of various work on the farm that it is possible to give figures on profits made in grain-growing in Western Canada.

Mr. C. A. Wright of Milo, Iowa, bought a hundred and sixty acres of land in Western Canada for $3,300 in December, 1915 and took his first crop from it in 1916. After paying for the land in full and the cost of cultivating it and marketing the grain he sold his grain at $1.55 a bushel (a low price compared with the present market), had a surplus of $2,472.67. His figures are as follows:

4,487 bushels worth $1.55 at Champion		$6,954.85—$6,954.85
Threshing bill 11c per bushel	493.57
Seed at 95c	144.00
Drilling	160.00
Cutting	160.00
Twine	50.00
Shocking	40.00
Hauling to town 3c	134.61
Total cost	1,182.18
Cost of land	3,300.00
		$4,482.18—$4,482.18
Net profit after paying for farm and all cost		$2,472.67

S. Joseph and Sons of Des Moines, Ia., are looked upon as being shrewd, careful business men. Having some spare money on hand, and looking for a suitable investment, they decided to purchase Canadian lands, and farm them.

With the assistance of the Canadian Government Agent, at Des Moines, Ia., they made selection near Champion, Alberta. They put 240 acres of land in wheat, and in writing to Mr. Hewitt, The Canadian Government Agent at Des Moines, one of the members of the firm says: "I have much pleasure in advising you that on our farm five miles east of Champion, in the Province of Alberta, Canada, this year (1916) we harvested and threshed 10,-600 bushels of wheat from 240 acres, this being an average of 44 bushels and 10 pounds to the acre. A considerable portion of the wheat was No. 1 Northern, worth at Champion, approximately $1.85 per bushel, making a total return of $19,610, or an average of $81.70 per acre gross yields. And by aid of a thorough system were able to keep the cost of growing wheat at about 25 cents a bushel."

Messrs. Smith & Sons of Vulcan, Alberta, are growers of wheat on a large scale and have demonstrated that there is greater profit in Western Canada wheat-raising than probably in any other business anywhere. Speaking of their experience Mr. Smith says:

"I have three sections of land at the present time and am farming yearly 1,200 to 1,400 acres of land. My returns from the farm for the past two years have been around 200%, that is for every dollar I have spent I have received three, now I do not know where you can do that well.

"This is surely the country for the man with the small capital for land is still reasonable in price, and in long term and work of all kinds for every man to do. I feel that if I were turned out here without a dollar that in less than ten years I could own a section of land and have it well equipped."

Western Canada's soil and climate is suitable to graining large and profitable yields of wheat. Many so large that those not acquainted with the facts hesitate to believe the reports sent out by the farmers in that country. As an evidence of their sincerity in reporting correct yields affidavits of a couple of grain growers are reproduced.

"I, Newell J. Noble, of the town of Nobleford, Province of Alberta, do solemnly declare that from 1,000 acres of wheat on the said farm there was, in the season of 1916, threshed 54,000 bushels of wheat, being at the average of 54 bushels and 23 pounds per acre. And that from 394.69 acres of oats on the said farm, there was threshed in the said season of 1916, 48,506 bushels of oats, being at the average of 123 bushels and 30 pounds per acre.

"And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously, believing it to be true and knowing that it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath and by virtue of The Canada Evidence Act." NEWELL J. NOBLE.

A Woman Takes Affidavit as to Yields.—On January 4, 1917, Mrs. Nancy Coe of Nobleford made oath as follows:

In the matter of yield of wheat, oats and flax on my farm for harvest of 1916, I, Nancy Coe, of the town of Nobleford, Province of Alberta, do solemnly declare that I threshed from 115 acres on my farm 6,110 bushels of wheat (machine measure, which it is believed will hold out in weights fully—about three-fourths of the crop already having been weighed), being at the average of 53 bushels and 6 pounds per acre, and that from 10 acres of flax on stubble ground, I threshed 993 bushels of flax being at an average of 20 bushels and 32 pounds per acre, and that from 5.00 acres of oats I threshed 586 bushels machine measure, being at an average of 115 bushels and 27 pounds per acre. —Advertisement.

BUILDING GIANT FLY TRAPS

Schoolboys Make Device Which Will Catch Half a Million Disease Spreaders in Season.

Fly traps that will catch 500,000, or 50 quarts of flies in a season will be built this spring by some of the boys in the Grand avenue manual training center. Irving P. Lorentz, the instructor, is making a model and will soon have some of the boys constructing the device as a side line according to the Milwaukee Journal.

A square framework is made of narrow strips of wood, and within the frame is placed a cone of wire netting. In the model of Mr. Lorentz an ordinary glass jar is used in place of the wooden frame. A banana peel or similar refuse is placed at the bottom of the trap. When the trap is crowded with flies, they can be killed by dipping the filled trap into boiling water.

"The idea is excellent," Mr. Lorentz said. "The construction is simple, so that seventh or eighth grade boys should easily be able to make it. At the same time it is inexpensive, the cost of materials probably not exceeding 50 cents. If all the centers encouraged the making of these traps, it would prove a most effective weapon against the fly. Such a trap would kill off the flies before they even got into the homes."

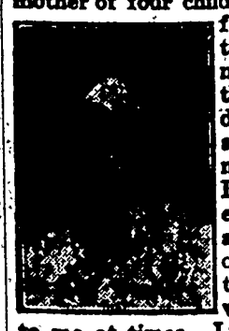
NERVOUSNESS AND BLUES

Symptoms of More Serious Sickness.



Washington Park, Ill.—"I am a mother of four children and have suffered with female trouble, backache, nervous spells and the blues. My children's loud talking and romping would make me so nervous that I could just throw everything to pieces and I would ache all over and feel so sick that I would not want anyone to speak to me at times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills restored me to health and I want to thank you for the good they have done me. I have had quite a bit of trouble and worry but it does not affect my youthful looks. My friends say 'Why do you look so young and well?' I owe it all to the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies." —Mrs. ROBT. STOPIEL, Sage Ave., Washington Park, Illinois.

Malaria on Decline.

Malaria is much less widely prevalent in the United States now than formerly.

FARMERS ARE WORKING HARDER

And using their feet more than ever before. For all these workers the frequent use of Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath, increases their efficiency and insures needed physical comfort. It takes the Friction from the Shoe, freshens the feet, and prevents tired, aching and blistered feet. Women everywhere are constant users of Allen's Foot-Ease. Don't get foot sore, get Allen's Foot-Ease. Sold by dealers everywhere, 25c.—Adv.

One-Sided Recognition.

They passed on the street without speaking—but their eyes held mutual recognition and challenge. She was accompanied by a female friend, and he had a male companion. When they had passed, the girl said:

"That was poor Jack Jurgens. He didn't speak, but you noticed his look, didn't you? Poor boy—it hurts me to think how he has never got over my refusal to marry him. Of course, he was all broken up at the time, but I thought he would soon get over it. He's a winner, isn't he? I do hope that he hasn't plunged into dissipation. He wouldn't trust himself to speak, could you? Oh, dear!"

And the man was saying:

"Did you see how that dame gave me the eye? I suppose I should have spoken to her, because I can't help thinking I've met her somewhere—her face is familiar, but I can't place her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

UNCLE WIGGILY THE COOK.

Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, the muskrat lady housekeeper for Uncle Wiggily Longears, the rabbit gentleman, awakened in the hollow stump bungalow one night as she heard some one cry.

"Oh, Nurse Jane! Save me! Save me! Save me from the mosquitoes!"

Up jumped Nurse Jane and with her night cap on her head, so she wouldn't take cold, she looked out of her window. There she saw a dreadful sight. Uncle Wiggily Longears, who was practicing at being a soldier, and who hadbeen keeping guard in a little tent in front of his bungalow, was being carried off by the enemy mosquitoes, as I told you in the story before this one.

"Oh, my goodness me sakes alive and some curly-cue hairpins!" cried the muskrat lady "I must save Uncle Wiggily But how can I do it? He is being carried off through the air, and I must follow him the same way. But how?

"Ha! I have it! His airship? If I can only make it go!"

Quickly Nurse Jane, the brave muskrat lady that she was, dressed herself and went out in the old chicken coop where Uncle Wiggily kept his airship, made of Japanese umbrella with toy circus baloons around the edges, an electric fan in back and a clothes basket filled with sofa cushions to sit on when the airship was sailing.

"Oh, if I could only make it go, so I can fly through the air and get Uncle Wiggily away from the mosquitoes!" cried Nurse Jane. But she did not know much about airships, and morning came before she had even got the electric fan started. Then along came Johnnie Bushytail, the boy squirrel, who was working for a milkman, leaving bottles of cream at the homes of the animal folks of Woodland.

"What's the matter, Nurse Jane?" asked Johnny on his early morning rounds. "Are you going away in Uncle Wiggily's airship?"

"I only wish I were!" cried the muskrat lady "Oh, a dreadful thing has happened, Johnnie. Uncle Wiggily has been taken away by the mosquito and I want to go save him. He told me to do it, but I can't run the machine."

"I can!" cried the squirrel boy. "I often ridden with him in it and run automobile, too I'll run it. Hop in!"

"But what about the milk and cream you've to deliver?"

"I'll fly over my nest house and get brother Billie to do it," said the little boy "Hop in!"

Nurse Jane, putting in the airship some things to eat from the kitchen, and she and Johnnie had to go without breakfast, got in the airship. He started the electric fan and up toward the clouds he steered the ship by the baby carriage wheel that was in the front part of the clothes basket.

On and on and on flew the squirrel and the muskrat lady But, though they kept their eyes wide open they saw no sign of Uncle Wiggily whom the mosquitoes had carried away.

At last, however, the airship flew over a big swamp Johnnie Bushytail looked down and cried

"See, if anywhere the mosquitoes live. This is where they camp in the summer time, and at night they come out to bite Maybe they have Uncle Wiggily a prisoner here."

"Let's go down and see," said Nurse Jane.

"No we must be careful about it," cried Johnnie "If the mosquitoes see us they'll bite holes in the circus balloons of our airship, and we'll fall down."

"It would be dreadful!" cried Nurse Jane. "Let's hide."

Johnnie steered the airship down behind some trees on the far edge of the swamp and then hiding the clothes balloons and so on back of the bushes, the squirrel boy and the muskrat lady crept softly on. Soon they saw the mosquito camp, and there surely enough, was poor Uncle Wiggily a prisoner

"They've made a cook of him," said Nurse Jane, and so the mosquitoes had They had taken away Uncle Wiggily's red, white and blue striped rheumatism crutch, and his yellow hat, and given him a white apron and a white cap. And there he was all day, cooking the meals for the mosquito army.

Uncle Wiggily was a prisoner; and if he had tried to get away about 1,700,000,000 of the bad biting bugs would have bitten him at once, so he didn't dare run.

"Oh dear!" sighed Uncle Wiggily and Johnnie and the muskrat lady, hidden behind the bushes, heard him. "Oh, dear! If only Nurse Jane would come and rescue me now."

"I'm here, but how can I save him?" asked Nurse Jane.

"If you only had something to give Uncle Wiggily he could slip it into the soup he is cooking for the mosquitoes, so they would all fall asleep, we could help him into the airship and take him away with us," said Johnnie.

"Something to make the mosquitoes sleep?" whispered Nurse Jane. "Ha! I have it! A bottle of paregoric! I picked it up, as I ran out of the kitchen, in mistake for a bottle of vanilla," she said, as she took the paregoric from her pocket

"The very thing!" chattered Johnnie softly. "I'll creep up and give it to Uncle Wiggily He'll know what to do with it"

So, while none of the mosquitoes were watching, Johnnie crept up close to Uncle Wiggily, who was standing near the camp fire soup kettle, and gave the bunny rabbit the bottle of sleepy paregoric.

And as soon as the mosquitoes fall asleep Nurse Jane and I will save you in the airship," whispered the squirrel boy

"Oh, joy!" said Uncle Wiggily. Then he put the paregoric in the soup which the mosquitoes had made him cook for them, and when the bad bugs had it for dinner a little later soon they all fell fast, fast asleep, not even buzzing. Then Uncle Wiggily, still wearing the white cap and apron, hopped off softly through the bushes. He joined Nurse Jane and Johnnie, and soon was safe in the airship, in which he flew back to his hollow stump bungalow.

So he was saved after all, you see, and if the soda water bottle doesn't pop over the fence and scare the pansies so they make faces at the string beans, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and his sword.

Don't Be Too Humble.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

Humility is called a virtue. It is so unless carried too far. A man is usually taken at his own value. If he makes too little of himself, he is likely to be thought of little worth. The unduly humble man will lack the strength of character needed for success. He will have little influence in society and will not be fitted to hold responsible positions. While too great opinions of one's self stands in the way of progress, too great humility is worse. Conceit receives many knocks in life and may be taken out of a man; too much humility seldom receives the needed encouragement. Conceit in a child is soon corrected, when he comes to mingling with other children in schools. Too great humility gives his schoolmates a chance to put upon him and treat him as an inferior—a chance which will seldom be neglected. A child may become crippled in spirit for life in this way. Even teachers sometimes fail to see what is the trouble with the child and to give him the encouragement he needs. Beware of breaking down a child's selfconfidence. Irreparable injury may thus be done him Train him to feel that he is of value and is able to do what there is for him to do. Think well of yourself if you would have others think well of you.

A VILLAGE'S HEALTH FIGHT.

In northwestern Wisconsin lies the village of Cornell. The location of this village of 1,100 persons five years ago, was an unpopulated stretch of clay soil on the bank of the Chippewa river. A dam was put across the river and a paper mill was built, and from this industry the village has been developed.

Not many villages of 1,100 inhabitants and five years young are interesting themselves in an organized way in the health of their inhabitants. But Cornell is different. A survey has been made by the local health officer and the state district health officer, and based upon this survey Cornell is planning for the improvement of health conditions.

Among the recommendations of the surveyors are these There are 428 unvaccinated children in the village. This condition is a menace to health and should be remedied by universal vaccination. During the last year 29 cases of diphtheria, 23 cases of scarlet fever, and six cases of tuberculosis were registered.

Cornell did well considering its age and its small size in getting so large a percentage of its diphtheria, scarlet fever, and tuberculosis registered. The survey recommends vaccination against typhoid.

The bulk of the cases of contagion, when they were plotted, were found to be in the northwest section of the village. A considerable number of badly kept privies and poorly dug wells were found in this section. The surveyors recommended that the stanitary standards of that section be elevated, and especially that these privies be discontinued and that village water be used instead of that from the polluted wells.

There are 53 children in Cornell under 2 years of age. Ten of these had not had their births registered This seems a bad record, but how many villages the size of Cornell could show a better record? In fact, how many villages the size of Cornell know what percentage of their babies are registered?

Seventy-three families in Cornell use only condensed milk. Many others use condensed milk in part. Fifteen families get their milk from seven cows kept inside the city limits. The remainder are served with milk from a dairy one mile from the village limits. The cows in this dairy have been tuberculin tested.

The surveyors found that flies are bad in the village. They found 20 manure piles. One hundred and twenty-three families throw their garbage on the ground, 172 homes had outside nonflyproof privies; a total of 315 breeding places for flies. The village is fairly well supplied with fly screens. One hundred and eighteen houses were fully screened, 37 partly screened, and 39 had no screens.

The surveyors recommended that the best way to control the fly nuisance is to provide for the disposal of manure and garbage and the abatement of privies. These privies that cannot be abated can at least be made flyproof.

The report even discusses the advantage of ownership of homes over renting Sewage disposal, drainage, and water supply come in for proper attention.

Fed Up On Relatives.

From the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

We are going to secede from our family and hers, and start a new family of our own. Martha and the children and ourself will be an independent family tree. We may not gain much by making this move, but we are certain to lose nothing The few members of the old families who have anything except children pay little or no attention to us. To be exact, they pay no attention to us. We have bragged on our better-to-do-relatives for the last time. One of them is worth $1,500, and never again will we tell folks that he is worth $15,000.

If one of them comes to our home, to which he will not be invited, we shall not send Bryan to the store on a run after some steak and a can of peaches. He can eat just what we eat all the time, and we shall not worry if he doesn't take the best of everything on the table.

Our poor but honest kinfolks are all right, in a way, but we are going to have nothing to do with them. They will be thrown out along with the better-to-do relatives. The older ones among the poor set are partly to blame for our troubles.

Years ago, when we were too young to borrow money, they commenced borrowing from the better-to-do relatives. They didn't pay back anything, and now we are suffering from their sins. If we could have borrowed the $50 that we tried to borrow last week, we would have paid back every cent of it. We don't know how we would have raised the money to pay it back, of course, but we had no intention of beating any one.

A friend will lend you money with which to buy a few gallons of much needed gasoline, while a relative will advise you to sell the car.

Cold Feet.

When I have got a tree to cut, I go ahead and hew it; I say, "It is a tough one but I know that I can do it!" And so I briskly overwhelm that massive forest giant, the ancient and ancestral elm that acted so defiant. I see so many tackle work with doubts that they'll achieve it; their every effort seems to irk, and when half done they leave it. The pride of conquest isn't theirs, they have no high ambition; they'd rather sit in easy chairs bewailing their condition. With languid hearts and frigid feet they work for spuds and sinkers, and if they earn enough to eat, they think they're truly clinkers. They're of the race of Neversweat, they balk at all endeavor; and so the poor are with us yet, and will be here forever. When I rehorn a muley cow, I tel her with a halter, and saw the antlers from her brow, and do not fool or falter. What'er I do, I do with zeal with trifling I'm disgusted; and so I always have a wheel when other men are busted.

A Loan for Every Farmer.

From the Toronto Globe.

The sum of $200 will be available at the nearest bank for every Ontario farmer who desires to increase his acreage and needs the money to buy seed.

No farmer in Ontario need go without seed this year.

Loans will be repayable with interest at 6 per cent the 1st of November after the farmer has sold his crop.

If the crop fails and the farmer is unable to repay the money, the Ontario government will make it good.

These are the main features of the arrangement made by T. W. McGarry, provincial treasurer, through the organization of resources committee, with the Bankers' association, for loans to Ontario farmers who need seed and have no money with which to buy it.

There are 175,000 farmers in the province of Ontario, so that if every one takes advantage of the arrangement the sum of $35,000,000 is involved.

There is an elderly member of the faculty of a New England university, a noted entomologist, who has retained in his employ a faithful cook for 20 years.

Recently the professor summoned her to his study in a ceremonious way which was unusual.

"Regina," he began, "You have been in my employ 20 years. As a reward I have determined to name the bug recently discovered after you."

Salted Fish Popular Food.

How to conserve the fish supply is one of the subjects receiving careful attention by the British board of trade in conjunction with the board of agriculture. One of the methods which will probably be adopted is the drying or salting of a much larger proportion of the daily catch than at present, so as to prevent waste by the fish getting out of condition. Salted haddock are already being placed on the market in considerable quantities as an experiment. They sell at about 12 cents a pound retail, and are very palatable. One method of preparing is to boil the fish, throw away the water, and boil up again, but if it is washed to get rid of practically all the salt the haddock should also be soaked in cold water for 24 hours before cooking.

WOMEN! IT IS MAGIC! LIFT OUT ANY CORN

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without pain or soreness.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone, like here shown, for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Hard, soft or corns between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. If your druggist hasn't freezone, tell him to order a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

The New Provocation.

"A man told me he was in favor of peace at any price," remarked Mr. Dolan.

"And then what happened?" replied Mr. Rafferty.

"I never answered him. I knew he was only tryin' to start a row an' make it look like I was to blame."

Soldiers Clad in Steel.

Getting its inspiration from the valuable service already performed by the steel helmet, La Nature of Paris suggests that the soldier's entire body should be cased in armor. It proposes, says Popular Science Monthly, that the sides of the head, neck and upper part of the chest be covered with a gorget, a kind of collor, and the loins with a kind of skirt, like the lower part of a habergeon, both in chain mail. A cuirass, or breastplate, of movable plates of steel would protect the chest and back, and hinged steel elbow pieces and knee pieces would cover the joints. A face mask and goggles would complete the suit. The armor would be light enough to afford perfect freedom of action.

But the Question Returns.

As the stage coach careened toward the edge of the cliff the timid tourist gazed anxiously down at the bawling stream 300 feet below.

"Do people fall over the precipice often?" she asked.

The driver chuckled to his bronchos. "No, ma'am," he returned placidly; "never but once."—Christian Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. Hocum and child left Wednesday morning in attendance at the last sad rites. Mr. Wyle was close to 70 years old and had always been in reasonably good health, and a letter received that morning after the telegram had arr[illegible] so [illegible] is a very severe shock to Mr and Mrs Hocum. They have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in the bereavement

Wednesday evening, May 30th, a dinner was given in honor of the graduating class of 1917 of Klemme High School by Mrs. L. S Powell and daughters, Mugelle and Afton

The rooms were decorated in class colors, pink and grey. The table was also decorated in class colors with their class flower, the pink carnation

At their departure, the graduates were presented with gifts of beautiful birthday books in remembrance of this school day by their teacher Mrs. L. S. Powell.

The Seven Cairns Bros. and their show were here Tuesday and of course it rained. It never fails to when they put in their appearance. The ball game in the afternoon between a local picked up team and the show team was a one-sided affair in favor of the show boys. The Cairns band was even better than ever and that is going some. The play in the evening was given a packed tent despite the threatening weather and before the show was half over it was raining fierce which made it very hard for the audience to hear at times, but those who were fortunate to have seats close up got along very nicely. "The Call of the Woods" was one of the best plays that we have ever had the pleasure of witnessing and was put on by a very strong cast and we believe that with favorable weather that tent would be packed for a return performance The show will come again next year with a new bill and it is hoped the weather man will behave next time.

ENGLISH M. E. NOTES

Next Sunday, June 3rd, the first gun will be fired from every pulpit in Northwest Iowa Conference for the Retired Preacher's Endowment Fund of $100,000 to be raised in the next four weeks throughout the conference. Don't fail to hear the sermon on this subject by the pastor next Sunday. No offering will be taken, but you will hear some facts about "Forgotten man" that you never dreamed of before. This movement was inaugurated at the conference session last fall at Spencer. It is planned that every Methodist in the conference shall have a part in this glorious opportunity. Come next Sunday and hear all about it. Don't let us be delinquent in our duty to the old preacher who has helped to make our country what it is. The Campaign will extend over from June 3rd to July 1st.

J. M. Howdeshell, pastor,

Put Stick in Knot.

When tying a knot in rope which must stand much strain, put a stick of soft wood in the knot for it to close on. When you want to untie the knot break the stick and pull out both ends. Your knot can be easily untied.—Farm and Fireside.

Musk Loses Weight.

Charles Bazzoni, a French chemist, demonstrates that a grain of musk loses weight until it ceases to give off its odor, after which its weight remains the same. This proves that perfume is caused by volatile particles given off by the odoriferous body.

101 Registar June 5th

The registration, Tuesday, brought more than it was even anticipated and the work of registering kept the registrars busy the most of the day. No trouble of any kind was experienced and the "slackers" and excuse finders were very few and far between. Out of the total of 101 who registered, 46 had dependent families 41 showed no exemption and 3 were alien enemy, two had only had their first papers, and practically all of the rest were natural born citizens. One of the number registered was an American Indian and the balance were of the Caucasian or White Race. M. M. Magner, P. M. Griesmer and L. R. Presentation of Diplomas

Schaefer-Gates

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gates witnessed a very beautiful wedding Wednesday afternoon when their daughter Miss Cora was united in Holy Wedlock to Mr. Roy Schaefer.

At the appointed hour, which was three o'clock the happy couple took their position on the floor surrounded only by the immediate relatives of both families. After the ceremony, congratulations, and a social chat all were invited into the dining room where a large table was laden with the good thigns that make up a real wedding feast. No one seemed to be sick or embarrassed but all partook freely. It was not the wedding feast in Cana of Galilee but of Klemme, Iowa,

Roy is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schaefer, very highly respected citizens of Klemme. He is a member of the Germantown M. E. church and president of the Epworth League. He is a gentleman and a christian.

Miss Cora is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gates. Her parents too are among Klemme's very best folks. She is a member of the English M. E. church and a very worthy character.

Thus two of Klemme's very choice young people step out into life's pathway together. They are ready to receive their friends any time at the Schaefer farm six miles west of Klemme.

We join their relatives and many friends in wishing them a happy voyage across the sea of life.

Flies are More Dangerous Than You Think

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But, at least, we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease-carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

THE KLEMME TIMES

M. M. MAGNER, Publisher.

KLEMME, IOWA

One of the most marvelous memories was that of Leonard Euler. Euler was a native of Basle, but spent the most of his life in Petrograd. He was born in 1707 and died in 1873. He was educated at the University of Basle. He early gave evidence that he possessed unusual mental abilities, and when but 19 years old ranked second in a contest for a prize offered by the Paris academy for the best treatise on the masting of ships. In 1730 he went to Petrograd as professor of physics, but gave up his professorship after three years for a place in the Petrograd academy. From this time the special field of his labors was in mathematics. The results he attained are most astounding. More than half of the 46 quarto volumes of mathematics published by the academy between 1727 and 1783 were from his pen. At his death he left more than 200 manuscript treatises.

The direct money loss of sickness to the workmen of the country figures out more than $800,000,000 annually on the basis of 30,000,000 wage earners averaging $2 a day wage. Such a calculation was made by Dr. Loyal A. Shoudy, chief surgeon, Bethlehem Steel company, South Bethlehem, Pa., in a paper presented at the recent safety conference held under the auspices of the Pennsylvania labor department at Harrisburg, Pa. In his argument for physical examination of employes and wide medical supervision in industrial establishments, he mentioned government statistics to the effect that the average worker loses about nine days a year by sickness alone. Adding $1 a day for medical supervision to the daily wage loss, he arrives at the figure stated.

Professor Lawson, an English authority on the bible, declared that if the scriptures were lost, he could, with the exception of a few chapters in the old testament, restore them all Byron knew his own works by heart. Ben Jonson not only knew his own works by heart, but entire works that he had read. Thomas Fuller, the great English divine, once undertook, after walking from Temple Bar, in London, to the farthest end of Cheapsirdwe, to repeat on his return the inscriptions on all signs in their order both backward and forward, a feat which he triumphantly accomplished.

No capital city has changed its name so often as Constantinople, which was originally known as Lygos. In B. C 658 this name was discarded for that of Byzantium, which remained in use until the capture of the city by Septimus Severus, who rechristened it Roma Nova On making it his capital Constantine the Great endowed it with his own name and it is still known as Constantinople among western nations. This name however, is ignored by the Turks who since they obtained possession of Constantinople have preferred to call it Stamboul

President Carranza has issued a circular informing the people that the government is not supporting any candidate for state office and that each citizen will be given the most complete guarantees of freedom to vote for whom he desires The circular declares that it was in order that there should be no influence exerted on the voters that he had removed certain governors and postponed the election in certain states.

When the authorities of an Alabama town had reason to believe that in certain quarters whisky was being sold illegally they started an investigation. This ended in hundreds of barrels of the liquor being dragged out of doors and broken open The stream of whisky which flowed down the main street of the town is said to have been worth $150,000

NONPARTISAN MOVE STARTED BY IOWANS

Formal Organization Effected and 700 Farmer Members Enrolled in Six Weeks.

Centerville, Ia., June 3.—To teach the people of Iowa that politically "the farmer must be reckoned with" is the purpose of the Farmers' Nonpartisan association, which is openly out to capture the Iowa legislature and run the state in the interest of the agricultural classes.

The men behind the association are known, but whether they are for or against the Harding administration and whether the association is connected with the Taxpayers' league, which figured in the last campaign, has not yet been disclosed.

E. M. Halstad, former postmaster at Lake Mills, is president.

A. A. Sanden, retired farmer, capitalist and real estate man, of Lake Mills, is treasurer.

J. E. Tierney, who recently came to Centerville from Panora, where he was editor of the Vidette, is secretary, and also is editor of the association's organ, "The Farmers' Nonpartisan Advocate."

Although only six weeks old the association has enlisted 700 members at the fee of $6 annually. This is the result of merely an effort in the northern part of the state. The campaign for members is to be developed into a statewide campaign.

In addition to its political aims, the association has plans "to promote harmony and good will among and cement more closely the endeavor of the various farmers' cooperative societies, and work for the creation of cooperative packing houses, cold storage plants, terminal elevators and loan and insurance companies."

"We propose to make it plain to the people of Iowa" said Secretary Tierney, "that the farmer must be reckoned with. We believe that especially in dairy there should be a concerted effort to prevent this industry falling into the control of the big packing companies, in a way similar to the livestock industry

We believe insurance is another field where millions can be saved the farmer."

Speaking on the important roads question, Tierney said

"We are for good roads. The farmer wants such roads as he can pay for. But we are against any of these paved roads ideas that the farmer does not want to pay for"

Elimination of the middlemen 'where he is standing in the way of the farmer realizing the best price for his produce and getting the farmer full value of the dollar he spends' is another object of the association, according to Tierney

SOLDIER-MAYOR DRAWS TWO "JUICY" SALARIES

Des Moines, Ia., June 3 Mayor John MacVicar will continue to draw his salary as chief head of the city while he is away performing his military duties His pay as captain in the quartermaster's corps while attached to Fort Douglas, Utah, will be $200 This combined with his salary as mayor at $3,500 a year will give him an income of about $500 a month

Tom Fairweather, who will be mayor pro tem, in the absence of Mr MacVicar, will continue to draw his same old pay $3,000 a year No provision in city ordinances makes it possible for Fairweather to draw the regular salary for mayor

OMMEN TO QUIT STATE FOLLOWING "BALM" SUIT

Sac City Ia., June 3 L. E. Ommen, superintendent of the schools at Auburn during the past year and recently defendant in a breach of promise suit brought by Miss Emma Vogel, of Chicago, in the district court here, has decided to leave the state and will within the next few weeks take up his residence in Idaho, where he will operate a fruit ranch In the suit here the jury brought in a verdict awarding the Chicago girl $3,000 and this sum was later lowered to $1,250 by private settlement

CEDAR RAPIDS RAILROAD MEN WILL GO TO FRANCE

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 3.—A total of 24 railroad firemen, brakemen, machinists civil engineers and office men left Cedar Rapids last night to join the regiment of railroad men which is being prepared for service in France.

CLEAR LAKE—Gov W L Harding began an eight-day tour of the state here today "preaching the gospel of patriotism," as he termed it. He will be occupied with addresses until June 8 and will return to Des Moines on June 9 to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the state council of defense He is to speak at Eagle Grove tomorrow. Mt. Pleasant will hear him June 3; Vinton, June 4, Cedar Falls, June 5, Mason City, June 6, Fayette, June 7, and Waterloo, REMSEN—John Raetz, a well known retired farmer of Remsen and for many years a resident of this vicinity, met instant death when he fell from a wagon at the home of his son Fred, nine miles northeast of town. Mr Raetz suffered a fractured skull and was dead before his son who was standing at the horses' heads at the time of the accident, could reach him.

SAC CITY—Former Senator Lafe Young, of Des Moines, will speak here Sunday afternoon at a mass meeting, when an effort will be made to raise a big fund for the Y. M C A. war budget. Sac county was originally apportioned $1,600 of the amount asked for in Iowa, but the committee in charge here believes that the subscriptions will far exceed that figure. June 8.

CHEROKEE—As a result, of heavy rains Railroad creek, which runs through the city, rose greatly and considerable damage was done. Several bridges were taken out or injured beyond repair and the water was 6 feet above its banks.

IOWA REGISTRATION WILL TOTAL 188,564

4,942 Eligibles in Sioux City, and 1,643 in Woodbury County Outside City.

Des Moines, Ia., June 2—The Washington estimate of 10,000,000 names to go on the military registration lists next Tuesday is too high. The estimate for Iowa of practically 200,000 will not be reached And the exempted classes are going to be quite large and important.

"Iowa will register somewhere near to 190,000 men of the military age," is the estimate of Ora Williams, editor of the Iowa census, who has prepared the estimates by counties based on the actual population of the state. "They have given out at Washington an estimate for Iowa, first of about 200,000, and later placed it at 199,000, but they do not indicate the basis of the estimate. It is evident, however, they start out with a guess as to the Iowa population and assume the oft repeated fake that Iowa is a state losing population, when as a matter of fact Iowa has not lost population at any time. They estimate the number for the United States at 10,000,000 men to be registered. But Iowa has practically 2.2 per cent of the total population of the United States. On that basis Iowa would have to register 220,000 men. But even at Washington they scale this amount materially.

"From a careful computation, based on the census of Iowa, using insurance acturial tables, I am convinced that the actual registration in Iowa will not be far from 190,000. If it goes beyond that number it will show that Iowa population is rapidly increasing, or that the long time movement of young men out of Iowa and toward the newer states or the larger cities has been checked An estimate prepared for the purpose of checking against the items for the various counties makes an interesting showing at this time. Seven counties will be divided as between their largest city in each and the rest of the county The total for the state is 188,564."

The following is the estimated number of persons of military age who will be registered on June 5, based on the census of Iowa:

CROP GROWTH IS RETARDED; CUT WORMS DAMAGING CORN

Des Moines, Ia., June 2—The weekly crop report of the Iowa weather service for the week ending May 29, today says.

The week was unusually cool, the average temperature being about 8 degrees below the normal. Frost occurred in some localities on two or three nights and ice formed in a few places on the 23d, but the damage was generally light. The heavy rains at the close of the preceding week together with the showers on the 25th and 26th, delayed work somewhat and prevented the completion of corn planting in the southern districts, but most of the crop is in, and cultivation has begun in the earliest planted fields. The stand is reported to be very good, but cutworms are active on sod ground. All small grain continues in good condition and winter rye is heading in the southern counties. Potatoes, grass, garden truck and most fruits are also in good condition, but the weather is too cool for normal growth

ALL WHO REGISTER TO GET WAR MESSAGE COPY

Webster City, June 2—Through the generosity of Mrs. Emmons Blaine, of Chicago, the women of Iowa will be at each registration place in this state Tuesday and will give every man registering a copy of President Wilson s war message.

This plan has been approved by the President and Secretary of War and Mrs. Frances E. Whitley, of this city, chairman of the Iowa division of the women's committee of national defense, has issued a proclamation calling upon women in every county to see that delegations are present at the registration places for this purpose. She has also secured copies of the war message and will place them in the hands of women in every county for this purpose.

TRAP SHOOTERS CONSIDER RAISING REGIMENT FOR WAR

Waterloo, Ia., June 2—A regiment of trapshooters, all splendid marksmen, was suggested at the annual shooting tournament of the state association here. No active steps toward organizing such a regiment were taken. The association has 2,500 members. The directors voted $500 to buy Liberty bonds. E. C. Hinshaw, state fish and game warden, was reelected president.

WILL TEACH 100,000 IOWA WOMEN ART OF CANNING

Ames, Ia., May 31.—Within the next few weeks, in a statewide canning campaign by the agricultural extension department at Iowa State college, every person in Iowa will have the chance to study the latest methods of canning, drying and preserving products, through practical demonstrations. More than 2,000 canning demonstrations will be held during the campaign, which will last until about the middle of August. These will reach 100,000 persons, at the lowest estimate, and will result in the formation of at least 2,000 community canning clubs

CLAIMED NEW DEVICE PREVENTS BLINDNESS

Grinnell Inventor Said to Have Perfected an Effective Contrivance.

Grinnell, Ia., June 1—Although almost totally blind and with his eyesight becoming dimmer as time sped on, G. B. Way, a veteran Grinnellian, has invented a contrivance which has completely restored his sight, the ingenuity of which has received praise from many sources.

Twenty two years ago Mr Way was stricken almost totally blind. Physicians told him he had suffered a slight hemorrhage of the brain and that it would only be a question of a few years until darkness would be his fate until the end.

Setting out with a determination to find something that would relieve his pitiful condition, Mr Way purchased numerous books on the eye and its treatment, and had friends and relatives read these books to him. Finally he decided that the physicians were wrong in their diagnosis and that he was suffering from a lack of blood circulation in the optic nerve and not from hemorrhage of the brain

So he began working on a contrivance which would start up this blood circulation Several months ago it was completed and Mr Way began using it with the result that his eyesight has been restored and he can now go where he pleases, read write and enjoy those pleasures which had been denied him so long

NEW OKOBOJI TRAIL IS ONE OF BEST IN STATE

Sac City Ia June 1 Automobilists touring to Lake Okoboji this summer will be assured of an ideal trip if they follow the Okoboji trail the newly established highway from the capital to the lakes. The trail cannot be lost if the distinctive markings on the posts at the crossroads are followed A red arrowhead on an 18 inch field of white with six inch stripes at top and bottom

George P Perkins of Sac City secretary of the Sac county good roads association states that all poles at the crossroads and through the towns between Des Moines and Sac City have now been painted and those north of Sac City will be finished within a short time

The Okoboji trail runs for 200 miles through the rich farming section of western Iowa passing through the cities and towns of Peon, Rippey, Jefferson Scranton Glidden Carroll, Auburn, Sac City Early Storm Lake Sioux Rapids, Spencer, Milford and Spirit Lake

LONG STRUGGLE AHEAD HARDING TELLS HEARERS

Marcus Ia., June 1 Gov W L Harding delivered a short memorial address here today in which he predicted that the boys of today would make the same generous sacrifices as did the soldiers of the civil war He said in part

"War is again upon us As the young men went forth in the 60s and made sacrifices, so the young men of today will have to go and make sacrifices. Ambitions were thwarted then and will be thwarted today family ties were broken then and will be broken today.

"This is a final contest between monarchy on one side and democracy on the other We can do nothing else than to give all we have in property and life on the side of democracy"

POISONED BY WATER LEFT STANDING IN AN OLD JUG

Shenandoah Ia June 1 Poisoned accidentally while drinking out of a water jug that had stood in the field several days, Mack Lightfoot a farmer, 20 years old was in a serious condition for several hours

About 5 o'clock Wednesday after drinking from the jug two or three times he was taken suddenly ill with cramps in the stomach A physician was called and worked with him until 11 o'clock before he was out of danger.

It appears strychnine had been used in the fields for killing squirrels and it is possible that some of the drug got in the jug or in the mouthpiece

PLYMOUTH COUNTY PLANS TO FORM ENGINEER CORPS

LeMars, Ia., June 1 Plans are now under consideration for another military unit in Plymouth county which may give the county an opportunity to duplicate its splendid showing in bringing Company K, Second Iowa infantry, to war strength, the first company in the state. An engineer corps will be formed under the direction of County Engineer R. L. Merrill, if permission, which has been applied for at the adjutant general's office in Washington, is granted.

CORRIE HAS CLOSE CALL WHEN HIS CAR OVERTURNS

Ida Grove, Ia May 31.—The big touring car of S. M. Corrie, of this city, turned turtle as he was returning from a visit in the home of his soninlaw near Lawton, Ia., Sunday afternoon and Mr. Corrie had a narrow escape from death. He had reached the high grade a few miles east of Correctionville, and striking a slippery place in the road, his car skidded and left the grade, precipitating the car down to the bottom, about 16 feet. The top of the car caught on the barbed wire fence, keeping it from going over entirely, and Mr. Corrie was caught between the body of the car and one of the strands of barbed wire and badly lacerated about the chest and face. Parties working in a field nearby hastened to the scene, and turned the car over, releasing the driver. Mr. Corrie also received some bad bruises about the face, but no danger is apprehended from his injuries. He was taken to Correctionville where he was given medical aid, and sent for his sons, who went to Correctionville and brought the car and Mr. Corrie home. Mr. Corrie was alone in the car at the time of the accident.

SLACKERS WARNED.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—President Wilson in a proclamation issued today, warns all persons seeking to avoid registration by leaving the country that they expose themselves to prosecution and military service eventually in spite of their efforts to avoid it. The president's proclamation says:

"I, Woodrow Wilson president of the United States of America, do hereby give warning that all persons subject to registration * * * who withdraw from the jurisdiction of the United States for the purpose of evading said registration, expose themselves upon their return to the jurisdiction of the United States to prosecution for such evasion of registration pursuant to section 3 of the act of congress approved May 18 1917 which enacts that any person who shall wilfully fail or refuse to present himself for registration or to submit thereto as herein provided shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction in a district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year and shall thereupon be duly registered."

GERMANS EXPECT SEA CLASH SOON

Anniversary of Skaggerrak Battle Is Occasion for Comment From Naval Writers.

Copenhagen, June 1. The German newspapers are all printing anniversary articles on the naval battle of the Skaggerrak, the impression being quite generally expressed that a new battle between the British and German fleets is a possibility of the near future.

German naval writers for some time have been discussing the prospect of the British fleet once more trying conclusions with Admiral Von Sheer's armada. Many of the writers have been governed by the prevalent German skepticism regarding the losses of British ships claimed by the German admiralty, but denied by British without comment omit ships like the Tiger the Warspite and the Marlborough from their calculations of British losses.

ORDER BARS GERMAN VISITS; CLOSES CLUBS

Drastic Rule Governing Alien Enemies in New York Made Effective Today.

New York, June 2. America's heaviest blow at alien enemies in New York fell today when the United States marshal's order forbidding Germans to enter 20 barred zones around armories and naval militia stations in this city became effective. Between 15,000 and 20,000 males over 14 years of age are hit, it is estimated. The zones are of half mile radius.

Hundreds of permits were issued to Germans who had lived for years in the prohibited districts and bore good reputations, to persons employed there who could get forceful recommendations from their employers and to those who faced ruin if unable to enter the zone, to conduct their business.

Those who obtained special permission to continue living in the districts cannot be visited by German friends, as no permits were granted "for social purposes." The forbidden areas in some instances, took in German clubs restaurants and hotels. Under the rule, enemy aliens can pass through the zones on public conveyances, but cannot alight enroute. Germans without permits caught in the barred district will be interned.

RIBOT CHECKS SOCIALISTS

Paris, June 2.—Premier Ribot today announced in the French chamber of deputies that the government would not facilitate the voyage of French socialists to the international socialist congress at Stockholm.

FIGHT OVER SUGAR TAX SEEMS LIKELY

Change in Income Tax to Be Made to Prevent Double Taxation.

Washington, June 2.—The Senate finance committee today heard protests on its revision of the House war tax bill.

Senator Broussard, of Louisiana, protested against the decision to levy a consumption tax of one-half a cent a pound on sugar. Although some senators thought the tax would be imposed only upon imported sugar, Chairman Simons said that the committee intended to have the tax apply on all sugar, domestic or imported.

Another change recommended by Senator Kellogg, was to exempt from taxation income received by corporations from other corporations to avoid double taxation.

NEW YORK HARBOR CLOSED TO SHIPPING

Order Rescinded Shortly Before Noon, But Gate Remained Closed Until Later.

New York, June 1.—Fo... reasons ...which navy yard and custom ... officials refused to reveal, the port of New York was, for a good part of the forenoon, closed today, to all shipping, by the shutting of the gate in the steel net closing the harbor.

Shortly before noon it was learned that the order closing the port had been rescinded although at that time the gate was still closed.

FIGHTING NOT NEW TO DOYEN'S MARINES

Col. Charles A. Doyen.

Col Charles A Doyen, who will command the 2,700 marines who are going to France, as a part of the fighting division under Major Gen. John J Pershing, is one of the best known officers of the corps. He is a veteran of the Philippine campaigns, of the operations in various parts of the West Indies, and in other parts of the world. The men he will take with him are all veterans, to whom fighting is not new.

CURIOUS KEEP BANKER FROM RECOVERING SON

Springfield, Mo., June 3.—Carrying $6,000 in currency and driving alone an automobile equipped with lights of a peculiar design, J H Keet, a local banker, kept a lonely vigil last night through the mud soaked roads of Greene county where he had been advised he would be halted and given his kidnaped son for the ransom he carried.

At daylight he returned home, the kidnapers having failed to keep their promise because several other motor cars trailed Keet although he requested them not to do so. Lloyd, the 14-months-old son of the banker, was stolen from their home here while his parents were attending a dance at a local country club.

REFUSES NEW JURY.

San Francisco, Cal., June 2.—Superior Judge Emmet Seawell has refused to discharge summarily 12 jurors sworn to try Mrs. Rena Mooney for the bomb murders of last July.

The court excused Daniel Kelly on the grounds of illness and restored to the defense and prosecution their original challenges of 20 and 10, respectively. Ferrari prosecuting for the state immediately challenged Thomas Camp a saloonkeeper and Paul Postler, a journeyman baker the only labor union man on the panel. The defense challenged Otto F. Hildrecht, an interior furnisher. Another juror was excused, by consent, leaving seven sworn men in the box.

TO MODIFY OWN DECREE.

Los Angeles, June 3.—Kenesaw M. Landis of Chicago judge of the federal district court has taken under advisement the case of the American Press association against the Western Newspaper union asking a modification of a decree given by him in 1912 which fixed the prices of plate matter for newspapers and other periodicals. The rapid rise in the cost of materials is responsible for the demand for increased prices.

President Smith, of the American Press association said his company is ready to dissolve unless the decree of Judge Landis is modified, the first four months of 1917 having shown a loss of $16,000, according to figures submitted by him. It was charged that the defendant corporation cut the fixed rates.

ALL CENSORSHIP REJECTED.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—The administration's fight for a war censorship on newspapers was lost in congress at least for the present, when the House refused by a vote of 184 to 224 to accept even the modified censorship section written into the espionage bill in conference. The Senate already is on record as opposed to a censorship.

No comment on the outcome in the House was forthcoming from the White House.

DEFENDS WINTERHALTER.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Secretary Daniels has denounced in sharp language the circulation of reports reflecting upon the loyalty of navy officers whose names indicate that they are of German descent.

Attention was called to a newspaper article asserting the Rear Admiral Winterhalter was being considered to succeed Admiral Mayo as commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet, and discussing the possibility that Admiral Winterhalter's descent might raise a question as to his loyalty.

STOPS SLACKER EXODUS.

Laredo, Tex., June 2.—Checking the exodus of slackers, government agents today refused to allow male citizens between the age of 21 and 30 to cross the border into Mexico. Two Americans were arrested whom it was said were "seeking to leave the United States to avoid military registration."

BRITISH SOCIALIST SILENT

London, June 2.—The accuracy of yesterday's reports from Stockholm that George H. Roberts will represent the British majority socialists at the Stockholm conference is doubted here and in some quarters denied. Mr. Roberts refuses to talk on the subject.

MRS. COUCH ALIVE.

Washington, June 1.—Mrs. Katherina Couch, an American, who was reported in news dispatches to have been executed as a spy in Germany, recently called at the Spanish consulate in Brussels, according to a report published in London newspapers and cabled today to the state department.

SPY IN FEDERAL BUILDING.

San Francisco, June 1.—A leak in the San Francisco postoffice building from which government secrets reached outside sources was admitted here today by John W. Heston, United States district attorney.

NEW THRUST IN THE WEST BEGINS OONS

Both French and English Await Time Set for New Offensive — Activity Near Ypres.

TONS OF BOMBS DROPPED

French Take 31,829 Men in Recent Fighting—Italian Blow Costs Austria 300,000 Men.

Reports from both Berlin and London today indicate the probability that an important military movement by the allies is underway on the Belgian front—possibly an attempt in force to hit the German flank on the coast a crushing blow.

A pitch of notable intensity such as usually precedes an attack has been reached by the artillery fire near the coast and to the south in the Ypres district.

Dispatches from the French front today indicate a renewal soon of the offensive against the Germans. The French are in more advantageous positions now than when they began their offensive in April. Last night a German post in the Chevreux district near Graonne was captured.

The British, to the north, are again reporting gains after a period in which only raiding operations were attempted. The advance was scored in the region of Cherisy, between Croisilles and the Arras-Cambrai road. In one of their big attacks during the height of the Arras battle British troops were reported as having reached Cherisy but were not able to hold it at the time. They now have pushed forward again a little to the west of the town.

NEW BLOW NEAR YPRES.

Berlin, June 2.—Heavy gun firing last night reached a stage of great intensity in the region of the dunes on the Belgian coast and in the Ypres bend, particularly in the Wytchaete sector, the war office announced today.

TONS OF BOMBS DROPPED.

London, June 2.—Many tons of bombs have been dropped by British air craft on the Belgian towns of Ostend, Zeebrugge and Bruges, the war department announced today.

FRENCH TAKE 31,829 MEN.

31.—(delayed—(from a staff correspondent of the Associated Press).—On the French Front in France, May 31.—Between April 15 and May 24, the number of German prisoners falling into French hands reached a total of 31,829, of whom, 28,045, were unwounded.

As a result of the successful attacks the French now possess the initiative and occupy more important positions than when they began the forward movement in April. The Germans are showing great nervousness as to what is about to happen, and the slightest movement in the French lines calls for that hurricane of artillery and machine gun fire. The tactics now employed permit the French to attack with minimum loss.

Six Companies Killed.

This was demonstrated, for instance, in a recent raid in the range of hills and the woods south of Chevreaux. A small body of French infantry advanced in order to straighten the line, severe artillery preparations having preceded the assault. The infantry gained the objective and took 30 prisoners in addition to killing a number of Germans. Later it was discovered that French shells had battered the German shelters so thoroughly that six full German companies crouching in the shelters while awaiting an opportunity for a counter attack, had been killed to the last man. The place was a shamble. The total French loss in this affair amounted to only 27 men, killed or wounded.

Rome, June 1.—Italy's great offensive has already cost the Austrians 300,000 in killed wounded and missing, according to conservative's estimate. The Italians are now consolidating and reinforcing their lines with new troops, but continue to inflict frightful losses on the enemy by repelling counter attacks.

On May 19 four regiments between Auzza and Frigido were practically wiped out. On the next day two desperate attempts were made by the enemy to recapture Allingort Mont and Massif coast. The Austrians lost at least three full regiments.

KIAO CHOW OFFERED TO JAPS FOR PEACE

South Sea Island Colonies Added to Bait Dangled Before Mikado.

Copenhagen, June 2.—From an article in the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, it appears that German has reconciled herself to the loss of Kiao Chow, her former Chinese possession and the South Sea Island colonies, which were captured by Japan. Commenting on rumors regarding difficulties between Japan and Russia, the newspaper declares Germany undoubtedly is ready to cede the lease of Kiao Chow in direct negotiations with Japan in return for repayment of the millions spent in making it a German base in the east, and also is willing to discuss the future disposition of the South sea colonies.

BOILER MAKERS STRIKE.

Jerome, Ariz., June 2.—Members of the boiler makers' union went on strike today at the United Verde smelter at Clarkdale. The men were ordered out Tuesday night in third sympathy strike since about 1,500 copper miners went out May 24. The miners' principal demands are for recognition of the union.

MORE GOLD TO JAPS.

New York, June 1.—The subtreasury here today transferred to San Francisco $3,054,000 on account of a further shipment to Japan of gold to that amount.

TWO AIRPLANES DROP IN MINUTE

Guynemer Downs Four In a Day, Total Of 43.

Paris, June 2.—Captain George Guynemer, most famous of all French army aviators, has brought down five more German airplanes, two of them in one minute, four in one day. The captain now is credited officially with having destroyed 43 enemy machines.

Between May 17 and May 31 the French airmen brought down 32 German machines and 57 others are believed to have fallen to earth behind the German lines.

NEED NOT SPECIFY EXEMPTION REASONS

But All Men Between 21 and 30, Inclusive, Must Register Next Tuesday.

Washington, June 2.—While the legal machinery of the government was operating to stamp out agitation against the draft, the war department took up another phase of the matter dealing with the status of Americans now in foreign countries.

Secretary Baker called upon Brigadier General Crowder, judge advocate general and provost marshal general of the army, for an opinion as to the effect of the new law upon Americans of military age residing abroad. Many Americans of military age now abroad have been eager to enroll. Registration officials, throughout the country were informed today that answers would not be required to the question on the registration cards as to whether the individual claims for exemption and on what ground. The department has concluded that no man should be required to claim exemption. There are many who do not care to do so, and under the new ruling, none will be required to state his position until he is summoned for actual service and comes up before an exemption board.

General Crowder appealed to the press today to give prominent place daily to an outline of the essential facts in regard to the registration process. The statement follows:

WHO MUST REGISTER: All male persons (citizens or aliens) born between the 6th day of June, 1886, and the 5th day of June, 1896, both dates inclusive, except:

Members of any duly organized force, military or naval, subject to be called, ordered or drafted into military or naval service of the United States; including all officers and enlisted men of the regular army, regular army reserves, officers' reserve corps, enlisted men's reserve corps, national guard and national guard reserve recognized by militia bureau, the navy, the marine corps, coast guard, naval militia, naval reserve force, marine corps reserve and national naval volunteers, recognized by the navy department.

WHEN: On Tuesday, June 5, 1917, between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m.

WHERE: In your home precinct.

HOW: Go in person, June 5, to the registration place of your home precinct. If you expect to be absent from home June 5, go at once to the clerk of the county where you now happen to be, or if in a city of 30,000 or over to the city clerk and follow his instructions; if sick, send competent friend. The clerk may deputize him to prepare your card.

PENALTY FOR NOT REGISTERING: Liability to a year's imprisonment; then enforced registration.

RIOTING SOLDIERS JAILED IN SPAIN

Food on Way to Swiss From Argentine Seized by Alfonso Government.

Madrid, June 2.—Disorders participated in by soldiers have occurred in Barcelona. Several officers have been imprisoned in the fortress.

When reports of the disorders became current here the minister of war questioned and confirmed the fact and furnished the additional information that a number of officers had been locked up in the Montjuich fortress, adjoining Barcelona.

According to later news these officers include a colonel, a lieutenant colonel, a major, a captain and two lieutenants.

Bilbao, Spain, June 2.—According to news received from Madrid the government has ordered the seizure of a cargo of Argentina wheat on board the steamer Rosario, which arrived here Wednesday. The cargo was consigned to Switzerland by way of Cette.

The Spanish cabinet, the advices stated, maintains that it is entitled to take over the wheat to meet the needs of Spain.

CALL CHAIRMAN OF BOARD OF APPRAISERS

Des Moines, Ia., June 2.—A board to appraise and condemn 320 acres of land adjoining Camp Dodge was named by Attorney General Havner today. George C. Call, of Sioux City, is named as chairman of the board.

The last legislature authorized the purchase of the ground for additional space for training of Iowa military forces.

ROPE CUT, "SUICIDE" DROPS FROM WINDOW OF HOSPITAL, KILLED

Portland, Ore., June 2.—C. E. Lindenfelter, a Boise, Id., attorney, was killed here this morning when attendants at the Portland surgical hospital cut him down after he had attempted to commit suicide by hanging.

Lindenfelder was not dead when his body was found hanging out of a window. The rope was cut and he fell three stories to the ground. He was killed instantly.

SUBS SUNK LAST MONTH CHEER JONES

But Germans Are Responding With an Increased Production, English Food Director Asserts, Discussing Shipping.

HAS FOOD FOR 12 WEEKS

England Faces Famine if It Falls to Seven, He Says —Shipping Margin Holds Good.

London, June 2.—The May shipping losses were the lightest so far in sub war, due to the fact that the British are destroying more subs than ever before, Kennedy Jones, food dictator, declared today. "However," he added, "The Germans are meeting this with a similarly increased output of U-boats. England has a reserve supply of cereals sufficient for 12 weeks, but it is uncertain whether this will be maintained. If it falls below a week's supply local famine will result.

Great Britain's losses in cereal ships have been only 6 per cent, according to Mr. Jones. The ministry of food, he added, had made allowances for the loss of 25 per cent of this kind of shipping.

VON BISSING LETTER SHOWS KAISER KNEW

Dead Governor General of Belgium Reviews His "Moderation" in Treating Church.

Copenhagen, June 2.—The late Governor General Bissing, of Belgium, maintained until the day of his death his belief in the necessity of the complete annexation of Belgium to Germany. German advocates of moderate peace have been asserting that Von Bissing changed the views he expressed in the memorandum he addressed to the emperor, advocating annexation. This is disproved by a letter written by Von Bissing on January 14 to the reichstag deputy, Dr. Stresemann.

In this letter General Von Bissing declared that the war was lost if Belgium, at the end, was not chained to Germany, to be ruled and exploited in Germany's interest.

Von Bissing continued by saying that his policy toward the Flemings and the Belgian church was ipspired and guided by this thought. Perhaps Cardinal Mercier will be surprised to read that the general conducted his church policy with "wise moderation" and also his opinion that: "I should, perhaps, have had an easier time along kulturkaempf lines (referring to Bismarck's kulturkaempf of war with the Roman Catholic church), but we need the church when once we wish to bring German methods and German labors into effect in Belgium."

In conclusion Von Bissing spoke of the confidence the emperor showed in him and remarks that his policy in Belgium had always been conducted "in accordance with his majesty's directions and wishes."

BELIEVES U. S. SIMPLY WANTED TO JOIN WAR

Buenos Aires, June 2.—The Argentine view is that the United States is going to war rather because she has a good excuse than because she has a good reason. The Argentines who do think the United States has an adequate reason are also of the opinion that this reason was not the consideration which led her into war.

It is generally their judgment that the United States wanted to fight. They believe the United States to be a victim of the same sort of psychological influence which, after the commission of a sensational crime or a suicide, often causes the incident to be imitated by others.

PEACE TALK GROWS; PARLIAMENT MEETS

Workmen Parade and Polish Club Urges Rights of Small Nations—Crisis Near.

Amsterdam, June 2.—According to a Vienna dispatch today the Polish club has decided to authorize Deputy Daszinski, in agreement with other parties, to introduce an urgent motion in the lower house of the Austrian parliament, declaring both the belligerent parties now recognize the right of nations to govern themselves as the foundation of a lasting peace.

Copenhagen, June 2.—Reports from Vienna say that simultaneously with the opening of the Austrian parliament thousands of workmen ceased work and organized a great procession as a demonstration for peace.

HUNGARIAN CRISIS NEAR.

Copenhagen, June 2.—(via London)—Austrian dispatches to the German papers give the impression that the Hungarian crisis is gradually working in the direction of a dissolution of parliament and new elections.

Present Low Price of Jeffery Six Can Only Be Maintained While Our Stock of Materials Lasts

So this is your opportunity if you act quickly. When our materials, bought over a year ago, are gone, you can't buy this Jeffery Six, worth $150 to $200 more, at the present low price. Take advantage of this saving now. See this car. Place Your Order at Once.

Jeffer MOTO

YOU have watched automobile prices go up and up.

The newspapers have been full of price-raising announcements. Already forty-four manufacturers have been forced to make advances of from $75 to $200.

These, we believe, were honestly necessary. They were based almost entirely on the increased cost of parts and raw materials.

Now materials and parts are still advancing—and in conjunction with the proposed government war tax, will unquestionably force motor car prices to still higher levels.

Here is where The Nash Motors Company has a tremendous advantage over companies which merely assemble cars. Ninety-three per cent of every Jeffery Six is made right in the Nash plant, from raw materials.

So you see we are practically unaffected by the rise in the cost of parts. And although during the past six months all raw materials have advanced in cost 20 to 50 per cent we have been protected on the raw material side, too.

Because we build ninety-three per cent of every Jeffery Six in our own plant we buy these materials far in advance and in huge quantities.

That is why in the face of these many abnormal conditions, and in the face of the tremendous advance made in materials, it does not seem possible that we can sell the Jeffery Six at $1465 for long—certainly not after our present stock of materials, bought over a year ago, is used up.

This is your opportunity! While we maintain this present price on Jeffery Six you can simply figure that you save a clear $150 to $200 by buying now.

For if the Jeffery Six were to be advanced in price in keeping with prices advanced by makers of other fine cars, you would have to pay just that amount to get this wonderful car.

So we say—act now. There are two good reasons why you should see your nearest Jeffery dealer and place your order at once. The first is that you have an unparalleled opportunity to buy this Jeffery Six—the finest car in its field—at from $150 to $200 below its real market value in view of present conditions.

The second reason is that the demand for this car is surpassing our expectations. We are hard pressed now to fill orders. The steadily rising prices of competing cars are driving home every day in the minds of people the truly unusual value of Jeffery Six.

Now as to the car itself. There is little we need to say about it to you now. You know the name this Jeffery Six has won for being a marvelously performing car. No car in its price class can match the service it will give you.

Ask any Jeffery owner what he thinks of his Jeffery Six. He will tell you that he has found it practically impossible to wear this car out. He will tell you that after long, hard service the body is tight and that repair costs are negligible.

He will tell you, too, that the motor keeps fit—that its flexibility and quick pick-up seem to improve with use. He will tell you that its streamlines are strictly the vogue. He will tell you that its second-hand value is higher after several years' wear than of most cars of its price class which have seen only half that service.

Remember—this is the Jeffery Six revised, improved and backed with unqualified endorsement, by The Nash Motors Company. We cannot maintain this price indefinitely. That is certain.

So you see it is the wise thing, the shrewd thing, the bit of good business on your part to see your nearest Jeffery dealer and place your order for a Jeffery Six at once.

Do this now. Don't delay. Then you will know that you have bought the biggest value in the motor car market today.

One more word! See your dealer—place your order—get your Jeffery Six at $1465.

CHAPTER XXVII.

That same evening Miss Mallon called at Dr. Vetter's house. In response to her ring he admitted her himself.

"I do so need your advice, your help," she explained with a little smile. "That is why you must forgive my coming."

"Dear child," he answered, "I am glad you came—glad.

He led the way into his office.

"He did well—very well," he commented, giving her a chair and taking his accustomed place at his desk. "He was very wise."

"You mean to tell the truth about his—his condition?"

"Yes. It will raise up new friends for him."

"The dear friends," she said gratefully. "He has so many."

Vetter saw that she was unstrung.

"Tell me," he invited, "how can I help?"

Simply and directly she described her meeting with Smith in Waller's apartment, her wish to give him what encouragement she might, and his fanciful story illustrating the value of serving others. She repeated the story with great fidelity as to its main points, and gave many of his sentences word for word.

"Ah-h," he said slowly, "he has a wonderful imagination And yet, what is imagination? Merely the power to adorn the things one remembers."

She drew in her breath sharply.

"That is just it," she said. "I thought the story might give you something to work on—something from which we might deduce—things."

He began to play with the paper knife deftly, swiftly, moving it in his fingers until it sparkled, a circle of light.

"I see," he half mused. "The Leslie woman puts her in Shanghai. And there was in his story the passage about the tear jars of China."

"And," she supplemented anxiously, "the part about letting the woman go from him at the fountain He said it was a mistake."

She was shaken, afraid for him

Vetter let the paper knife fall and spread both his hands, palms down on the blotter before him, while he regarded her steadily.

"Do you think," he asked, "he ever treated a woman so?"

Her glance, for all its sadness, was as steady as his.

"I know he never could have, in his proper senses," she declared all resolute. "But his condition at that time, the opium, the whisky might have made him irresponsible."

"Then you think there is something to the woman's story?"

"I thought there might be. I see that it is possible."

"And yet," he said, admiration and sympathy mingled in his voice, "dear child, you love him?"

"Yes," she assented.

"His marvelous personality," he observed, his words slow, his eyes downcast while he played with the knife. "We who try to cure men s minds are like explorers walking through great caverns and admiring by the light of flickering torches the wonders they hold. No person ever fully knows another person's soul—the possibilities of the soul are so unlimited. But I went into his with my flickering torch, and I saw beautiful things. He told me all his thoughts, all his ideals. His soul, my child, is a beautiful soul."

She waited, silent, fearful, grateful. She caught his intention to comfort her. He looked at her and smiled.

"Tear jars," he said, "are known to many who have never been to China. And men leave women—in all countries. No special land has a monopoly on that."

"Then you don't believe one word of Mary Leslie's story?" she breathed.

"Not a word about his ever having been married to her or having deserted her. I doubt that he ever was in China."

"You, more than all other people, must know!" she said thankfully.

"No," he qualified; "I do not know. It is merely my opinion, such as that is."

She rose.

"It is very comforting," she thanked him. "I felt that I must talk to you." She took a deep breath and squared her shoulders. "I felt that I must be doing something!"

"Patience," he smiled gently, "is the greatest of human achievements—at times."

He asked her to stay longer.

"No," she said, "I have one other visit to make."

He escorted her to her runabout, where her maid awaited her. Despite his ungainly bulk, he seemed always the impersonation of tenderness, sympathy, even a certain gracefulness. It occurred to her as she thanked him that he must love all the world, that there must be in his heart always nothing but loving kindness.

"Do not fear," he told her in farewell. "He will win. As for the other, the remembering, hope—hope always. Perhaps he was right. It may be that, out of this great service he is doing mankind, there will come to him his recompense, the rending of the curtain of darkness of which he spoke."

She paused, her foot on the step, his hand on her elbow.

"Could it be possible?" she asked eagerly.

"It is possible," he answered. Somebody may tell him the truth, may strike the magic note, may speak the one word that will flood his mind with light. It has happened before."

She drove to the boarding house in Fifth street where Mary Leslie was stopping.

Telling her maid to accompany her, she went up the short flight of steps to the front door and rang the bell. Her ring was answered by a tall, thin, unprepossessing looking woman whose patience evidently had been tried sorely by the procession of reporters and photographers during the day. Even that dingy house had been swung into the white light of publicity.

Edith stepped into the narrow hall.

"I came to see Miss Leslie," she announced, adding, when she saw the woman's doubtful expression "She expects me. Which is her room?"

"If she expects you, it's all right," the landlay said querulously. "It's the second floor front."

Edith, followed by the maid, went upstairs with quick, firm step and knocked on the door of the second floor front.

"Come in," a woman's voice called.

Edith, telling the maid to go back to the machine, opened the door and stepped into the room. Mary Leslie, sitting under a wall gas jet near the bureau in the far corner, was trimming a hat. When she recognized her visitor, she gave no sign except that her hands became dead still on the hat in her lap. The paleness of her face was uncanny in the gaslight.

Edith closed the door.

"Don't you remember me, Miss Leslie?" she asked pleasantly.

"Yes," replied the other woman chill resentment in her tone.

Edith, disregarding the hostility, went nearer to her. They eyed each other a moment.

"I was hoping," Edith said, "that we might have a friendly talk together."

"About?" Mary's eyes forbade her.

"About Mr. Smith."

"What Mr. Smith?" The wise looking eyes were hard.

Edith, who had not been invited to take the other chair in the cheerless room, was resolved to keep her temper.

"The Mr. Smith you saw in my house—you called him Jack Gardner."

Mary lifted the hat from her lap carefully and placed it on the corner of the bureau.

"That's his name—Jack Gardner," she said.

Her voice was cold, dull colorless. She seemed bereft of energy, dead to emotion.

Edith took the other chair.

"Won't you tell me about him?"

"What?" The monosyllable was heavy with negation.

"Let me explain what I thought." Edith spoke in a warm, personal tone, as if she would drive the other to friendliness. "I thought you and I, two women, might help him. He is engaged in a great work just now. He is about to carry to success a wonderful undertaking. You—surely you wish only to be a help to him. I, too, would like to help him."

There was something of evil in the other woman's smile.

"I don't want to help him," she said flatly.

"But you say you're his wife?"

"I am his wife!"

"And yet you want to see him ruined?"

"He ruined my life—left me to go to the dogs. Now let him go.

They eyed each other again. The good humor, the invitation to confidence, was still in Edith's eyes.

"I'm afraid you distrust me," she said.

"No," the other denied. "Why should I distrust you?"

"That is kind. It is fair. When you came to my house for help I would have given it to you. Now, I have come to you. I thought that, since you are his wife, you might try to think back to the time in Shanghai and see, in your own mind, whether there hadn't been some good in him, some kindness, enough to excuse what—what you say he did."

She was talking very rapidly in her effort to command the other's attention.

"In such things, you know, there is always some fault on both sides. Neither the husband nor the wife can be wholly to blame. Surely there was some extenuating circumstances, something to keep you from being so very bitter now, something to make you think before you condemn him wholesale before the country!"

Mary Leslie looked at her in astonishment, and then laughed in credulously.

"Look here!" she said. "What do you want me to do?"

"I want you to tell the truth, the whole truth, about all your relations with him."

"Why?"

"Because I am sure that, if you told it all, it could not discredit him—could do nothing but help him. Think, Miss Leslie! He can't even remember having known you—ever!"

Mary took the hat from the bureau and placed it on her lap again.

"You don't expect me to fall for that bunk, do you?" she asked insolently.

She made a show of resuming work on the hat. Her head, bent over, put her face in shadow and somehow made it, with the sneer on her lips, hideous. Suddenly she became repulsive to Edith, an impossible creature. For a moment neither of them spoke. While the country rang with its enthusiasm for the agitator and while the streets of the cities were alight with the glow of torches carried by many marchers shouting his name, the two women who touched his life most nearly sat in a tawdry room, each utterly uncomprehending of the other.

Edith stood up. Mary did not look at her.

"Then you won't talk with me?" Edith put a last question.

"There is nothing to talk about," the other said sullenly.

The distance to the doorway, short as it was, was not long enough. Before she could put her hand on the knob, Edith, outraged and bitterly disappointed, lost her temper, gave way to her righteous indignation.

"You will regret it," she said, in a fierce, low tone. "You! Who are you to arrogate to yourself the right to injure him? The time will come when you will weep—when your heart will break, if you have a heart—for what you have done, or tried to do. But listen to me! You will not succeed. I don't know whether you have been bribed to tell a lie. I don't care whether you are telling a half truth! But you cannot profane the nobility of his character, cannot put a degrading touch upon him. There is a God, and there is retribution! And you have committed the supreme sin: You have refused to aid a fellow being in distress!"

She opened the door and stepped into the hall. Mary Leslie, who had not met her eyes while she talked, did not look up as she went out.

The black clad figure, the pallid face, the hands busy with the hat, the eyes full of the wrong kind of wisdom, remained, a lively menace to the agitator's work.

Fully 30 minutes after Edith's departure the black clad figure stood erect; the wise eyes looked at the reflection of the pale face in the bureau mirror, and the hard voice confided to nobody in particu

"Humph! Everybody's nutty about him."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Proof of the marriage of John Gardner and Mary Leslie in Shanghai could not be found. Chollewollie, obsessed with the idea that the man Simpson was connected with the whole scheme to discredit the agitator, devoted the spare time of himself and his friends among the Washington detectives to a search for some clue to his whereabouts, but made no progress. Mary Leslie, keeping to her room in the boarding house, repeated her story to correspondents with monotonous regularity and with unfailing fidelity to its details as she first had given it out. Edith Mallon, schooling herself to patience, got from the newspapers day by day the story of how the country, undismayed by the charges against Smith, rallied to his support. Mannersley, newly returned to Washington, was not received at the Mallon house. The week wore away, the agitator in a terrific drive of labor, his assistants and lieutenants at their desks until the early morning hours, the plans for the demonstration working smoothly. In the afternoon of the 8th of December the special trains began to come into the city. From then until the morning of the 10th the multitude grew. The union station, built to accommodate inauguration crowds, was overtaxed at times, and people coming from the south were disembarked at Seventh street near the river, while some, coming from the north and west, detrained at Eckington, a suburb.

No such throng of civilians ever had invaded the capital. Bigger crowds had been present at inaugurations of presidents, but on those occasions the number had been swelled by the military. It was calculated by the chamber of commerce the night of the 9th that 499 000 visitors had arrived. The city was a mass of white ribbons, white bunting and white banners. The streets were thronged with the laughing, good natured crowds. Here a band played, there a group sang a marching song or a hymn The women and children together slightly outnumbered the men Everywhere was the conviction that the victory already had been won

Smith, having taken counsel of Waller and several others, including Bishop Rexall, had stuck to his original intention of heading the Pennsylvania avenue line of march, which formed at the avenue and Eighteenth street and the surrounding side streeets Indeed, Waller pointed out to him, he could not refuse to take such part in the day s work. It was demanded of him by everybody.

The 10th dawned, a clear day, with a slow breeze from the south that became almost balmy under the bright sun By 9 o'clock the bulk of the people had taken their appointed stations- near the avenue and Eighteenth street northwest, near M and North Capitol streets, at Franklin park and in the streets back of the House of Representatives office building. Smith had carried out his plan: that people from all the state of the union should approach the capitol from the four points of the compass.

At a few minutes past 10 o'clock a double line of mounted police, 14 abreast, wheeled out of Fifteenth street, their backs to the treasury and the White House, their faces to the capitol. The avenue, clear of all traffic, with the people kept to the sidewalks by rope and the militiamen, stretched before them like a long corridor.

They were followed by the agitator, who was on horseback, 30 yards behind them. He wore a frock coat and was hatless. His riding was superb. His horse, a sorrel, one of the prize mounts of the army, picked his slow way over the asphalt with steps light and delicate enough for a dancing master, swerving to this side or that and dancing backward and forward when he was held in to keep the proper distance from the police. Smith's seat was such that he seemed a part of the horse. Erect, proud, his dominant emotion one of immense gratitude to those who cheered him, he rode with uplifted head, his brow bare to the sunlight.

He made a fascinating figure to those who watched him. In the people's imagination he was different from all other men. Mystery was upon him. The tragedy of his story secured their pity. The glamor of this day's achievement forced their admiration. The romance of the realization of his ambition caught their fancy.

PLANTATION MALARIA.

I have told in an earlier article of how a plantation of 40,000 acres in Bolivar county, Mississippi, is making money by eradicating malaria from its 5,000 employes, but the story is worth retelling just at this time.

Anopheiene mosquitoes have lived through the winter. King found recently that mosquitoes infected with mild forms of malaria (tertian) will survive 30 degrees F. for two days, 31 degrees for four days, and 46 degrees for 17 days. Mosquitoes infected with malignant malaria will survive 25 degrees for 24 hours. Noninfected mosquitoes have no difficulty in living through the winter in stumps, under houses, and in attics. Having emerged from their hiding places and having bitten malaria carriers, they are now ready to infect susceptible people.

The malaria season is on. How much infection there will be will depend in the main upon what individuals do, but in part upon what employers do.

On this plantation every manager is equipped with three grain quinine capsules, compound cathartic pills, epsom salts, and castor oil. When a man contracts malaria he is given five three grain capsules at bedtime for four successive doses. He then takes five three grain capsules at bedtime on two days of each week for six weeks. If the fever does not break promptly Dr. Miller, who makes this report, says that the quinine is not being absorbed and that it must be given hypodermically or in the veins. He says. "Today any physician who permits a case of intermittent fever to continue longer than five days is not properly using the means at his command."

In his opinion there is no need to give more than 15 grains of quinine. If 15 grains does not produce the desired effect it is because the salt is not being absorbed and the method of giving should be changed.

He does not think chill tonics should be used. One reason why they have been so successful in controlling malaria on this plantation is that they do not allow the use of chill tonics. Every person with malaria is compelled to take enough quinine for a complete cure. No partial cures are permitted. Dr Miller does not believe in the use of quinine in five grain doses every day as a prophylatic procedure.

Other measures of prevention used by this plantation company are as follows:

Many of the houses are screened with 16 or 18 mesh wire screening. Every bed in a house not screened has a 16 mesh bar

There is now employed a sanitary expert who gives his entire time to malarial work, going from house to house and reporting ench week health conditions, presence of mosquitoes, conditios of bars and screening, collections of stagnent water and harboring places for mosquitoes.

This work is done because it pays. It has decreased Dr. Miller's work 40 per cent, has increased the working efficiency of the force 25 per cent and ras eradicated malaria hematuria entirely

"Angel of Bellevue" Married.

From the New York Journal.

Miss Elizabeth Graham, dear to the hearts of hundreds of unfortunates as "The Angel of Bellevue," gave the people at the big hospital a shock the other night.

She returned after a short vacation with tears in her eyes. There was no trace of the smile that had helped many of the patients in the tuberculosis ward make a braver fight.

"Why, what's the matter?" asked one of the doctors.

"My husband has gone to Plattsburg," sobbed the little nurse.

"Husband! What?" exclaimed the sympathetic physician.

"Yes. We hadn't finished our honeymoon when he was called to camp for training" Miss Graham explained.

And thus it was that a pretty romance was revealed. Miss Graham became the bride of Lawrence J Mulhearn, a civil engineer of the Interstate Commerce commission, April 30. At the hospital it was thought she had gone away for a much needed rest

An Epitaph.

O passer-by beware'
Is the day fair?—
Yet unto evening shall the day spin on
And soon thy sun be gone,
Then darkness come,
And this, a narrow home.
Not that I bid thee fear;
Only, when thou at last lie here,
Bethink thee, there shall only be
Thyself for company.

War Claims Another Poet.

From the London Observer.

The war is taking a heavy toll of our poets. Second Lieutenant R. E. Vernede, of the rifle brigade, who has died of wounds, was a singer of notable accomplishment, and many readers will remember the beautiful verses from his pen, "Before the Assault," which appeared in the Observer of last December, and of which some lines have all the pathos of unconscious prophecy:

If thro' this roar o' the guns one prayer may reach thee,
Lord of all Life, whose mercies never sleep,
Not in our time, not now, Lord, we beseech thee
To grant us peace. The sword has bit too deep.

We may not rest. We hear the wail of mothers
Mourning the sons who fill some nameless grave!
Past us, in dreams, the ghosts march of our brothers;
Who were most valiant * * * whom we could not save.

Hark, the roar grows * * * the thunders reawaken—
We ask one thing, Lord, only one thing now;
Hearts high as theirs, who went to death unshaken,
Courage like theirs to make and keep their vow.

To stay not till these hosts whom mercies harden,
Who know no glory save of the sword and fire,
Find in our fire the splendor of thy pardon,
Meet from our steel the mercy they desire. * * *

Then to our children there shall be no handing
Of fates so vain—of passions so abhorr'd * * *
But Peace * * * the Peace which passeth understanding * * *
Not in our time * * * but in their time,
O Lord.

WEEKS HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ohio.—"For years I suffered sometimes it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could scarcely walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and was there four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains.

friend who is a nurse asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day and was suffering a great deal. It has not only done me more good than the doctor's medicine did. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. BROWN, W. 12th St., Cleveland, Ohio.

Uncle Wiggily and the Rice Cakes.

"Nurse Jane, have we any rice in the bungalow?" asked Uncle Wiggily Longears, the rabbit gentleman, of his muskrat lady housekeeper one morning.

"Rice?" repeated Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "Is there going to be a wedding?" and she switched her tail around the hollow stump real excited like.

"No," said Uncle Wiggily with a laugh. "What I want of rice is for the soldiers to eat."

"The soldiers to eat?" asked Nurse Jane. "What soldiers?"

"Why, you know that I am studying to be a soldier since the mosquito war began," went on the bunny rabbit gentleman, "and Sammie Littletail, the rabbit boy; Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, the squirrels; Jackie and Pettie Bow Wow, the puppy dogs—they are all studying with me in my tent just outside the hollow stump bungalow.

"We need things to eat that will keep well, like corn, rice and oatmeal, and I was thinking of cooking some rice cakes for a change. You know I'm the soldier cook, but I have no rice, so I thought maybe you had."

"Not enough for you hungry soldiers to eat!" laughed Nurse Jane. "So if you are going out today you had better get some at the store."

"I will," said Uncle Wiggily. "How do you cook rice?"

"Well, first you take the dry, hard white rice kernels," answered the muskrat lady, "and put them to soak in a cup, or bowl of water. And when the kernels have softened up you boil them in a little hot water with a pinch of salt."

"Why do you pinch the salt?" asked Uncle Wiggily, making his pink nose twinkle like a banana peeling. "Is it naughty?"

"No, indeed!" laughed the muskrat lady. "It's just to give it a little flavor."

So leaving Sammie Littletail the rabbit boy, on guard in front of the tent near the bungalow, Uncle Wiggily went to the store for the rice. He was in such a hurry to get back to cook it that he never stopped to have an adventure. But just you wait and see what happened to him.

"Now Sammie," said the bunny as he reached the tent, "we have the rice, and we will put it to soak in cold water before we boil it with the pinched salt, which isn't naughty as you might think."

"Nurse Jane has gone over to Mrs. Wibblewobble's house to help the duck lady sew red flannel caps for bald headed roosters, so you go in the bungalow and get a pan in which I can put the rice to soak."

Sammie brought out a large dishpan and asked if that would be large enough.

"I guess so," answered Uncle Wiggily, uncertain like. "We want plenty of rice cakes we soldiers do but I think that will be enough to start with."

He had bought at the store a big bag of rice and this he now emptied into the dishpan and put cold water over the top.

"Now come on outside Sammie," said Uncle Wiggily to his rabbit nephew, "and we will practice with our beanshooters while waiting for the rice to soak. Then when it has done enough swimming in the water I'll make the cakes for the other animal boy soldiers so we'll all be strong to fight mosquitoes."

"Good!" cried Sammie and after the rice was left to sleep and soak in the water the bunny boy and old gentleman shot at a mark with the bean shooters.

"Wait until I go in the tent and get some more beans," said Sammie after a while, when they had shot away all they had brought out with them.

Into the white tent went Sammie, and, no sooner had the flap or front door closed after him than he cried:

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily, come quickly! The rice is escaping!"

"Escaping!" shouted Captain Longears, as he liked to be called. "What do you mean?"

"I mean it is running away out of the pan, over the tent floor and everywhere," Sammie answered. "Oh, look!"

Uncle Wiggily hurried in and looked. Surely enough the pan, that had at first only been partly full of rice and water, was now brimming, running over full, and the rice seemed to keep on coming, like a popper full of corn over a hot fire.

"What makes it?" asked Sammie, as the rice in the middle of the pan seemed to bob up as though a circus elephant were underneath, trying to turn a peppersault.

"I don't know," answered Uncle Wiggily. "I guess some enemy mosquitoes are under the ban trying to get our rice."

And my! You should have seen that rice boil up and bubble over and run out of the pan and down on the ground.

"We must not let it waste!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Quick, Sammie, into the bungalow with you, and get all the pots, pans, pails, milk bottles and flower pots you can, in which to catch this rice! Quick!"

Sammie did, and he and the bunny Uncle filled about forty-leven things with the rice, including a washtub. The whole soldier tent was filled with rice.

"What made so much of it?" asked Uncle Wiggily of Nurse Jane when the muskrat lady came back from Mrs. Wibblewobble's. "I didn't buy this much dried rice at the store."

"Of course not!" laughed Nurse Jane. "I should have told you that rice swells up very much in water and that you only need about a cupful to make a big pudding. Oh, Wiggy! What a lot of rice! Oh, my!"

But it was not wasted for the bunny uncle man made enough rice cakes for the whole animal army, and all the woodland folk besides. So everything came out all rice—I mean all right—and if the postman doesn't come too late to eat breakfast with us, so he can't help the egg stick fast on the pan, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the apple dumplings.

bers on harp and violin. They have a musical act of unusual merit, and it is a bit different, too.

Christie and Griffin, styled as "The Boys From Virginia," are versatile chaps with an ambitious line of chatter. They have some gags that are saggy, and some that are not.

The "Four Kasting Kays," the last act on the bill, produce a thrilling acrobatic number. They are aerialists of much ability, and this perhaps is the why of their success with a few aerial stunts not often seen in vaudeville. Miss Lillian Kay, a member of this troupe, is said to be the only woman aerialist in the world now catching double somersaulters.

The first act is a miniature circus, known as "Eller's Novelty Circus." It is novel, all right, goats being the novelty.

England Due To Stop Opium Imports Into China This Year

Peking, (by mail).—Opium production should cease in China and the importation of foreign opium should end this year, if the opium agreement between Great Britain and the Chinese government be put into effect.

In 1907 Great Britain agreed to reduce the importation of opium into China 10 per cent a year, on condition that China make a reduction in the amount of opium grown within the Chinese empire. At the times this agreement was entered into, the annual legal importations of opium into China from India aggregated about 51,000 chests, or 6,800,000 pounds. Consequently the British government agreed on behalf of India, to reduce this amount by 5,100 chests each year. Under the provisions of the treatry, Great Britain expressed a willingness to terminate the opium traffic earlier, if China were able to stamp out opium growing within its borders.

Provisions were made for an inspection of provinces by British commissioners whenever the Chinese government was confident the growth of the poppy had been stamped out in these provinces. Upon the ratification of the Chinese report by British commissioners provinces were to be closed to Indian opium. Already all the provinces of China have been declared closed to the foreign opium trade with the exception of Honan, Shensi, Yunnan, Kweichow, Kiangsi, Kiangsu and Kwangtung.

Canton in Kwangtung province, and Shanghai in Kiangsu province, are the chief opium centers in China. Of these, Shanghai is more important in the opium trade than Canton, and is the center from which the Opium Combine and the Opium Guild direct their activities.

Statistics on the opium trade are imperfect and misleading. While the smuggling of opium has been greatly reduced since 1907 it is still estimated that more than 5,000 chests, of 133 1-3 pounds each, are smuggled into China annually. The legalized opium traffic has been greatly reduced through the arrangement with Great Britain. In 1888 the traffic in imported opium aggregated 82,612 chests. The amount of opium imported legally into China in 1914 was 7487 chests. Figures are not available for the year 1915 and 1916. There is reported to have been a further reduction.

The revolution of 1911 and the subsequent political upheavals have interfered greatly with the enforcement of the anti-opium edicts. Although the central government has generally stood for the extermination of the opium traffic its power has been limited at times by unsettled conditions in the southern provinces and there has been a temporary relaxation in the enforcement of the anti-opium laws because of the necessity for raising funds to carry on the government.

The Opium Combine in Shanghai, which exists by virtue of a franchise granted by the central government, will reach the end of its franchise on March 31 of the present year. Great stocks of opium have been accumulated at Shanghai by this combine, which it is not able to market. Appeals have been made to the central government for an extension of its franchise, but President Li Yuan-hung and his advisers have refused an extension of time.

Consequently it will be impossible to sell opium legally in China after the end of next March. The members of the Opium Combine plead that their trade has been greatly upset by the political disturbances, and the failure of China to stamp out the local production of opium. This argument, however, has not been accepted as valid by the Chinese government. The members of the combine have also argued that they are in the hands of the Chinese opium guild, which advanced the price to a point that made sales impossible. The Chinese government has also disregarded this argument.

Great Britain stands ready to send inspectors into any province which the Chinese government may declare free from opium growing. At present the central government apparently is not willing to have commissioners visit all the provinces still open to the opium trade. Reports made by consular officers in Yunnan and other southern provinces show considerable revival in opium farming. The Yunan movement against the proposed restoration of the monarchy by Yuan Shi-kai is reported to have been financed to a considerable extent through the traffic in Yunnan opium. The same is said to have been true in other seceding provinces. This condition, which is beyond the reach of the Peking government in its present unsettled state, makes the actual date of the termination of the opium traffic in China somewhat uncertain.

Until opium farming shall have been stamped out in China, Great Britain is not obligated under its agreement to forbid the importation of Indian opium into the republic. British officials in China would gladly welcome an extinction of the Chinese opium production, and the consequent ending of the importation of opium from India.

Reformers throughout the world have urged that England should have absolutely forbidden the importation of Indian opium into China years ago, and have attacked the agreement whereby Great Britain agreed to reduce the importation proportionately to a reduction of the Chinese production of the drug. However, British officials have consistently acted upon their government's view that the sale of Indian opium in China and the production of Chinese opium should be lessened gradually, and finally extinguished simultaneously.

No announcement has been made by Great Britain as to its probable attitude towards the Chinese opium situation at the close of the year 1917. Unless there be a decided expected strengthening of the central authority in China, the extinction of opium production this year seems quite unlikely. As long as China produces opium, England undoubtedly has a right, under its agreement to permit the importation of opium from India, in spite of the fact that opium will have no legal status in China under Chinese laws, after March 31 of the present year.

EATING BY LAW.

It is more than possible that before the end of the year people of the United States may be living under a food director who will tell each adult what he shall eat how much and what he shall pay. If so, the central feature of the plan will be that each person shall have a number of calories to be determined by his work and his size. If this comes about before the year ends people will be talking about 1,000 calories of food as they now talk about a pound or a pint.

In the face of this it is well to call to mind that while calories are the main basis for determining the value of foods they are not the only requisite. For instance, lean meat or some other form of proteid, while necessary for the repair of waste does not show up well as compared with fat meat, a food capable of furnishing heat and energy but not of repairing waste.

The food director when he is appointed will not only specify the number of calories to be used by a man but he will say that a certain part of this must be lean meat or, if the man is a vegetarian, peas, beans, cheese, and milk.

In making up his diet lists he will take still other qualities into consideration. Minerals do not make calories and cannot be estimated in terms of calories, but they are necessary for nutrition and certainly for continued health. Therefore the director will order that in the diet list there will be incorporated certain foods that will not show up so well on the calorie table but will be needed for the minerals which they contain.

Most of the calories in the ordered diets will come from starches, sugars and fats. Most of the proteids will come from lean meats, beans, milk, and milk proteids, most of the mineral from wheat bran, corn bran, and rice bran and other forms of bran and from vegetables and fruits. These last vegetables and fruits will have to be included even though judged on the basis of calories they are inexcusably expensive, judged on the basis of minerals they are not.

Still other factors will have to be taken into consideration. Beyond question in this food director's cabinet will be found the best food chemists the country affords, for some of these other requisites have only recently been handed over by the food faddists to the scientists and in consequence much remains to be solved.

Some time ago it was recognized that young animals would not grow unless there was a growth substance in their food. It was noted that butter contained this growth substance in the very best form and that runted animals would start to grow at once if fed butter. This substance is fat soluble. It is called lipoid. We know that a considerable list of foods do not contain it, that many others do, but is is not known whether or not it is contained in a large number of well known foods. Here is a field for more work.

In addition there is another substance of new discovery necessary to well being. This substance is generally present in foodstuffs of animal and vegetable origin, but is absent from crystalline sugar, fats and starches and is almost absent in polished rice and finely milled flour and other highly milled grain products.

Jurors in Murder Case Not Disqualified by Attending Sermon on "Sin and Its Punishment."

From West's Docket.

The sheriff of Anderson county, Kentucky, in his efforts to keep murder juries from perishing of ennui at night, has accorded them the happy privilege of attending revival meetings. When Joe Chilton was being tried for murder the sheriff took the jury to the opera house one night to hear a sermon on "Sin and Its Punishment." Seats for the 12 "just men and true" were provided immediately in front of the preacher. After Joe's conviction he claimed that this little "treat" of the sheriff's had influenced the jury to his prejudice. The court of appeals of Kentucky in an opinion delivered by Commissioner Clay (Chilton v. Commonwealth, 183 Southwestern Reporter 191), holds that the sermon in question, if affecting the prisoner's interest, was rather favorable to him than otherwise. An interesting point raised by defendant is discussed in the following excerpt from the opinion:

"It is suggested, however, that the very subject of the sermon, that of sin and its punishment, was prejudicial, because it showed that even God himself approved of punishment, and thus fortified and prepared the minds of the jurors to follow the divine example. This contention, however, does not go beyond the mere suggestion. It is not based on any facts which actually occurred. It is not shown that the jurors were exhorted to do their duty because God did his. In the absence of facts tending to show the contrary, we are unable to perceive how a mere theoretical discussion of sin and its punishment, considered solely from the angle of divine government, can be regarded as prejudicial to the substantial rights of the appellant."

Nothing More Paying Than Work.

From the St. Nicholas Magazine.

Among the men to whom America is looking to carry her through the present war is Herbert Hoover; lately chairman on the commission of Belgian relief, now in charge of showing Americans how best to conserve their food supplies. The reason Mr. Hoover rose to his present international position of trust lies perhaps in a story told of him by Mary R. Parkman in the May St. Nicholas.

"Can you imagine getting fun out of translating a great Latin book about mines and minerals?

"'For some time I have looked forward to putting old Agricola into English,' explained Mr. Hoover; 'we are having a real holiday working it up.'

"'Who in the world was Agricola and what does he matter to you?' demanded his friend in amazement.

"'Agricola, my dear fellow, was the Latinized name of a German mining engineer who lived in the early part of the Sixteenth century—a time when it was not only the fashion to turn one's name into Latin, but to write all books of any importance in that language. He matters a good deal to anyone who happens to be especially interested in the science of mining. This volume we are at work on is the corner stone of that science.'

"'How, then, does it happen that it has never been translated before?' asked the friend.

"'Well,' replied Mr. Hoover, with some hesitation, 'you see it wasn't a particularly easy job. Agricola's Latin had its limitations, but his knowledge of minerals and mining problems was prodigious. Only a mining expert could possibly get at what he was trying to say, and most mining experts have something more paying to do than to undertake a thing of this kind.'

"'I see,' retorted his friend, with a smile; 'you are doing this because you have nothing more paying to do.'

"'Yes,' replied Mr. Hoover quietly; 'there is nothing that is more paying than the thing that is your work—because you particularly want to do it.'"

The Most Powerful Searchlight.

It is 10 feet high, its mirror has a diameter of 5 feet and it weighs three tons. Its beam is as brilliant as the sun at 8 o'clock in the morning or 4 in the afternoon, New York latitude, and you can read a newspaper by its light 20 miles away. The heat of its focused beam is so intense that it will set paper afire at a distance of 250 feet. It has a candlepower of more than 1,250,000,000.

These are a few astonishing facts in the Popular Science Monthly for June, about the Sperry searchlight; the invention of Elmer A. Sperry, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is already known as the inventor of the airplane stabilizer and ship gyroscope bearing his name and the first electric arc light.

One of the most powerful beacons along the coast is the Sandy Hook lighthouse. But the Sperry searchlight is 22 times more brilliant than that light. Were the Sperry lamp substituted for the lighthouse beacon, a ship passing out to sea could be bathed in light until it disappeared below the horizon. By swinging the light back and forth across the sky it has been made visible 150 miles away. For navy use the Sperry lamp illuminates a target 10 times more brilliantly than any other projector devised.

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding skin.

A small bottle of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freezone for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of Those Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine — double strength — is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.

He Got the Job.

"Why did you leave your last position?" 'asked the boss, sizing up the applicant for a job.

"You see, sir, I was fired—"

"What do you mean coming to me for a job, when you were fired?" roared the other.

"I merely meant to say, sir, that I was fired with an ambition to work for you."

Just Reversed.

Doctor—Did he take the medicine I prescribed for him religiously?

Nurse—No, sir; he swore every time.

Anyone traveling through the country cannot help but notice the increased acreage that is being tilled by the farmers this season and we are glad to note this spirit as we will need all grain and foodstuffs that we can possibly raise. Klemme citizens are also doing their share and we believe that it would be safe to state that at least double the amount of garden has been put in this year that there was last. Charles Lewis and Marlin Croner are two of the bachelors who are trying their hand in trying to relieve the food shortage, have rented five acres of ground in the south part of town, most of which they have already planted to garden truck and intend to plant the balance soon.

When a German comes in, stops the Tribune and howls that we are down on the Germans, he gives himself dead away to start with. He will brag on his loyalty, but before he gets done with it he plainly shows that while he is very loyal it is his hearts desire that Germany shall not have the stuffing knocked out of militarism, because Belgium was a tyrant in the Congo, England blew bosoys from the muzzles of their guns and Russia was a despotism. Which is all true. But this war is not being fought on the issues or on the cussedness of wars of former times. It means that the German war lords must be curbed and that the German people themselves shall be free of Prussianism and allowed to live in peace with themselves, and that Germany's lust for power, for extended borders and aggressiveness over her weaker neighbors shall be stopped and silenced forever. That is why the stars and stripes are taken to Europe. There are no more loyal people to the Stars and Stripes than a very large majority of the Germans, and there are some that ought to be fighting under the German flag today in order to conform to their innermost sympathies. It is natural that their sympathies should extend to their fatherland, but this is now their country and they should forget all and stand by the Stars and Stripes with every ounce of their energy until the fatherland can breathe the same air of freedom that they enjoy here.—Britt Tribune.

THE FIFTY DOLLOR BOND

In issuing Libetry Loan Bonds in a denomination as small as $50 the Secetary of the United States Treasury has put it in the reach of almost every American citizen to do a real and actual service to his country.

Not all can fight not all can render personal service in other ways, but those who are denied the privilege of serving their country in person have the privilege of serving her by lending their money to win her victories

But it is not patriotism alone that urges the buying of Liberty Loan Bonds. Thrift and a wise economony in investing small savings commend these Liberty Loan Bonds to small investors. They are safe, and considering their tax-free quality—free from all federal, state and local taxes (inheritance taxes excepted) and free from any war tax that may hereaftr be levied, affording an absolute net income of 3½ per cent, they constitute an ideal investement for savings

Nor is there any reason for waiting for a later bond issue in the expectation of a higher rate of interest being obtained for the law provides that should such bonds be issued later, Liberty Loan Bonds may be exchanged for them at par.

When Sponges Are "Dead."

Sponges when brought to the surface are black and slimy, filled with water and animal matter called "gurry." Several days are required for the "gurry" to run off, when the sponges are dead. They are then squeezed out with the hands and strung on lengths of coarse twine, to be sold at auction by weight. The largest market is at Key West.

How to Choose Calico.

In choosing calico note well the appearance of the selvedge and remember that the straighter and more even the selvedge the better the quality of the calico. White calico owes its purity to bleaching powders, which have a destructive effect on the fibers of the calico.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Monday, June 18th

In order that the boys of Hancock County and the State of Iowa might have the privilege of the Y. M. C. A., when they respond to the call of the Colors, a county wide one-day campaign for $2,000 will be conducted on Monday, June 18th. The campaign in Hancock county is part of a state wide effort to raise $175,000 in twenty days. Citizens of the county have responded most loyally and in every town committees have met and have agreed to make a systematic and thorough canvass of their territory on the day set for the effort.

At a meeting held in this community, Paul Greismer and Arthur Wellemeyer were chosen to select the men who will raise the apportionment for Ell and German townships. Quite a number of men will assist and will make up the teams that will put the matter through successfully on or before Monday. Seventy counties in Iowa have already raised their apportionment in the past two weeks; Wright county having contributed forty $25.00 subscriptions and a total of $4,000 in their canvass.

Literature has been mailed out and the newspapers of the county are lending their united support to the movement.

The following is a letter from Henry C Wallace, editor of Wallaces Farmer:

To the Citizens of Hancock County:

Before snow flies, probably thirty to fifty thousand Iowa boys will be in army training camps. If the war should continue, an equal number will be called out every six months.

The wastage of war begins in the training camp. Our boys will be under conditions very different from those at home. They will be surrounded by demoralizing influences of camp life. They will be exposed to all sorts of temptations, under circumstances which make it doubly hard for them to resist.

The business of the Army Y. M. C. A is to alleviate the discomforts of camp and army life, and to look after the moral and spiritual welfare of the men. It furnishes them a place in which they can read and write and rest. It looks after their mail. It provides wholesome amusements. It cheers the homesick. It helps the men to fight the beastly temptations that beset them on every hand. It is the one organization through which the people at home can work effectively for their boys in camp. The Army Y. will find and help your boy wherever he may be in the army or navy service

Iowa people are called upon to raise, during the month of June, the sum of $150,000, with which to finance Iowa's share of the Army Y. work. Every county is expected to do its share in this, because every county will have boys in the camps. If the war should continue long, more money will be needed; but it is estimated that $150,000 will take care of the necessary expenses of the work for the first year. There is no money which the people of Iowa can spend that will bring such great returns as this.

It is vital to the people of Iowa that their boys come back clean, wholesome men—physically, morally, spiritually. The welfare of future generations depends upon this. Therefore, every citizen should feel it a privilege to contribute liberally to the financial support of the Army Y. M. C. A., the only organization which is carrying on this life-saving work.

Very truly,
HENRY C. WALLACE

KNIPP—WILKINS

On Wednesday, June sixth, Miss Nellie Wilkins and Tony Knipp were united in marriage at the Catholic church in Goodell.

Only near relatives, and a few intimate friends of both parties witnessed the ceremony. Charlie McGuire was best man and Miss Mabel Wilkins, a sister of the bride, was bride's maid.

The bride wore a white silk crepe de chine dress, and a long white veil, and the groom wore blue serge.

Both these young people are well known here, the bride having taught in the rural schools in this vicinity. The groom is an industrious young farmer.

They have gone to housekeeping on the John Rust farm northwest of Goodell.

Disloyalty

Any citizen of the United States who by work, act or deed does not support this country in time of war or in time of trouble is disloyal and should be dealt with accordingly. If this country is good enough to live in and good enough to make money in, it is good enough to be defended and upheld. The person who will accept its hospitality, its protection of both life and property, and then will not uphold it to his utmost, is an ingrate and is not worthy of its protection. It is the unqualified duty of every citizen to be governed by the theory: "My country, may she be right, but my country right or wrong." Our country is now at war and the man who now stands around and whines and condemns this country and says this trouble might have been settled without going to war, is guilty of disloyalty and treasonable utterances. The man who claims the protection of this government in massing riches and raising his family in peace and security and then will traduce the land that gave him birth or citizenship, is a traitor and deserves the fate of such. It is the duty of every loyal citizen to see that no copperhead or traitor is given aid or comfort in times like these. The Government has taken the precaution to remove all employes of this class from government works and it is as much the duty of every corporation or individual to remove the same class of employes from their service. If a landlord finds that he is harboring a traitor or pro-German on one of his farms it is his duty to remove him as soon as he can and turn his farm over to a true American citizen or a loyal foreigner. Why should this country harbor disloyalty? Turn all these fellows in, then confiscate their property and transport them as soon as the war is over. It is your duty and my duty to watch the actions of all suspects and as soon as anything tangible develops report the same to the secret service department and they will be taken care of at once.—Corwith Hustler.

HOW MUCH IS LIBERTY WORTH TO YOU?

This is a question that every American should ask himself or herself. For generations we have boasted of our love of liberty. We have called our country "the land of the free and the home of the brave." It has been proved in other wars that this was not a mere empty boast by our fathers and our forefathers. But the question of how much is liberty worth to this generation has not yet been fully answered.

It is going to be answered nobly by those who serve under the colors. Many of them will answer with their death. It is going to be answered, and answered clearly by others who serve their country as best they may. It is going to be answered by others still who, unable to render personal service, have yet furnished their Government the means to prosecute the war.

The number of subscribers to the Liberty Loan Bonds is going to be an index of the love of liberty to the American citizenry of to-day. The list of Liberty Loan Bond holders is going to be a directory of the patriots of America.

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But, at least, we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease-carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also, you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

In Siberia the success of co-operative butter making, which started in 1894-95, is attributed entirely to the formation of butter workers mutual guaranty societies of "artels," and the movement spread subsequently to the Vologda and Archangel governments in European Russia. The groupings into unions was for a long time opposed by the government—the first union having been sanctioned in 1901. But it was not until 1911 that these unions received powers to carry out their natural financial operations In that year the Moscow People's bank was formed with 1,327 credit societies as shareholders. This bank has since become the most important organization for financing agricultural machinery purchases, for the sale of agricultural produce and of the cottage and kustarny manufactures. In other branches cooperative societies have been formed for the purchase and distribution of agricultural machinery and implements. Attempts have also been made to organize the collection, transportation and sale of fruit, vegetables and eggs on a co-operative basis. In south Russia there are several co-operative flour mills, and a number of societies have been formed for the construction of country grain elevators; the largest elevators are being provided by the government.

Suffragists at the national headquarters in Washington will keep their colors before the public all summer. They have turned the front lawn into a garden, where the flowers will be purple, white and gold. At the side of the house they are stating a vegetable garden, on which they hope to raise enough to pay the rent and swell the campaign fund. And all the work will be done by women

If garden soil is heavy, or 'hungry," that is, harsh and lacking in humus, give it plenty of well rotted stable manure. Nothing could be better. If the soil is in excellent physical condition, bone meal with the addition of a little potash will supply the plant food necessary for any ordinary crop of plants or mere annual growth

IOWA TELEPHONE CO. COMPLETES BIG DEAL

Over $1,000,000 Involved in Purchase of 35 Independent Plants.

Webster City, Ia., June 10.—The Iowa Telephone company has bought out the Farmers & Merchants Telephone company of this city. Along with the Webster City plant, the Farmers & Merchants company also sold all its other plants to the Iowa company. The former concern owned some 35 plants over northwest Iowa, all of which are now in possession of the Iowa Telephone company.

This transfer involved one of the largest sales of public utilities ever consumated in this part of Iowa. The consideration is not known, but as the Webster City plant is valued at above $200,000, the 35 plants, large and small, ran well above $1,000,000. The central offices of the Farmers & Merchants company have been located at Storm Lake and, persumably, headquarters will remain there. The transfer will not mean any change in policy as to the conduct of the plants. The plants involved in Hamilton county are Webster City, Blairsburg, Williams and Jewell. R. L. Sterling will continue as manager of the Webster City plant.

FALSE RECORD CAME NEAR CAUSING IOWAN'S ARREST

LeMars, Ia., June 10.—Because his father gave oath falsely so that the parent could evade the payment of $6 in road taxes, 10 years ago, Ernest Henke narrowly escaped arrest today on a charge of evading the selective draft, according to the statements of Henke and his friends. Mr Henke lives at Akron. Word reached Sheriff Hugh Maxwell at LeMars, that Henke, although within the prescribed age limit, had not registered. The sheriff summoned Mr. Henke to LeMars. Henke brought friends who vouched for the truth of the statement that when Henke reached 21 years of age his father gave oath that the son was but 19. He did so with a view to evade paying poll tax for the son who was living with him. He claims that he is now 31 years of age, and that he can get records of the date of his birth from a point in South Dakota. His father is dead. He decided to register.

LEMARS GIVEN UNIFORM RAILWAY SWITCHING RATES

LeMars, Ia., June 10.—Substantial sums will be saved to LeMars shippers as the result of reciprocal shipping relations which have been arranged for this point by the Omaha and Illinois Central railroads, according to advices which have just been received by the LeMars Commercial club. The new switching charge, which will become effective July 10, will be a uniform rate of $2 for switching cars from one road to the other At present switching charges here are based on a five-mile haul. DES MOINES—Hill M Bell was reelected president of Drake university by a unanimous vote of the board of trustees for a period of five years. The enrollment of the school this year was 1,750, a gain of 235 over 1916.

ODEBOLT—The 15th annual banquet of the Odebolt High School Alumni association will be held in the Presbyterian church on Friday evening, June 22. As is the usual custom, after the banquet a dance will be held in the opera house.

ODEBOLT—Rev. C. J. Algott, of Keokuk, Ia., has been called to take the pastorate of the local Mission church, to succeed Rev. Mr. Johnson.

MASON CITY BOY IS MYSTERIOUSLY SLAIN

Seven-Year-Old Child Is Found Dead—No Marks of Violence on Body.

Mason City, Ia., June 8.—The body of Donald Flynn, 7 years old, who disappeared from here Tuesday, was found late yesterday 15 miles from Mason City. Apparently, the boy had been murdered.

The Flynn lad disappeared Tuesday afternoon, after attending a school rehearsal at a local theater.

No trace of him was found until his body was discovered on a pile of ties near Swaledale, more than 15 miles from his home, last night. There were no marks of violence on the corpse, other than a slight bruise upon one knee.

One theory advanced was that he was struck by an automobile and the body hidden by the frightened occupants of the car. Another is that he may have been killed by a degenerate. Lack of evidence is a drawback to either theory.

An investigation will be commenced at once and, if necessary, aid of the state will be asked to find out how the lad met death.

SOME IOWA CORN TO BE REPLANTED; HELP NEEDED

Primghar, Ia., June 8.—The planting of gardens has been considerably stimulated in O'Brien county by the general agitation, and the work of the volunteer food producers' movement among the boys and girls particularly. The county has very little land that is not first class agriculturally, and consequently it was pretty thoroughly cultivated last year. The general crop production will probably be a little gain this year over last year's high record. The chief obstacle is the lack here and there of adequate assistance. The rainy season has delayed work considerably, but crops have not suffered thus far, save that some corn may have to be replanted. The people and the farmers are awake to the great need of increased production and are responding to the call for every effort possible. Many of the school boys of the towns are already in the country at work on the farms.

"SEPTEMBER MORN" BARRED FROM THE ARMY AND NAVY

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—"September Morn" has been branded as an "alien enemy" by Uncle Sam.

The nude lady, who created a furore in art circles a year or two ago, has been barred from both the army and navy

Ed Claffey, 22 years old, of Washington, Ia., is a sorrowful witness to that fact.

When he attempted to enlist at the United States naval recruiting station Tuesday the examining physician discovered a portable art gallery on Claffey's right forearm. The artistic masterpiece was a tattooed "September Morn" and the candidate was rejected.

When United States army recruiting officers caught a glimpse of the "Tattooed Lady" they returned a similar verdict.

Claffey was compelled to register for conscription at the sheriff's office.

EX-PRESIDENT TAFT SEES LONG EXHAUSTIVE STRIFE

Ames, Ia., June 8.—William Howard Taft, former president of the United States, in delivering the commencement address to 525 graduates of Iowa State college last night, before a throng of 3,000 persons, declared the United States is engaged in a conflict with Germany, which may continue for years, and that it behooves people of this country to give up that "happy go lucky spirit."

The graduates from Woodbury county are as follows: Bachelor of arts, Irving J. Barron, Correctionville; Mabel Louberta Morgan, Sioux City. Bachelor of science, Evert Ostling, Sioux City. Bachelor of laws, Hughenden Clifford Harper, Sioux City. Doctor of dental surgery, William O'Neill, Correctionville. Graduates in pharmacy, Reinder Van Deest, Sioux City. Master of science, Arthur Ward Lindsey, Sioux City.

IOWA LOWLANDS FLOODED; CROP DAMAGE IS SERIOUS

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—Although the flood waters of the Skunk river are receding, thousands of acres of farm land today are still under water in Washington, Elkart and Franklin counties. The damage in this section is estimated at $50,000. Four-Mile creek, which expanded from a five foot stream into a body of water one-half mile wide, is going back to its banks. Many persons were rescued in the bottoms along the creek Atlantic, Ia., June 7.—The creeks in this section today are returning to their channels after several days of flood stage. L. H Lepper, a mail carrier on the Cumberland routs while delivering mail on Monday, was caught in a wall of flood water from the Turkey creek. He managed to cling to his wagon while the horses swam out of danger. A pouch of mail was lost and up to yesterday evening had not been recovered.

CORN AND SMALL CROPS NEED SUNSHINE GREATLY

Odebolt, Ia., June 8.—This locality has been showered with over three inches of rain within the past 36 hours. It is not too much if warm weather comes soon, but the continued low temperature is retarding the growth of small grain and corn. Garden truck is also backward and needs the sunshine. The indications are that there will be a bumper yield of fruit of all kinds in this locality.

ARREST OF 45 ITALIANS ORDERED BY GOVERNMENT

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—Italian coal miners at Centerville, Appanoose county, refused to register and the arrest of 45 of them has been ordered.

A sheriff's posse arrested 15 yesterday at the Strebeyville mine, near Centerville, and 30 more arrests are to be made at another mine today. The men at first threatened resistance, but those arrested made no trouble.

IDA GROVE—Registrations yesterday totaled 1,365, including 47 who registered as alien enemies. Only about 15 per cent of those registered claimed exemptions.

NEARLY 500 STUDENTS AT AMES HAVE QUIT SCHOOL

Ames, Ia., June 7.—Nearly 500 students have left Iowa State college since the declaration of war, according to E. W. Stanton, acting president. Of this number about 200 have enlisted in the federal fighting forces and the other 300 have entered agricultural and industrial fields.

NEWTON—Newton will be without gas for at least four weeks as a result of an explosion which wrecked the gas plant last night. W E. Carpenter, who was badly burned by the explosion, is in a critical condition.

HEAVY REGISTRATION IN IOWA YESTERDAY

About 200,000 Eligibles Signed Up—No Disturbances in Hawkeye State.

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—Approximately 200,000 young men of the ages prescribed by the draft law registered in Iowa yesterday. Indications are that there were very few slackers in the state. The federal census bureau yesterday gave out a statement of the number of eligibles expected to register in the larger cities of Iowa. In most instances the registration exceeded expectations.

The day was marked by patriotic demonstrations throughout the state. In most communities business suspended for part of the day at least and the event was made the occasion for celebrations and displays of various sorts.

Registration day was a source of patriotic inspiration as shown by the reports of the national guard recruiting stations throughout the state. It is believed now that the guard regiments are virtually up to war strength Naval and regular army recruiting also was stimulated.

Exemptions claimed range from 30 to 60 per cent throughout the state.

There was a minimum of opposition to the registration. At Blairsburg, near Webster City, a party of Frenchmen born in Alsace-Lorraine created a slight disturbance because they were forced to register as Germans, inasmuch as Alsace and Lorraine were held to be German territory at the time they were born.

CHEROKEE PHYSICIANS AND RAILWAY MEN CALLED OUT

Cherokee, Ia., June 8.— Ten men from the local train force of the Illinois Central have gone to Chicago to join the railroad division of the army that is to be sent to Europe to assist in the rebuilding and operation of the railroads. These men are all experienced in railroad work and will be a part of the large contingent that will be sent across the water at an early date Following is the list of those who left recently. F. Harmon, E. G. Jones, J. J. Callahan, M. S. Bentley, W. F. Bryant, R. O. Booth, A. J. Johnson, P. B. Mullen, F. E. Wright and D. E. Spear.

Several of the Cherokee physicians have been called to report for examinations. Dr. L. A Wescott, who is a member of the army medical reserve, has been summoned to report to Col. Banister, at Omaha. Drs. P B. Cleaves and O H Hall have been ordered to report to Des Moines to be examined All the members of the Cherokee County Medical society recently offered their services to the government, but so far these three men are the first to be called.

VAST DRAINAGE DONE BY RAIN AT COUNCIL BLUFFS

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 8 One of the most damaging rainstorms here in many years occurred last night following a long season of rain The street car system was put out of commission and over 2,000 people employed in Omaha are marooned here There is five feet of water on Broadway fronting the Northwestern railroad station. Several automobiles left standing in the street floated away and either overturned or lodged against telephone poles. Probably a score of bridges have been washed away on Indian creek, which traverses the city diagonally

MOUTHY SALESMAN FORCED TO SALUTE AMERICAN FLAG

Hampton, Ia., June 8 —A traveling salesman who includes this town in his list of calls dropped in yesterday. He told citizens what he thought the kaiser would do to the American army when it gets to Europe. The sheriff learned of his remarks and collared the mouthy one. The salesman was forced to salute an American flag, and the sheriff exacted a promise that he would be more careful about his remarks in the future.

VETERAN OFFICERS WILL TRAIN NEGRO RECRUITS

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—One hundred noncommissioned officers of the Tenth cavalry, U S. A., many of them warriors of the batle of Carrizal and all of whom saw 11 months' service with Maj. Gen. Pershing in Mexico, arrived in Des Moines yesterday.

They form the first contingent of negro soldiers who will be trained for officers' commissions in the new United States army at Fort Des Moines, beginning June 15. They came here from the border.

WORRIED OVER DRAFT, HE LEAPS DOWN SHAFT; DIES

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 8.—Unsettled in mind by the draft registration, Thomas H. Dawsey, aged 37, native American, threw himself under an elevator lift at the Douglas company starch works and was instantly killed

Total registration for the city was 3,958.

CHEROKEE COUNTY RAISES BIG SUM FOR ARMY RELIEF

Cherokee, Ia., June 8.—Reports from the army Y M. C. A. fund campaign indicates that the idea is being taken up with enthusiasm by the people of the county. Canvassing is still going on and there is about $1,000 subscribed. The county has been called upon to subscribe $1,500 as its share and the indications are that the full amount will be reached in a very short while.

MAN HELD AT ROCK RAPIDS ON ALIEN ENEMY CHARGE

Rock Rapids, Ia., June 8.—Otto Dewall is being held in the county jail awaiting orders from United States Marshal Moore. He is accused of having made statements derogatory to the United States government. He is reported to have said he would fight for Germany but not for the United States.

CHEROKEE—The Cherokee Woman's club will give a "Liberty bond ball," which will take place at the armory this evening. The club is improving every opportunity to do its share in the work of placing the Liberty bonds. The proceeds of the ball will be used to purchase a Liberty bond, which later will be given to the Red Cross society.

SHELDON—Seven thousand dollars was raised here in one hour yesterday for the army Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross at a public meeting addressed by Senator Saunders, of Council Bluffs. There were six $500 subscriptions. Over $100,000 has been raised for Liberty bonds. The campaign is still on.

CHEROKEE—Acting in accordance with orders from Adjutant General Logan, the recruits for Company M, of this city, are being detained at the armory and are being drilled daily from 8 to 11 in the morning and from 1 to 3:30 in the afternoon.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN TO STOP OUTBURSTS

Patriotic Celebrations Are Held Throughout the State of Iowa Today.

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—Iowa joined with all other states of the union today in taking toll of its manpower for the first conscripted army the United States will place on the battlefields of Europe.

Precautions had been taken in all the larger cities to guard against demonstrations in opposition to the selective draft. In Des Moines, the distribution of pamphlets urging refusal to register caused federal agents to take every precaution in watching the registration places.

Patriotic celebrations were planned in many cities and towns as evidence of the communities' whole hearted support of the federal government in the war against German imperialism. Among the towns where celebrations were held are Ackley, Waterloo, Iowa City, De Soto, Shenandoah, Collins and Des Moines.

Des Moines will celebrate with a parade in the evening, which will end at the Auditorium, where a patriotic rally will be held. Former United States Senator Lafayette Young will be one of the speakers.

Registration places opened at 7 a. m., and the tabulation of all male citizens between the ages of 21 and 31 years will continue until 9 p. m. Result of the day's registration will be ascertained as soon as possible after the polls have closed, and the figures will be rushed to the adjutant general's office at the state capitol here, and thence forwarded to Washington, where announcements regarding total registration will be made.

Efforts to estimate unofficially the total number registering today were discouraged by officials at Washington. The state census department, however, stated that the total number of persons subject to the initial draft in Iowa was 188,564, adding that "this may be exceeded if it turns out that there has been steady growth of the state or the drift from the farms has ceased."

BLUFFS GRADUATES TO BUY LIBERTY BONDS FOR GIFT

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 7.—Seniors at the Council Bluffs high school are a patriotic bunch, and at a meeting yesterday they rescinded the action previously taken by them for the purchase of a class gift for the school, and instead will make a purchase of Liberty loan bonds to help out the federal government in the present emergency, and present them to the schopl as a class gift

It had been intended to buy a handsome illuminated flag, of indestructible material, to float over the school house and to be lighted at night with electric lights. The class was very successful this year in raising funds for the class gift, and some $300 is available for that purpose

Three $100 Liberty bonds are to be the class gift now, however, and the class members, 112 in number, insist theirs is the first class of a high school class in the nation to subscribe for Liberty bonds as a present to their school.

QUAKER OATS COMPANY TO SPEND AN ENORMOUS SUM

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 7—A real estate deal between the city and the Quaker Oats company, completed today, assures the making of building improvements of an approximate value of $1,000,000 The company obtains title to a part of B avenue, about 80x180 feet, and a fractional lot occupied by the Central fire station, for a total consideration of $33,000.

The new work will include a great enlargement of storage capacity (probably 3,000,000 bushels), an important increase in the oats, corn and feed departments and the addition of flour mills having a daily capacity of 4,500 barrels. Work is already under way.

DRINK AND SOCIALISM ARE BLAMED BY IOWA SUSPECT

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 7.—Cal Free, a prominent stockman, of Vinton, Ia., was very quiet today, especially in regard to his opinion of the selective draft Free was released last night under $500 bonds to answer charges of making treasonable utterances.

He will be given a hearing before the September grand jury. He admitted making remarks, but said he had been drinking. "Henceforth I'll abjure both liquor and socialists, he told Commissioner Harwood, when arraigned.

BUGLE CALLS ELIGIBLES TO DUTY AT DES MOINES

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—Des Moines tumbled out of bed early this morning to register for service in the great national army. Guardsmen in uniform —modern Paul Reveres—rushed throughout the city in motor cars sounding bugle calls. The first call was sounded at 6.30. Those who failed to hear the first call were given a second a half hour later

CORNELL COLLEGE TO TAKE $10,000 OF LIBERTY LOAN

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 7.—Cornell college, of Mount Vernon, will buy $10,000 of Liberty bonds. This decision was reached by a unanimous vote of the board of directors last night.

The Liberty bond drive is on in Linn county in full blast today. Several hundred business men are canvassing the city. It was predicted the allotment of $2,000,000 worth of bonds would be oversubscribed before night.

FIRST ARREST IN STATE IS MADE AT DES MOINES

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—The first arrest in connection with the draft in Iowa was made here today. Arthur Fomani, an Austrian, 28 years old, was heard urging workmen not to register. He was arrested by city detectives who turned him over to federal agents.

ROCK RAPIDS—Albert Westendorf was kicked by a horse and almost instantly killed yesterday. He was training the horse, which refused to cross the Main street bridge. When Westendorf urged the horse with his whip the animal kicked him in the head and stomach. Death resulted 15 minutes after. He was 21 years old and unmarried.

CORRECTIONVILLE—Word was received here by telegram by Fremont Crowl from Huntsville, Ill., announcing the death of his soninlaw, Charles Ritz. Mr. Ritz was formerly of Washta, but had lived in Illinois for several years. He is survived by a wife and four small children. It is thought by relatives here that the body will be sent here or to Washta for burial, and the funeral probably will be held on Wednesday

LEMARS—Mr and Mrs. F W. Meis, residents of this county, celebrated their golden wedding yesterday at the home of their son, Antone Meis, two miles west in town.

JUNE REPORT BOOSTS WINTER WHEAT CROP

Prospective Yield of Winter and Spring Cereal Estimated 65[illegible] 000,000 Bushels, Showing Better Condition.

WINTER WHEAT IMPROVES

Experts Guess Total at 37[illegible] 000,000 Bushels Against 366,000,000 in Report for April.

Washington, D. C., June 9.—The prospective wheat crop of the United States this year was forecast today by the department of agriculture at [illegible] 000,000 bushels, combining a report estimate of the badly damaged winter wheat crop, and the first estimate of the new spring wheat crop, based on June 1 conditions. That compares with 640,000,000 bushels harvested last year and 806,000,000 bushels, the average crop for 1911-15.

Wheat Crop Improves.

Improved weather conditions during May and increased prospects of winter wheat indicated a crop of 373,000,000 bushels. The crop began this season under adverse conditions, 12,417,000 acres having to be abandoned because of the severe winter and other causes. April 1 conditions indicated a production of 430,000,000 bushels, but during that month growing conditions were so poor that the May 1 forecast was reduced to 366,116,000 bushels.

The increased spring wheat acreage placed at 19,039,000 acres, and the early start of this crop under excellent growing conditions, indicated a production of 282,000,000 bushels, compared with 158,142,000 bushels last year, 451,000,000 bushels in 1915 and 233,571,000 bushels, the average for the previous five years.

Winter Wheat 70 Per Cent.

Condition of the various crops June 1, was: Winter wheat, 70.9 per cent of a normal; spring wheat, 91.6; all wheat, 78.5; oats, 88.8, barley, 89.3; rye, 84.3; hay, 45.1; pastures, 85.6, apples 73.9; peaches, 60.5.

Condtiion of winter wheat by important states follows: Ohio, 86, Indiana, 69; Illinois, 64, Missouri 64 Nebraska, 60; Kansas, 60; Oklahoma, 69.

Condition of spring wheat by important states: Minnesota, 93, North Dakota, 86; South Dakota, 95

First announcement of acres planted follows: Spring wheat, 19,039,000 acres; all wheat, 46,692,000 acres Oats, 44,000,000 acres. Barley 8,379,000 acres.

Forecasts of production of the country's principal crops, as estimated today by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture from reports of conditions on June 1 follow:

ASK HOOVER ABOUT FOOD RULE PLA[illegible]

Washington, D. C., June 9.—Through the efforts of Representatives Kea[illegible] and Nolan a conference will be held tonight at the office of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor between Herbert C. Hoover and members of the labor group in congress. High officials of the American Federation of Labor will be present.

Mr. Hoover will be asked to explain that his proposed food administration is in the interest of consumer and producer and is going to reduce the artificial element in prices for the general public. He will be told that the plan is to serve the public and protect the producer and consumer against the food manipulator, and if the bill which is brought before both houses carries teeth in it with such an object in view, then the labor group and the forces of labor all over the country will get back of it and back of Mr. Hoover will be asked just what legislation he considers essential.

Indications are the meeting will strengthen the movement for food control legislation greatly. It is well known Hoover's purpose is to benefit both farmer and consumer.

President Charles D. Barrett, of the Farmers' Cooperative and Educational union, today had a long conference with Hoover. The organization has over 1,000,000 members. Mr. Barrett promised their support.

PERSHING AND STAFF IN LONDON

Received With Honors in British Port, They Are Government's Guests at London.

London, June 9 General Pershing and his party arrived early this morning at a port in Great Britain

The American general and hospital party were received by the officers of the port, the general commanding the district, and the mayor They were escorted from the dock by a band and a guard of honor

Guests of Government.

The expected arrival of General Pershing and his party had been kept a fairly close secret from the London public. Several floors of rooms in a hotel had been reserved for the American party and the hotel this morning was completely transformed by the placing of numerous sign boards, the installation of bureaus of information etc, designed to make the most efficient possible use of the place as temporary American army headquarters.

Leading Americans in London appeared on the scene early today with credentials as members of various committees

General Pershing and the 12 officers of his senior staff are to be guests of the British government at the Savoy

A British Port, June 9 Maj Gen. John J Pershing and his staff arrived here this morning after an uneventful trip. All the members of his party were in good health and spirits. Their ship was escorted into port by American destroyers

A hearty welcome was extended to the Americans by official representatives of the admiralty, the war office and the municipal authorities. The war office has assigned a brigadier general of the British army as aide to General Pershing He took up his duties with the commander in chief as soon as the latter reached here

Inspects Guard of Honor.

The formal welcome to the Americans on the landing stage was a stirring scene A guard of honor composed of royal Welsh fuciliers was drawn up at the landing with a regimental band. When General Pershing had been introduced to the military officer in command of the port he inspected the guard of honor while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The only civilians who met General Pershing were representatives of American press associations and newspapers. General Pershing said to the Associated Press

"The trip has been delightful, particularly the latter stages when we were escorted through the danger zone by our own destroyers Speaking for myself and my staff we are glad to be the standard bearers of America in this great war for civilization The opportunity of landing at a British port and the welcome we received are very significant and are deeply appreciated We expect in the course of a very short time to be playing our part which I am confident will be a very big part, on the western front"

General Pershing and his staff proceeded toward London.

Study French On Way.

The British delegation which welcomed the Pershing party on board the deck of the liner consisted of Rear Admiral Stileman, Lieutenant General Sir William Pitcairn Campbell and the lord mayor of Liverpool. The ship docked at 9 o'clock.

The voyage was a quiet one. The time was devoted by General Pershing and his staff to hard work with close applications on the study of French by all officers. During the trip there was a concert at which General Pershing made an address. There was great enthusiasm board when three American destroyers came up to act as escorts.

General Pershing arrived in London this afternoon He was welcomed by Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador, Lord Derby, secretary of state for war, Viscount French, cammanding the British home forces and other officials, including Lord Brooke, who will be attached to General Pershing's staff during his stay in England.

SAILED WEEK AGO.

Washington, June 9 —Major General Pershing, whose safe arrival in England is recorded in the foregoing disapteh had with him 198 officers, enlisted men and other attaches.

The party sailed more than a week ago without any publicity being given to their departure despite the fact that it was known to some American newspapers.

Reports from Paris, yesterday said sites for the camps of American troops had been selected Presumably General Pershing will inspect these and make complete arrangements for the reception of his troops.

SLAVS URGED BY PEASANTS TO FIGHT ON

Congress of Masses Appeals to the Russian Army to Defend Liberties Against Austro-Germans.

ARMY BADLY DEMORALIZED

Socialistic and Visionary Influences Block All Progress in War—Boast Won't Fight.

Petrograd, June 9.—Formal proposals for a separate peace have been instituted by the Austrian general, Roar. He authorized a delegation from each Austrian division on the front to go to Russia and propose such a compact, it is reported

Simultaneously news was received that a delegation of Austrians urging a conference with the workmen's and soldiers' council was already in session in Russia.

They were accompanied by delegates of Russian soldiers.

Orders have been issued to arrest them

Petrograd, June 9.—(Via London.)—The congress of peasants, in session here, adopted a resolution today calling upon the army to submit itself to discipline and defend revolutionary Russia. The congress affirms the duty of those it represents to defend the country energetically, and make every sacrifice to sustain the fighting strength of the army.

The text of the resolution adopted by the delegates of the peasants follows:

"The peasants aspire to an equitable peace without humiliating annexation or indemnity and with the right of each nation to dispose of itself. International relations and treaties should be submitted to the control of the peoples interested. Disputes should be settled by an international tribunal and not by force. The congress approves the union of workers and appeals to peasants of all countries to force their governments to renounce annexations and indemnities.

"The congress considers that it is its duty energetically to defend its country, recoiling before no sacrifice in order to sustain the fighting strength of the army and the struggle for the safety of the patrimony of the Russian people. The congress summons the army to submit itself to discipline and defend revolutionary Russia of peasants and workers. It grants its benediction to this war and will not forget the blood which has been shed."

Minister of War Kerensky has ordered that the resolution be read to all ranks of the army and navy.

Socialists Block War.

Petrograd, June 8.—Russia is hanging in the balance between czarism and nobism America and the allies must face the fact squarely Russia will not fight under the present circumstances. Still, there is a chance that order will come out of the governmental chaos, but there is nothing today to make its approach seem certain. No man strong enough to control the situation has yet grasped the Russian helm. Minister of War Kerensky, on whom all hopes centered, is working day and night despite ill health. He appears optimistic.

President Tscheize of the council of workmen's and soldiers' deputies, and his colleagues are the collective masters of Russia. They openly declare that during the present war Russia will not fight.

LIBERATES DISTRICT.

Petrograd, (via London), June 9.—M. Krustaloff-Nosar, who was president of the executive committee of the workmen's council, at the time of the Russian revolution in 1905, has proclaimed the complete autonomy of the Pereyaslav district of Little Russia, according to a telegram received here today from Poltavia. He has refused to permit the district to send supplies to the army.

The provisional authorities and the council of soldiers and workmen's delegates have sent representatives to the Pereyaslav district with a detachment of troops.

Krustaleff-Nosar was regarded as the brains of the 1905 revolutionary movement. He is the son of a poor carpenter and obtained his education under most adverse circumstances.

It was through the efforts of Krustaleff-Nosar that the workmen's council was created. In November, 1906, he and 14 other leaders of the council were tried on a charge of treason and sentenced to exile in Siberia. He exercises immense power over the Russian masses.

WAR SECRET HINTED AT BY HARDING

Washington, June 8.—Senator Harding, Ohio republican, declared in the Senate today that lack of public confidence was retarding subscriptions to the Liberty loan and in the interest of unity, senators were withholding information which "might call" for investigations and shake the confidence of the American people in the conduct of the war.

WORKS MACHINE GUN AS HE HOLDS UP HAND AND SHOUTS HIS SURRENDER

London, June 8.—"At Langnicourt," said a wounded Australian, "the Germans charged in seven lines. God knows how long we went on killing them. It was butt ends and bombs and anything else that came handy After a bit, Fritz lost his head and began to squeal. To show what they're like, I killed one who had a hand above his head and the other working a machine gun, and he was shouting, 'kamerad' all the time. We wrecked four divisions that day."

BIG COAL OPERATOR IS "DRAFTED" INTO FEDERAL SERVICE

Francis S. Peabody.

Francis S. Peabody of Chicago, one of the country's leading coal operators, received what he termed a command from Secretary Lane to take charge of the coal situation in America. Consequently Mr. Peabody has moved his family to Washington and turned over his business affairs to others in order to act as chairman of the committee on coal production of the council of national defense. A part of the committee's function will be to supply coal to the navy at a reasonable price.

DREAD OF YANKEE KEEPS MEXICO OUT

Newspaper Warns Against Her Giving Even Moral Support in War to Entente.

Juarez, Mex., June 9.—The new Pan-American race, "semibarbarous, but vicious," is called to occupy the first place in the world after the present war, La Republica, a daily newspaper published here declared in its issue yesterday.

The editorial condemned suggestions by American newspapers that Mexico should give its moral support to the allies in the war. "In the first place our ports would be occupied by Yankees and our railroads controlled by them," the editorial added.

"Then our petroleum, mines, cotton and lumber would be under their exclusive dominion. Soon they would judge our moral help unecessary and demand material help, the contingent of blood.

"And after the war, the American flag would have 31 more stars, the article continued. "Our Mexico would be annexed or protected and they would make it a materialist and gluttonous hybred. But this will not happen. We, the Mexicans, have agreed to remain neutral. Iw we take part in the war, it will be our suicide."

HAYTI'S DIPLOMAT "FIRED" BY BERLIN

Handed Passports When He Protests Against Ruthless Sub Warfare.

Amsterdam, June 9.—The Haiten charge d'affaires at Berlin has been handed his passports, according to a dispatch from the German capital. The Hatien diplomat had previously presented a note protesting against unrestricted submarine warfare and demanding compensation for losses caused to Haitien commerce and life.

OLDER MEN WANTED FOR SECOND TRAINING CAMP

Washington, June 9.—Only about 15,000 men will be called in the second series of eight officers training camps to be held from August 27 to September 26, Adjutant General McCain announces. Forty thousand entered the first series of samps.

The department today also announced the quota allowed each state in the camps. Application blanks may be obtained after June 15.

Emphasizing the department's wish to obtain men above 31 years of age, or men of special ability, General McCain said:

"Since the special object of these camps is to train a body of men fitted to fill the more responsible positions of command in the new armies, every effort will be made to select men of exceptional character and proven ability in their various occupations. The quota allowed each state and the places at which examination officers, to whom applications should be sent will be stationed, follow:

Minnesota, 361, Fort Snelling; Iowa, 355, Fort Des Moines; North Dakota, 113, Fort Lincoln; South Dakota, 109, Sioux Falls; Nebraska, 260, Fort Crook.

ELEVEN SETS OF TWINS IN MILITIA COMPANY

Hutchinson, Kan.—Company E, Second Kansas Infantry, all of the members of which live here, has 11 sets of brothers enlisted, including twins, Albert H. and Alfred H. Truitt, who look so much alike that Albert wears a distinguishing button on his coat so that they can be told apart.

According to the Antwerp correspondent of the Handelsblad, the German authorities at Ghent have issued an administrative order granting permission to the city of Ghent for the erection of a dog slaughter house. One of the regulations provides that no dog butcher may supply more than about two pounds of dog meat a week to each family. In the opinion of the correspondent quoted, there is no doubt this example soon will be followed in other towns of Belgium, for want is increasing day by day,

CAPITAL OF SALVADOR IS DESTROYED

Huge Mountain, at the Foot of Which City Stood, Explodes When Earth Tremors Begin—Fires Started.

LONG REPORTS DISASTER

After His Message to Washington Was Filed Greatest Destruction Is Presumed to Have Occurred.

San Juan Del Sur, Nicaragua, June 8.—San Salvador, the capital of the republic of Salvador, with a population of more than 60,000, has been totally destroyed, according to a dispatch from San Miguel, Salvador.

A dispatch from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, says that in addition to the wiping out of San Salvador the towns of Quezaltipeque, Nejapa, Suchichoto, Paisnal, Armenios and Mejicanos also were destroyed. Mojicanos was a suburb of San Salvador.

At 9:50 o'clock this morning there was still no communication between San Salvador and Tegucigalpa.

San Salvador has been cut off from wire communication by the disturbance of an earthquake, apparently acompanied by volcanic action .

At 7 o'clock last night the telegraph operator at Tegucigalpa, Honduras, reported that the operator at San Salvador had informed him that earthquakes had been felt there. The shocks were also felt at Tegucigalpa, where the operator at 7:45 p. m. lost communication with San Salvador on all wires.

From Sensuntenpeque, in north central Salvador, flames were seen rising, apparently from a volcano in the neighborhood of San Salvador.

The town of Santa Teola also has been destroyed, according to this report. Residents of San Salvador are camping in the streets and parks. At the time the report was sent it had been raining heavily for five hours. The disaster is supposed to have been caused by an eruption of the volcano of San Salvador, at the foot of which the city is situated.

An operator who reached the edge of the destroyed zone reported at 9:20 o'clock this morning that San Salvador was in ruins and that everything within a radius of 30 miles had been destroyed by the earthquake.

PART OF CITY DESTROYED.

Washington, D. C., June 8.—Dispatches from American Minsiter Long at San Salvador, sent at 9 o'clock last night, while the volcano of San Salvador was erupting, said part of the city had been destroyed by fire, but that it was under control.

Great damage was done.

Reports Shocks, Eruption.

The dispatch said that about 6:35 p. m., yesterday severe earth shocks began and continued until 8:45 with varying degrees of intensity.

At about 8:45 the volcano of San Salvador began to belch forth fire and smoke, apparently on the side toward Quetzaltepeque. There was later one very severe shock, but the tremors of the earth continued with decreasing violence. At the same time there was a steady shower of dry ashes falling over the city.

Greater Damage Later.

The report says damage to the American legation building will render it uninhabitable, but that all records are safe. It adds that all other city property appeared practically untenable. The entire central business section had been destroyed by fire, which, at the time of the telegraphing, seemed to be under control. No deaths were reported in the minister's dispatch as being known at that hour. It is quite possible ahat either volcanic eruption, fire or earthquakes might have wrought greater damage after the sending of his dispatch.

San Salvador is about three miles southeast of the volcano of San Salvador and is the seat of government of the smallest but most densely populated of the republics of Central America.

More than 200 persons have lost their lives in San Salvador in the last two years as the result of earthquakes.

The city, which was founded about 1525, is located about 120 miles southeast of the town of Guatemala and is on a small stream which flows into the Pacific ocean. The city is connected by rail with Acajutland la Libertad and contains a large university, the national palace, the national library and an astronomical observatory and a botanical garden. The population of the capital is 64,000.

WASHINGTON FEELS QUAKE.

Washington, June 8.—Seismographs of Georgetown university last night recorded a severe earth disturbance about 2,000 miles from Washington. First tremors were recorded at 7:57:30 o'clock. The maximum shocks were recorded at 8:07 p. m. and the disturbance ended at 9:25 p. m. It was thought the quake was in the same region as that recorded several days ago.

WAR COUNCIL TO RULE U.S. IN 30 DAYS

Employers and Labor Leaders Say Food Question Is Serious —Predict Strikes Unless Prices Fall.

UP TO U. S. TO WIN WAR

Neither of Belligerents Has Left Punch Required for Knockout Blow, Washington Leaders Learn.

Washington, June 9.—Industrial leaders and employers of labor say that the food question is serious and that wide spread labor troubles are inevitable if prices continue to rise.

Direct action on the matter is attributable to the lack of confidence of the cabinet and the national defense officials and associates.

In both of these bodies the need for a small war council is evident. Such a council, it was argued, should consist of three men, free from business and other routine, with authority to render final decisions as is done by Great Britain. A prediction that a council will be named before 30 days was made today.

Hope for an allied victory in 1917 has gone glimmering, according to best informed officials. This frank admission was made today. The American officials predicted the probability of a three-year war. Conceit has given way to conception.

The probability of landing the knockout blow to Germany has been a little overestimated.

Washington Gets Jolt.

The frank admission of the foremost military men is that the entire plans of the allies have been changed by the Russian upheaval. This has given Washington a jolt. In some quarters it has developed serious worry. In others, especially in the council of national defense there is a feeling of assurance. That the defeating of the Teutons, the success or failure of the war, is squarely up to the United States, is admitted.

A number of the strongest men in Washington, some members of the government, are giving their entire time and service to the work of preparing the Americans for the war. The feeling is strong here that public opinion in the United States has been chloroformed and facts withheld, the knowledge of which must become general, before America's plans are perfected.

The feeling is developing that the importance of American military aid has been overestimated.

Entente Allies Exhausted.

The big lessons are no longer made by armies. They are made by entire nations, made by coordinated forces of capital and labor, industry and agriculture, each sacrificing private gains with the same willingness that the military department is sacrificing men, it is pointed out.

It is no longer a secret that the Russians as an offensive power are out of the military plans for a year at least and probably for good. Nothing but the rise of a Russian Napolean or a government dictator can save the Slav situation. Neither is a likely contingency. France is past her fighting stage and can no more than hold her own. England, while still on upgrade has almost reached her highest point, and economically she is on the down grade.

Germany Too Weak.

It seems possible that in Germany the condition is equally serious and that neither side has the reserve strength to give the knock out blow.

The final victory, if it comes at all, must come from America. America has not yet awakened to the gravity of the situation, officials say. Interviews with representatives and senators on mail from their constituents, clearly disclose the fact that the food question must be settled.

BIG U. S. SHIP SUNK BY SUB

Paris, June 9.—The torpedoing of a big American steamer and the shelling and sinking by the submarine of the small boats in which the steamer's crew were escaping is reported by the survivors of the French three-masted sailing ship, Jeanne Cordonnier. The French ship was torpedoed in the English channel on May 31, and the crew reached Havre in open boats.

They declare they witnessed the destruction of the American ship after their own vessel had been sunk.

The foregoing dispatch, indicating a disaster to the Scotland, was filed in London after a dispatch, which was delayed in transmission, and had not been received late this afternoon. The steamship referred to doubtless is the Red Star liner of that name, 560 feet long and 12,018 tons gross. She was formerly the Vaderland and was engaged in the trans-Atlantic passenger service, but was commandeered by the British government for war purposes.

WANTS OF WAR WIDOWS.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 9.—Treatment of the families of soldiers was taken up today by the committee of social problems of war, at the 44th national conference of charities and corrections. Routine business occupied the main body. Dr. Edward Devine of New York, will lead the war problems debate tonight.

CHURCHILL NOT YET NAMED.

London, June 9.—The announcement of the appointment of Col. Winston Spencer Churchill as chairman of the British air board now appears to have been premature, if not incorrect. Lord Cowdrey has not resigned.

TOLL OF THE PLUNGER.

Paris, June 8.—The Argentine sailing ship Oriana was sunk by a submarine in the Mediterannean Wednesday. The crew was saved by a French ship. The submarine first shelled the ship and then sent men on board who fixed bombs in her hold and exploded them, sending the ship to the bottom.

He who loathes war, and will do everything in his power to avert it, but who will, in the last extremity, encounter its perils, from love of country and of home—who is willing to sacrifice himself, and all that is dear to him in life, to promote the weal-being of his fellowman, will ever receive a worthy homage.—Abbott.

THIS MOTHER GAVE HER ALL

Touching Incident of Sacrifice on the Altar of Her Country's Need.

One of the touching incidents of General Lyon's march to Wilson creek was that of a Tennessee mother bringing her little boy to the captain's tent and offering him for the service of his country. The boy's father had been killed in battle and the mother and boy were alone in the world. The bright eyes and fine bearing of the little chap, for he was scarcely thirteen years of age, caught the eye of the captain and he asked what the boy could do. "I can drum," he said proudly stretching himself to his full height. And he could as the fifer soon found out as he played "The Flowers of Edinborough," a most difficult piece to follow with the drum. "Madam, I'll take the boy," said the captain. The mother kissed her boy and turning to the captain said: "Bring him back captain," and to the boy she said as she placed her hand on his eager little head, "God bless you, my boy. You're all I have left, but I give you to my country, and drum right bravely for the boys in blue." During the heavy fatiguing marches from Rolla to Springfield it was amusing to see the long-legged fellow wading through the mud with our little drummer hero mounted on his [illegible]. During the fight at Wilson [illegible] the cheery fife and brave drum beat time for the soldier boys in battle. The fight led down into a deep ravine and it was not long before our drummer boy was in the midst of the fray. That night the detail on guard duty near the ravine thought he heard [illegible] drum. He [illegible] he asked [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] lad. He followed the sound of the drum and soon found our hero seated on the ground with his back against a tree and his faithful drum hanging on a bush. He dropped his drum sticks as the guard came up and exclaimed: "Oh, corporal I am so glad to see you. Give me a drink," and as he turned to go to get him water, he pleaded: "Oh, don't go and leave me. I can't walk." His little legs had been shot off at the knees. Looking closer he discovered a dead soldier lying in the grass, but evidently before he died he had put a tourniquet about the stumps of the little legs. The brave lad was carried into camp and given surgical attention, but the brave little spirit went out into the brightness and glory of a duty well done and a country served even unto death.

Meaning of a Mole.

A mole on the right corner of the mouth indicates to a man that he will have good fortune through his individual efforts. Whatever walk in life he chooses, he will be successful. To a woman it indicates that she will have plenty of money and be very much beloved. A mole on the left side of the mouth indicates for both men and women a commonplace life, one in which neither good nor ill fortune will predominate.

First Successful Plant Nursery.

The first successful plant nursery in America was that of Robert Prince of Long Island and was continued for five generations, or a period of 130 years, by members of the Prince family. It was started in 1725, visited by President George Washington and in 1796 protected by the British General Howe with an armed guard.

"CALAMITY"

By HENRY JAMISON.

She was a tiny, bedraggled bundle of fur when Joe brought her to the linen room where Elizabeth Matteson was folding linen. She was the head nurse and Joe was the elevator boy. He showed her the kitten's injured paw and she stroked the mewing object pityingly. Her brown eyes were very soft.

"What can we do with her, Joe? I'm sure the superintendent wouldn't allow a kitten in the ward."

"But, nurse, the men would hide it when the superintendent comes. See, the poor little creature is trying to play."

So it was that Miss Matteson's scruples were overcome. The broken paw was bandaged and Jim, the man in the diet kitchen, made the kitten a bed behind the [illegible]. Joe named her [illegible] and [illegible] view [illegible] her [illegible].

Calamity at once entered upon a series of [illegible] that [illegible] her worthy of a better name. The first [illegible] fell into the soup tureen. Fortunately it was not scalding hot. The ward had been served but the men in the diet kitchen [illegible] Saturday.

Calamity [illegible] her [illegible] do her best [illegible] The bathroom [illegible] days [illegible] dispatch [illegible] chute. The housekeeper however restored her to her possessions. Not long after [illegible] bath [illegible], which was [illegible]. Artificial respiration was resorted to before she was [illegible].

Calamity [illegible] were not [illegible] during [illegible] opened [illegible] and then [illegible] paper she received [illegible] and [illegible] allowing the patients to open those windows. Then the youngest interne suggested experimenting with rosin and castor oil. They finally produced a sticky fly paper that answered every purpose. [illegible] to [illegible] ity [illegible]. The man in the dietary [illegible] over the amount of alcohol required by the ward at that time. Whether it was while they were experimenting with the mucilage or the [illegible] Calamity was [illegible] to [illegible].

[illegible] was alone in a private room.

Going in [illegible] day to [illegible] alarmed when [illegible] open eyes [illegible] bed he [illegible] nurse. [illegible] was following her he asked "Is that your kitten? Will you put her here beside me?"

As the nurse turned to pick up Calamity the animal [illegible] a blow that felled her to the floor. Then springing from his bed he snatched up a wooden tray and raised it over [illegible].

At that moment Pat, the [illegible] who followed him about the hospital appeared in the corridor and at sight of her enemy Calamity ran clawing and spitting straight up the madman's back. He was clad in a single thin garment and her claws brought the blood wherever they touched him. He was so startled that he dropped the tray.

Just then the youngest interne appeared on one of his numerous visits to the ward. He overpowered the crazy patient and, calling for help, soon had him firmly tied.

Miss Matteson lay like one dead upon the floor. When the other nurses arrived the youngest interne was trying to revive her. For a week her life was in danger.

It was a day of rejoicing in the ward when she was able to resume her duties. The superintendent's heart had melted sufficiently to allow the presence of Calamity in the ward and the latter greeted Miss Matteson with a huge red satin sash, which gave her the appearance of an animated piece of millinery, this decoration of hers having been supplied by Jim and Joe.

Fourteen thousand one hundred and fifty dollars in Liberty bonds was subscribed by the citizens of Franklin township, Marion county recently, nearly $2,000 more than the quota assigned to that township. This was done on their own accord and without waiting for the campaigners to call upon them.

The weather recently has been almost constantly rainy. The temperature has been low, and corn is not making rapid growth. Small grains seem to have made better progress and with warmer weather soon all crops will be in good condition. The soil is thoroughly soaked, but it is thought that there has been none too much rain if warm weather comes soon. Garden stuff is growing fast.

Donald, the seven-year-old son of Mrs. Joe Flynn of Mason City, who wandered from home recently, was found dead in a pile of railroad ties along the Great Western tracks nineteen miles from home. It was at first thought that he had met with foul play, but there were no marks of violence on the body and the authorities have concluded that death was due to exposure.

Manchester has what is thought to be the only country club in the United States, organized by the business men for the sole purpose of cultivating potatoes. Five acres of land was donated by the president of the local Commercial club to the members of that organization with the condition that it be used only for the production of some useful crop and that none of the labor be hired.

The first batch of regular army noncommissioned officers from the two negro regiments, the Tenth cavalry, and the Twenty-fourth infantry have enrolled in the negro officers' training camp at Fort Des Moines. These men are for the most part members of the Tenth cavalry and were in the troops that were engaged in the famous Carrizal massacre in Mexico, where they won much glory for themselves and the United States.

The organization also voted $100 to go to Washington, D. C., as the first payment on an ambulance that is being sent to France by the national organization. The purpose of the association in regard to the morals of the training camps was wired to President Wilson and to the Iowa congressmen.

Must Co-Operate With Others.

In active life a man works at the side of others. He has to consider them as well as himself. He has to check his impetuosity, curb his imperiousness, listen to objections and suggestions—provided he wishes to round out his career successfully. He must be content to give and take, to be indifferent to cross-currents, to know and feel at all times that however important he may be he is one among others of power, of ability, of humors. —Boersianer

Only a Diamond.

Columbus people stopped in amazement when they saw an unusual window display at a jewelry store of this city. In the center of the window, in a plush case, was a large diamond. On one side, also in a plush case, was a piece of genuine soft coal and on the other side, mounted in silk and plush, was a genuine egg. "This is a mere diamond," said a card over the precious stone in the center.—Indianapolis News.

Armenia.

Armenia was the seat of an independent kingdom at different times long before the Christian era, though frequently at war, sometimes under foreign rule and with an unstable government. It was one of the first countries into which Christianity was introduced. There is no record of its frequent and repeated changes of government and rulers. For many years past it has been under Turkish rule.

She Kissed the Waiter.

Two young women who had the table d'hote habit, sat alone tonight in a red-ink establishment in the Forties. "I was silly last night," moaned one. The Man Who Forgot

CHAPTER XXVIII—(Continued.)

As he passed, the crowds on the sidewalks became storming, roaring, frantic lines of white. Ribbons and handkerchiefs filled the air. It was as if, at his coming, the sea of humanity on each side rose toward him like the white crest of a wave. As far as he could see the avenue was fringed to right and left with the rising and falling solid lines of white. The tumult of the applause was like the roar of the sea. To his ears the roar of the men's voices dominated, and now and then the shrill bravos of the women cut through the heavier tone.

They cheered him because he had done a great thing. He had called the country to Washington, and it had come. They felt this—felt, even, that he had called each one of them personally, and that, while their great motive had been their hate of whisky, his voice had been the one to unite them. They had secured their places to look at him, and would fall in lines as the procession passed them.

Every few yards he bowed to right and to left, his clean-cut, wiry figure bending gracefully from the waist. Now and then, passing a high building whose windows swarmed with humanity, he waved his gauntleted hand. He was smiling, and, somehow, so vibrant was his spirit, so intense his emotion, that the men and women, who lined the pavements persuaded themselves that he smiled at each of them in turn. There was about him nothing of theatric He rode down that long lane of thundering applause, a strong man, a brilliant personality, doing simply well the thing he had planned to do, carrying to fruition the great dream that had been his—the dream at which many had sneered at first, the dream which millions now loved

Twenty yards behind him were the two bishops in a carriage and behind them five hundred little girls in white After that came the apparently endless line of marching men and women—the singing clubs, delegations from various states, companies of men, troops of women And, when the end of the line came, all those who had stood on the sidewalks fell in

He led them to the right of the peace monument and up the roadway on the right hand side of the capitol, halting on the east plaza. So nicely had the thing been planned that the marches from North Capitol street flowed into the grounds on the west front as the agitator's division had occupied the east plaza and the surrounding territory. Those from the east joined the agitator, and those from the south went to the west of the grounds.

On the east side a great band played hymns, and the people sang On the west side a singing club sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." Back farther, on the edges of the crowd, other bands played.

The agitator dismounted on the plaza, and, going back to the carriage, escorted the two bishops to the top of the east steps on the House end of the building. There, at the front of the stand, among senators, representatives, and men and women who had spent years, some of them a lifetime, in the fight for prohibition, the venerable Bishop Rexall took his seat. Smith, leaving him, went with Bishop Fraydon through the building to the west front.

There were to be no speeches.

"On that day," Smith had said weeks before, "we will pray to God and command congress."

There was no program, save the bishops were to offer prayer, and the people were to sing and to stand there, a commanding army enveloping the home of the government, until they saw the sign that what they asked had been granted. The sign to be the running of a huge white ribbon to the top of the flagpost over the House end of the building.

In the line that followed Smith a fat man had ridden alone in a carriage. It was Vetter.

He was far enough to the front to catch the thunder of applause that greeted Smith and to watch the glow the leader's passing had left in the faces of the thousands on the sidewalks. There was upon his face, also, a glow.

"How they love him!" he thought. "It is worth living to have seen this."

He, like the others, loved him. That was, he reflected, the secret of the agitator's great gift of leadership. The man's spirit had reached out and charmed a nation.

CHAPTER XXIX.

John Smith paced to and fro in Crawdlor's committee rooms. After escorting Bishop Fraydon to the west side of the capitol, he had gone back into the building, and, taking an elevator, had reached the subway that leads from the capital proper to the building occupied by the offices and committee rooms of most of the representatives. Walker, who had been close to him ever since he had arrived at the east plaza, had protested.

"No," the agitator had answered, "this is the proper thing to do. This is a demonstration of the strength of prohibition sentiment in this country. There are friends of mine in the crowd. In their excitement some of them might be tempted to try to make it a personal triumph of mine. That would not do. You know it wouldn't."

For that reason he had effaced himself from the scene.

The room in which he waited the result Crawlor's motion to have the House pass the national prohibition measure faced the inner court of the big building from the first floor on the south side. He had opened one of the big windows and, even at that distance, with the other side of the huge structure towering between him and the vast throng, he could hear faintly the bands and the singing There was upon his face a shadow of the smile he had worn while riding down the avenue He felt nothing but supreme confidence in the outcome. The weariness he had known for the past few days had fallen from him He was at his best, brave brilliant, tuned to the top of his wonderful energy

Suddenly the singing and the noise of the bands stopped as if the great volumn of noise had been cut by the stroke of a knife. He knew what that meant, the dead silence. Crawlor had risen at his place in the House and put the motion, and, at a signal, the two bishops, holding their hands aloft, had begun their prayers for its passage.

He stood by the window- silence all about him save for the plashing of the big fountain in the center of the courtyard. He knew, as well as if he had seen it, the tremendous effectiveness of those prayers—the bared heads of the thousands of men, the bowed heads of the thousands of women, the quiet of the children.

The singing began afresh.

He stood and watched the fountain, a tall column of water moved slowly by the breeze until it looked like a big, new flower hanging in the air. He thought of the figure of a woman swaying in a doorway like a reed moved by the flow of cold and heavy waters. Where was she at that moment? How had it gone with her? He wondered if there was in her hear one-half the fierce hunger for love that he felt. He had not seen her since that day in her home when the Leslie woman had told her story. But he knew that she waited for him, expected to see him that evening. Walter had brought him that message from her.

And yet, there was the immutable fact: he could not claim her, had no right to permit her to come him. When could he throw off the chaims that bound him? Would he even know his own past? His thoughts went to Vetter. Yes; he would go back to Vetter at once and take up again the weary, heart breaking work of trying to find something, some light, however faint, to pierce the darkness behind him. If only Vetter could!

He threw back his shoulders with a swift movement and looked up to the blue sky and laughed.

"Vetter can! he said to himself. "Vetter must! Vetter will! It will come right! It must."

The corridor door was flung open, and Waller rushed in. Enthusiasm at last had him by the throat. He even had forgotten his cane.

"Old man," he shouted, "it's marvellous, immense! I never saw anything like it. You've got 'em—got 'em sure!"

"Give me the news," Smith demanded swiftly.

"They've just started to call the roll."

"How was Crawdlor? Was he very effective?"

"You bet he was! He stood up, tall, powerful looking, pale with excitement.

"'Mr. Speaker,' he said, 'I rise to offer a privileged motion.'

"'The gentleman will state it,' said the speaker.

"'Mr. Speaker,' Crawdlor came back amid a stillness throughout the House that was spooky, 'I move that the committee on amendments to the constitution be discharged from further consideration of the resolution providing for an emendment to the federal constitution for nation wide prohibition in the United States, and that the House, without further delay, proceed to vote on my motion to pass the resolution.'

"He said that in a way which foretold victory. He said it in such a way that everybody went raving, stark mad. In the galleries and on the floor you could hear the rebel yell, the Yankee yell, and every other kind of a yell. Members and spectators had hysteria. Men were pounding each other on the back. You couldn't hear the speaker's gavel. Some of the women in the galleries were screaming. Men stood up and shrieked without knowing that they were shrieking. It took 20 minutes to quiet the members and the galleries. The thing showed, once and for all, whether people hate whisky."

Smith drew a deep breath.

"It must have been very fine," he said, something like reverence in his voice.

"And all those thousands and thousands of people on the outside!" Waller's dramatic description rushed on. "You couldn't see them, and you couldn't hear much more than a whisper from them, there in the chamber of the House. But their spirit was there. And it was a highty thing. It was as if they reached out and touched congress with their hands. You were right when you said they would pray to God and command congress. That's what they did. That is what they are doing now—making the House of Representatives adopt that Crawdlor motion!"

"How long will it take to call the roll, to get the complete vote?"

"About 40 to 50 minutes. But it's a foregone conclusion. We've won. We've won, I tell you!"

Waller slapped him on the back.

"I know we have. I knew we would," Smith said quietly.

"Yes," Waller agreed. "That's what got me the first time I talked to you. You knew this thing would win. By George, you're a wonder!"

Smith looked at him a moment a little wistfully.

"Am I?" he asked.

Waller knew he referred to the Leslie woman's story, which, although it had not hurt him in the fight for prohibition, remained as an obstruction which he could not put out of the path of his happiness without regaining his memory.

"You'll beat that, too!" the writer assured him. "Why, you can beat anything!" His tone changed. "I wish I could find that blushing rose, that uncalloused conscience, that perfect man, the Simpson individual. He knows about you."

Smith, ignoring that suggestion, asked:

"Have you seen Miss Mallon today?"

"Yes," Waller replied a little reluctantly.

Smith noticed the hesitation.

"What is it?" he inquired quickly.

"Well, to tell you the truth, I think she's hiding around somewhere, waiting to be the first to congratulate you when the vote is announced.

"In this building?"

"I believe so."

"What room?"

Waller laughed.

"Say, now," he protested; "don't pump me any more. I refuse to disclose a woman's plans. Besides, what's the use? She's so apt to change them, you know."

The corridor door opened again, this time to admit Senator Mallon.

"May I come in?" he asked, hesitating.

"Certainly," the agitator invited him.

Waller turned to Smith.

"I'm going back to the press gallery. I'll come back with the figures on the vote."

He rushed out, leaving the door open. Smith could hear his footfalls far down the corridor as he ran.

The senator came farther into the room.

"Mr. Smith, good afternoon," he said, speaking with difficulty, even diffidence.

"How do you do Senator?" Smith answered him coolly.

"I have come," Mallon went on, "to thank you, if you will permit me."

"To thank me? For what?"

"For your unusual generosity." The senator was beginning to strike his ordinary, suave conversational pace. "For the past week Washington has been crazy, absolutely crazy, about this whisky business. Several men have had their careers cut short by being identified with the whisky interests. I—I have to thank you for my escape."

"No," Smith corrected him, his voice still cool. "You have your daughter to thank."

"At any rate, I felt that I must come to express my gratitude—to you."

"Was it gratitude, senator," the agitator asked, his tone tinged by contempt, "or was it fear?"

He made a swift, deprecatory bow, and added: "I should not have said that to Miss Mallon's father."

The senator bowed.

"Politics is politics," he said smoothly. "The great trouble about whisky is that there isn't anything you can say in favor of it in a stump speech."

"Yes, that's true."

"And I've got political sense enough to know that no man who wants to stay in politics can vote against your prohibition people any longer."

"You mean," Smith asked in surprise, "that you've come over to us?"

"I mean I've been driven over to you," the old man explained. "Every big thing has two kinds of men on its side—those who vote from conviction and those who vote from fear. You were right just now. Mine is one of the 'fear votes'."

"But the country will know the difference."

"The country's too busy to bother much about motives," Mallon gave it as his opinion. "What the country wants is results."

"I wouldn't be too sure about it in a thing of this kind, because — —"

"Oh, well," the senator interrupted, "that will have to take care of itself. After the Senate does what the House is doing now, and the resolution has passed both bodies, it will have to be ratified by the legislatures of 36 states. When the fight is made in my state—if there is any fight—you'll find me with you. That's all there is to that." He hesitated a moment. "There's something else I wanted to speak to you about."

"What is it?"

"Confound it all!" he exploded, "I wish you'd tell me who you are. I wish to thunder I knew what it is you've done."

Smith gave him a long, sharp look.

"Senator," he said earnestly, "I don't know."

"I wish you did. I wish you'd talk. You see—my daughter——"

"Your daughter is still my friend, senator," Smith cut in quickly. "Please don't attempt to tell me she is not."

Mallon exploded again.

"Your friend! I should say she is. If she ever finds out who you are and untangles this Leslie woman's story, she'll marry you so quick it will make your head swim!" He stepped closer to Smith. "She's in the next room," he confided. "She asked me to come with her. I thought I hoped I could fix this up. But I can't. You won't talk."

"Senator," the agitator demanded, "why will you persist in disbelieving me? I tell you alcohol can destroy anything in a man. It has destroyed my memory. I tell you I don't know who I am. I cannot remember what I was."

Mallon looked disappointed.

"Then," he said, "that's all. It's ended. My daughter can't marry a man who already may have been married. That's a dead sure thing."

He put his hand on the knob of the door on the right, leading into Crawdlor's larger office.

"No, it isn't ended," Smith said with great determination, and followed Mallon. "I must speak to Miss Mallon!"

Elections in Land of Nippon.

The Japanese people are satisfied with the result of the election of April 20, but agitation regarding expense attending a canvass for a seat in parliament is renewed. The same argument is heard as those after the last general election, according to East and West. The Chugai Shogyo estimates the cost of 606 candidates at not less than $2,640,000! This is more than representatives in the United States expend, but senators have been known to pay half a million for seats in that body. The Chugai says the government spent $200,000 for supervising the election, which, to Americans, will appear moderate. This sum includes "stumping trips" through the country by cabinet ministers; members of the opposition paid their own expenses. The editor regrets that so many men entitled to vote fail to exercise their high privilege. Repeated dissolution of the diet not only causes political disturbances, he argues, but imposes heavy financial loss upon the nation and upon individuals.

PAIN? NOT A BIT!
LIFT YOUR CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is an ether compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist. It is called freezone, and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store. Just ask for freezone. Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears. Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off, root and all, with the fingers.

Not a twinge of pain, soreness or irritation; not even the slightest smarting, either when applying freezone or afterwards.

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus, but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out. It is no humbug! It works like a charm. For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of your feet. It never disappoints and never burns, bites or inflames. If your druggist hasn't any freezone yet, tell him to get a little bottle for you from his wholesale house.—adv.

Then Silence.

They were dancing merrily, this young man and the young woman, and were talking of nothing at all, when suddenly the girl asked:

"Have you enlisted?"

"No," answered the youth.

"Haven't you joined the Officers' Reserve corps?"

"No, not yet. I haven't thought much about that sort of thing."

"Haven't you done anything about the war?"

"No," the youth replied.

Whereupon the girl stopped dancing.

"I wish you would take me to a seat. I don't think I want to dance with you."—Washington Star.

CULTIVATE! CULT

Produce More Wheat, Lowest Cost.

A trip through most of the growing districts of Western and information received from tic sources, reveals that the seeding of wheat, barley and finished and the grain is having rapid growth. Men of farming rience here say that the condi similar to those years when an abundant harvest reaped the past year a number of new came into the country, and undoubtedly have a good year. This added to the norm age, made considerably less lack of labor owing to the num have gone to the front, with fair general yield. It is surpr growth that this country is ca producing.

Wheat has this spring ger and shown three or four inches in five or six days, and with like favorable weather, harv should commence about the August, or a little over one h days from first seeding. Hund farmers throughout this vast paid for their entire holdings one year's crop and it would surprising if the same experien a great many more this year.

The best authorities on the situation give it as their opinio for many years to come, wheat will be high. They base their on a scientific calculation and reasoning seems to be sound. It is quite evident that for some to come, the producer of wheat be amply rewarded for any ef may make to develop this bra agricultural industry. Money made on the high-priced lands wheat-growing districts of the States, but it is a question if high-priced lands would not be profitably employed in other li of farming than in growing the grains, leaving it to lands just a ductive for wheat, less expensive erate, and with a much sm initial price, to provide the with this necessity of life. The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its va preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the fu tions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, co imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of sta powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children q in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should n receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups, other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too str decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who n need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crim dose them willfully with narcotics.

WOMAN HAD SPELLS

to Health by Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pa.—"I was all run down and nervous. I had female troubles and nervous feelings and my head bothered me. I would often have crying spells and feel as if I was not safe. If I heard anyone coming I would run and lock the door so they would not see me. I tried several doctors and they did not help me so I said to my mother 'I guess there is no help for me' so got me one of your little and my husband said I should try it. I stopped the doctor's and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It soon made a man of me and now I am strong and do my work."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS MAN, Box 86, Enhaut, Pa.

A. J. Laughlin was down from Fairmont over Sunday. He relates a good joke played on the game warden at Fairmont last week. Someone telephoned him from Fox Lake that a man was breaking the game laws by fishing with ten poles, and he cranked up his Ford and drove over in mud to arrest the fellow. When he arrived he hunted up the fellow and sure enough, he had ten poles with lines in the water. The game warden told him he was under arrest and to pull out his poles and come along. The fellow did as requested but the warden had a surprise in store. When the poles were landed nine of them had a bottle of beer on the end and only one had a hook on it. The game warden left without a word.—Ringsted Dispatch.

AUSTIN—HARDY

A quiet wedding took place Sunday, June 3rd, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Quigley, 2224 University Ave., when Miss Faith Hardy became the bride of O. E. Austin, of Klemme, Iowa.

The ceremony was read at 5:00 o'clock and the guests departed for the Hotel Dakota where a wedding supper was served.

The young couple have known each other for several years, both having lived at Arickaree, Colorado.

Miss Lucy Brown of Akron, Colorado, and Mrs. T. K. Tobiason of Larimore, North Dakota, were the only out of town guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin left for their new home at Klemme, Iowa, Sunday evening.

Mrs. Austin has been an instructor in the schools of North Dakota for several years and her many friends extend their hearty congratulations —Grand Forks Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin arrived in Klemme on Tuesday of last week and went to housekeeping at once in the Winters property in the east part of town where the groom had a home prepared. "Ted" has lived here for the past three years, doing drainage work and during that time has made numerous friends who join with us in wafting to them our heartiest congratulations, and who will be glad that they have come to Klemme to establish their future home and hope that their life among us will be long, happy and prosperous.

MONEY NOT TIED UP

There seems to be an idea held by some that money invested in a Liberty Loan Bond is going to be tied up for fifteen or thirty years. This belief is not warranted. Probably no property in the world outside of actual money or currency will have a wider and more ready and constant cash market than the Liberty Loan Bond.

There will be a constant demand made for them from many sources. They are good security for loans from the Federal reserve banks; courts have decided that they are legal and proper investments for trust funds; they are legal investments for insurance companies and other incorporations whose investments are supervised and regulated by law; their international character (being issued for an international purpose and guaranteed in part by our European allies) gives them an international status and market. They will be sought for in India, in Egypt, Japan and Russia, England and France, Italy and Australia, and in fact wherever any Government bond has a market.

They have been truly called the premier security of the world.

GROW SUGAR CROP AT HOME

New Home Process of Treating Sugar Beets Promises to Solve the Sugar Problem

What will probably prove an enormous aid in helping solve the "high priced sugar" situation in the country, is the announcement made Saturday by the chemistry bureau of the U. S. department of Agriculture of a new method that can be employed in the home, of extracting syrup and sugar from sugar beets. Sugar beets can easily be grown by any farmer or home gardener in Iowa. The process of extracting sugar is as follows:

1. Cut off beet tops, cutting below the last leaf scar to get rid of bitter portion.
2. Wash beets.
3. Slice roots very thin with kraut cutter or potato slicer.
4. Extract sugar. Put sliced beets into kettle, add equal volume of water heated to 165 degrees F. Hold water at temperature not below 158 degrees F or above 176 degrees for an hour. Stir occasionally. Drain off liquor and strain thru several thicknesses of cheesecloth. No pressing is required.
5. Boil juice slowly until proper thickness for syrup. As it boils, skim off scum. Bottle and seal while hot. If preferred, boil further to sugar. A maple flavor can be had by boiling corn cobs in water and pouring the syrup into the beet syrup.

It is not too late to plant sugar beets in Iowa, says the experiment truck crops man at Iowa State college. He advises that either the Vilmorin's Improved or Klein Wanzleben varieties are best for Iowa. Plant at the rate of 10 lbs. of seed to the acre, drilled in, seeds ⅛ inch deep, then thin to 8 to 10 inches apart in the row. Two or three long garden rows thus planted, should supply a family with syrup or sugar if treated as suggested.

Would Be Liberal.

"Several men have been with the company for more than thirty years. What shall we do to show our appreciation?" "Um. Let's see. Suppose we give each man a gold star on his collar." "Shall we require the men to pay for the same?" "No, that would hardly be fair. The company will pay half." —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Nothing to Be Gained.

A Roman stoic philosopher was discoursing one day on life and death. "They are just the same," he said; "there is no difference between them." "Why don't you die, then, if there is no difference?" one of his disciples asked. "Because there is no difference," returned the philosopher.

Telling the Truth.

To tell truth, rightly understood, is not to state the true facts, but to convey a true impression; truth in spirit, not truth to letter is the true veracity. —Stevenson.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN.

"Talk about your frenzied financiers," remarked the cashier, as he came in and hung up his hat, "my wife's got them all beaten to a fricasseed frazzle."

"Well, come on with the answer," said the bookkeeper.

"She had made up her mind to purchase a skirt she saw in a store just around the corner from where we live," explained the cashier; "but yesterday she learned that she could buy one exactly like it downtown for fifty cents less—"

"And of course she went downtown and bought it," interrupted the bookkeeper.

"You have said it," rejoined the cashier, "and incidentally she spent a dollar and a half taxicab hire while looking for the place."

Sad Case.

"I certainly do feel sorry for Mrs. Doppel."

"Why so?"

"She patronizes Mrs. Dubson whenever she gets a chance, but Mrs. Dubson is blissfully unconscious of it, so it [illegible] to her at all."

NOT A PATRIOT.

Would you be willing to fight for your country if necessary?"

"Not me. I passed two weeks in the country last summer."

Just a Little Game.

The sighing lover led a heart,
A club the villain played;
The hotel clerk a diamond had,
And the sexton held a spade.

An Unexpected Retort.

"Where," demanded the female suffrage oratress in a fierce tone, "would man be today were it not for woman?"

She paused for a moment, and glared at the silent audience.

"Once more I repeat," she came back, "Where would man be were it not for woman?"

Then from the gallery in a timid masculine voice, came this answer: "Held be in the garden of Eden eating strawberries."

The Modern Way.

"Say," said the theatrical manager to the chap who writes between meals, "do you want a job?"

"What kind of a job?" queried the play manufacturer.

"I bought a job lot of scenery at an auction sale today," explained the t. m., "and I want you to write a play to fit it. See?"

Still Hopeful.

"A girl should think twice before saying 'yes' when a man proposes."

"Most girls do," replied the cynic. "Even a mature spinster on the shady side of thirty likes to think some other man wants to marry her while she is listening to positively the last proposal she'll ever receive."

THE TRUTH.

The Reformer—Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

The Joker—Yes; many a man would be in jail if he didn't watch out.

Behind the Scenes.

Full many a man's a pacifist,
Philanthropist and all that,
Yet scolds a wife who can't resist
And slams the door and kicks the cat.

Large Family.

"How long does it take you to read your morning paper, Mr. Gadsby?"

"About an hour."

"You must read it rather closely."

"No. I wait 45 minutes to get it."

Too Particular.

"Six women in our neighborhood started a community kitchen."

"How did the venture turn out?"

"It was a dismal failure. None of the six would eat what the others cooked."

An Anomaly.

Be more like the scissors sharpening man. He's often happy though his life is a grind and he always finds things dull.

KLEMME, IOWA

Late in March, or early in April, the robin returns. We may see him hopping around our lawns, or perhaps we may hear him first. He has a clear, cheerful voice, but does not sing his most joyous songs until his mate returns from the south, about a week later. Together they build their nest, or remodel one that they have occupied for several seasons. In the latter case the old leaves are cleared out, and a few crooked sticks added to the clumsy looking mass. Then it is ready for the mudcup that will make it firm, solid and safe. The mother bird brings the mud, and uses her breast as a mason does his trowel to shape smooth and press into shape. She is a very dirty bird when she has finished, but soon makes herself clean and neat again. When lined with grass, moss and feathers the nest is quite comfortable

An inventor has turned out an electric pistol built along original lines. It does not use gunpowder or cartridges, but is so constructed that its contents, gases, are exploded by a touch of the button and a projectile is expelled. The pistol consists of a brass cylinder at one end of which is a small battery and coil. The gases are introduced from the outside or from a small tank attached to the pistol frame, explains the electrical experimenter. Although the use of electricity in this case is merly an experiment It is evident that it can be used to produce exactly what powder does, explosion in a confined space and the swift movement of a missile. Mankind began with a club and a stone to deliver blows The bullet is only a smaller but speedier object than a hand thrown stone, wounding at a greater distance than is possible with a spear or arrow

It has been known for some time that large quantities of anthracite coal existed in the beds of certain rivers running through the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania, the coal having been washed down years ago In the Susquehanna river, the Schuykill and the Lehigh, these deposits are exceedingly heavy, being found in greatest quantities in pockets along the river beds. During the last few years companies independent of owners and operators of coal mines, have been at work digging out this coal by means of dredges, selling it afterward direct to the consumer The coal is said to be of excellent quality, in fact, much of it is superior to that obtained direct from the mines. The cost of dredging averages about 12 cents a ton and the prices to consumers have been as low as $1 35

Sidney Shannon, of Appleton Wis., began his business life as a grocer He won success by the canvass of his clientele with a horse and buckboard His personal solicited business grew so that he soon became the leading merchant in the city of 20 000 A year ago Mr Shannon died still under 40 Mr Shannon had in the last years of his life as a his delivery horse for a driving animal for he looked the cart after being carried and cared for properly His will provided that $1 000 be set aside with which to buy hay and oats and provide shelter for the horse for the rest of his life

The earliest instance of the preparation of bread as an article of food is found in the bible in Genesis xviii 6 The grain employed was of various sorts The best bread was made of wheat which after being ground produced the flour or meal Barley was only used by the poor or in time of scarcity Spelt was also used both in Egypt and Palestine The bread taken by persons on a journey (Genesis xiv, 23 Joshua ix, 12) was probably a kind of biscuit

The inseparable Simpkinson brothers, of Los Angeles, Cal decided that they would save the expenses of lawyers' fees in case of the death of one of them by making out checks to each other One of them died recently and the other took the check for the amount of his estate to the bank. HARDING URGES COUNTRY TO FORGET PARTISANSHIP

Washington, D. C., June 16.—Calling on Americans to be patriots before they are partisans, Governor Harding in an interview in today's Washington Post, described the work being done in Iowa to support the government in the war He said the next important Iowa task was to help swell the Red Cross fund. He predicted a great crop of corn and other foodstuffs in Iowa.

PASTOR DENIES TOBACCO CAUSED CHURCH RUPTURE

LeMars, Ia., June 16.—Rev Thomas Hunter who resigned the pastorate of the First Baptist church here denies that relations with members of his church became strained because of his use of tobacco. He says that he is "in perfect ignorance of the cause of said relationship and does not know of any reason as none has been given me." He explains that he resigned to give the church liberty to act in any way it sees fit and offers to assume the major responsibility for any adjustments it may make He said he had no reason to suspect that all was not well between himself and members of his church prior to June 7

DISAPPOINTED TOWNS SEEK TO REOPEN CAMP QUESTION

Washington D. C., June 15—Although F Conway, of Cedar Rapids, is trying to get the camp site situation reopened there is no indication it will be. Democratic National Committeeman Fred Lynch, of St Paul, is still at work for Fort Snelling

"They won't even get started," said Representative Dowell today, "there will be no change." The question of organization of a working force is the biggest proposition, the war department say which must be solved. The department says there will be no trouble about materials for the camp. The committee of Des Moines contractors and material men will arrive to confer Monday.

MONTICELLO—In an attempt to boost recruiting Harold Peats, of the British army, will lecture on fighting in France tonight. Lieutenant Peats is en route to Canada. The proceeds are to be turned over to the local chapter of the Red Cross.

SAC CITY—Registrars at Lake View are now telling of one man's unique answer before them on June 5, when he was asked: "Have you a father, mother, wife, child under 12 or a sister or brother under 12 solely dependent upon you for support, specify which?" The man who was being questioned evidently was anxious to avoid war service, but was determined to answer conscientiously, and he replied reluctantly: "Yes, I have a wife, but she's over 12 years old."

DANBURY—The campaign for Liberty bonds closed here this afternoon. Twelve thousand one hundred and fifty dollars was subscribed through our local banks.

DIVISION OF GREAT CONTRACT IS SOUGHT

Contractors Seek to Split Up Job of Erecting 1,200 Cantonment Buildings.

Washington, D. C., June 16.—In response to appeals from Des Moines contractors and material men to have the construction of the 1,200 cantonment buildings provided for in several contracts instead of one, the purchasing board of the advisory commission of the national defense council promised Representative Dowell to hear a committee from Des Moines construction and material men next Monday.

The war department is opposed to making more than one contract and will not do it unless the Des Moines men interested in construction and material can show they are prepared to build the camp on time if several contracts are let. Monday is the last date the government officials will wait for a hearing. It is understood a committee from Des Moines will start for Washington by Saturday and possibly earlier.

MUCH CROP DAMAGE.

Des Moines Ia., June 16 —The weekly bulletin of the Iowa weather and crop service for the week ending Tuesday, June 12, says

This has been the most unfavorable week of the season. The temperature was below normal and the rainfall was heavy and, in many localities, excessive, the amounts ranging from two to nearly seven inches. Practically all streams, especially over the southern half of the state, were at or above the flood stage. Hillside land was badly eroded and bottom ground flooded, resulting in much damage to the belated corn crop. Considerable replanting will be necessary and possibly a small percentage of the acreage will be used for some of the catch crops. As a whole, however, the prospect is very promising, and with but a few days of warm sunshine, which now seems probable, the fields will be cultivated and cleaned. The acreage is still much above that of last year. All small grain, grass, alfalfa and potatoes made rapid growth and alfalfa is about ready for the first cutting.

The following report of the secretary of the State Horticultural society shows the condition of fruit on June 1 Apples, 80 per cent, pears, 61, American plums, 66, cherries, 71 grapes, 46 red raspberries 53, black raspberries 45 blackberries, 42, currants, 73, gooseberries, 77, and strawberries, 66 per cent of a full crop. The average of all fruits is 56 per cent, or three points above the average for June last year The condition of the apple crop is 2 per cent above the June average for any year since a percentage record has been kept.

SALIX ADOPTS NOVEL PLAN TO SELL BONDS

Salix, Ia., June 16 —A novel and impressive means of selling Liberty bonds was adopted here by A. J. Granger, assistant cashier of the Farmers' bank. Subscriptions up to today amounted to $16,900, and more money is expected to be raised. A bulletin board was posted. On one side of the board was placed a column of names of those who have volunteered. Below these space is provided for those who will answer the draft, Red Cross enlistments, etc. Opposite this list is a list of those subscribing for Liberty bonds. This bulletin will remain posted throughout the war and to the list will be added names of those who come in later.

The largest Liberty bond buyers in Salix were E. B. and J. W. Currier, who subscribed for $5,000 of bonds each. Others were H. F. Eveleth, $1,500; N. I. Duhaime, $1,000; C. W. Wheeler, $500; Fred Wheeler, $500; Farmers' bank, $1,000; P. J. Brechtel, $500, Joseph Choquette, $400; St. Joseph's church, $300; Rev. A. J. Griffin, $200; A. J. Granger, Perre Lacroix, O. G. 2,000 IOWA BANKERS MEET AT DES MOINES

Des Moines, Ia., June 16.—Following the delivery of his annual address President George S. Parker, of Sioux City, was presented with an ivory gavel, trimmed with silver, as a token of the esteem of the Iowa Bankers' association of which he has served as president the past year

J. F Toy, of Sioux City, made the presentation. The state convention opened here today with 2,000 or more bankers and their wives in attendance Peter W. Goebel, of Kansas City, president of the American Bankers' association was in attendance.

The bankers voted to subscribe $5,000 to purchase Liberty bonds after the report of Secretary Warner disclosed $6,500 in the general fund.

It looks like a scrap over the location of the convention for next year. Sioux City was practically promised the meeting but today Ottumwa, Cedar Rapids and Dubuque put in bids. If Sioux City gets it, M. D. Gibbs, of Alton, and J. H McCord, of Spencer, will be candidates for president. If it goes to the eastern sections of the state, J. H. Ingwerson of Clinton, and A. F. Dawson, of Davenport will aspire. The latter two have withdrawn for this year, leaving S. M Leach, of Adel, in possession of the field.

ACTIVE RED CROSS UNIT IS ORGANIZED AT HULL

Hull, Ia., June 16.—An auvillary to the Sioux County, Iowa, Red Cross society of nearly 100 members was formed here Tuesday evening. Mrs. J. S. Wilson was elected president, Mrs. D. JOURNALIST FOOD DIRECTOR.

London, June 14.—Harold Sidney Harmsworth, first baron Rothermere and brother of Lord Northcliffe, is understood to have been chosen food controller.

Viscount Devonport recently resigned the post of food controller on account of ill health. Lord Rothermere is well known as a newspaper man. He is a son of the late Alfred Harmsworth, and was created a baronet in 1915.

DEMOCRACY SCORNED BY GERMANS, HE SAYS

Theodore Marburg Tells Grinnell Students Teutons Pin Faith to Autocracy.

Grinnell, Ia., June 15.—The spirit of aggression on the part of the German people springs from their scorn of the democratic form of government, said Theodore Marburg, former United States minister to Belgium, in an address at the 17th annual commencement of Grinnell college here today.

At present, he declared, the idea of association with Germany in a league to enforce peace is repugnant to the allies But a Germany beaten, changed in spirit and liberalized might be accepted into such a circle.

"Primarily it was Germany's success in previous wars," he declared, "and the results that flowed out of it which brought on the present cataclysm. But while success turned her head, it is not the only factor which developed the German spirit of aggression. Back of it is the fact the Teutons still regard the democratic form of government as an experiment.

"The painful experiences of the present war has no doubt modified their views about their own political institutions and leadership. The fight they have put up, shows how efficient autocracy is in time of war

"It remains for the democartic peoples to demonstrate their capability of thinking true in a time of world crisis, of actually surrendering for the time being their customary privileges and even their constitutional liberties in order that these leaders may meet the centralized organization of autocratic powers with an organization which shall be equally effective

ENDEAVOR SOCIETIES ARE IN SESSION AT PRIMGHAR

Primghar, Ia., June 15 —The 28th annual convention of the First district of the Iowa Christian Endeavor union is in session at the First Congregational church The First district comprises the northwest corner of Iowa. A good attendance was registered There are 55 societies enrolled in this district, representing several denominations. The Dutch Reformed and American Reformed churches are strong in this part of the state and are active in the Christian Endeavor movement.

In the absence of Rev C. H Stauffacher, of Cedar Rapids, who was unable to come and give the opening address, the chief feature of the evening's program was an address, illustrated by stereopticon, by Miss Mary B McPherrin of Omaha, the state secretary of the Y P S. C E on world wide Christian Endeavor President Walter M Swann, of the First district presided The address of welcome was given by Col. W. S Armstrong of Primghar and the earlier part of the meeting was enlivened by the Christian Endeavor songs and yells The evening's session closed with a pleasant reception and social hour in Pilgrim hall

ORDERS ARE ISSUED TO ROUND UP THE SLACKERS

Des Moines, Ia June 15.—Sheriffs and police officials all over Iowa are ordered to start a general roundup of men who refused to register, according to a telegraphic order received by the governor from Provost Marshal General Crowder

The provost marshal general says the days of leniency have passed, that those who failed to register are to be arrested by United States and state authorities at once and then registered so that their failure to register will not result in their escape from army service if drawn by the boards to be named by the president.

FARMER IS BADLY HURT IN ACCIDENT AT REMSEN

Remsen, Ia. June 15.—Both bones of his right leg were broken, and he was otherwise injured, when Louis Lillie, about 44 years old, yesterday had a foot caught in a rear wheel of a lumber wagon, near his home at Remsen. Mr. Lillie was sitting in the rear of the wagon, his feet hanging over the end. One foot became fastened between the spokes of a wheel, and his leg was wound partially around the hub before the horses drawing the vehicle could be stopped. Mr Lillie was taken to a LeMars hospital

FORESEES VAST BENEFITS FROM THE RESERVE BANKS

Des Moines, Ia., June 15—"The federal farm loan act will release for the use of productive industry in the next 10 years $2,000,000,000—an amount equal to the Liberty loan," Frank G. Odell, secretary of the federal land bank of Omaha, said today in an address to the fourth annual convention of the Iowa Farm Mortgage association here.

Mr. Odell, the principal speaker before the Farm Mortgage association, said the release of $2,000,000,000 "would be accomplished by the saving of this amount in interest and the elimination of commissions hitherto paid to loan brokers, due to the fixing of a uniform interest rate of 5 per cent for the entire federal land bank system."

3,500,000,000 BUSHELS OF CORN, IOWAN'S PREDICTION

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Col. G. Watson French, of Davenport, in an interview predicted 3,500,000,000 bushels of corn in the country this year. He said Iowa would produce a great crop. The trouble with the food situation, he said, was that "the food of the country is in the hands of a few food pirates," and until the government fixes prices no one can tell what they will be.

TO OBTAIN COAL SUPPLY FOR IOWA'S INDUSTRIES

Washington, D. C., June 13—Governor Harding and a group of leading Iowans here today will take up a number of important matters. In the list are:

Colonel French, W. W. Marsh, Fred Larrabee, Jack Hughes, Dr. Reynolds, and J. J. Doty, of Shenandoah; Judge Wade also is here.

Efforts will be taken to insure coal for Iowa factories and industries, and also to secure needed exemptions of agricultural workers and employes in agricultural implement houses.

TOBACCO WON'T COST PULPIT, SAYS PASTOR

LeMars Minister Resigns Following Break With Church Over Use of "Weed."

LeMars, Ia., June 13—Giving as one reason for strained relations between some members of his church and himself, the fact that he used tobacco, Rev Thomas Hunter has resigned the pastorate of the First Baptist church here. Rev. Mr. Hunter today said that friction had grown up between him and some members of the church, and that he could account for it in no other way than that exception was taken to his using tobacco. Rev. Mr. Hunter said he could forego the use of the weed, and would have done so, had he been approached on the subject in the proper manner. Rev. Mr. Hunter and Mrs. Hunter came to LeMars last October. Rev. Mr. Hunter formerly was pastor of the First Baptist church at Lake City, Ia.

VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG OF FORMER FRENCH FAMILY BUT NOT OF FRENCH BLOOD

Bordeaux, June 16.—Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German chancellor, was recently declared by a paper in Paris to be of French origin, descending from a Bordeaux family. The possibility that the chancellor descended from a family that once existed here in Bordeaux is admitted here, but it is denied that he has any French blood in his veins.

The Bethmanns who founded the family that existed in Bordeaux and Paris came from Frankfort to Bordeaux in the 18th century and were of Israelite origin, according to the tradition prevalent here. The name is Hebrew and half German, both words house in Hebrew and mann meaning man in German. The hyphenated name Bethmann-Hollweg, it is explained, originated in the marriage of a daughter of the Bethmann brothers, who were bankers in Paris and Bordeaux, to a German named Hollweg. Hollweg, succeeding to a part of the banking business, and considering the name Bethmann of great commercial value than his own, inverted the usual order and this new family became the Bethmann-Hollweg family from which the German chancellor may or may not descend.

War Forced On World.

...war was begun by the military ...Germany, who proved to be ...also the masters of Austria-Hungary. These men have never regarded nations as peoples, men, women and children of like blood and frame as themselves, for whom governments existed and in whom governments had their life. They have regarded them merely as serviceable organizations, which they could by force or intrigue bend or corrupt to their own purpose. They have regarded the smaller states, in particular, and the peoples who could be overwhelmed by force, as their natural tools and instruments of domination. Their purpose has long been avowed. The statesmen of other nations, to whom that purpose was incredible, paid little attention, regarded what German professors expounded in their class rooms and German writers set forth to the world as the goal of German policy as rather the dream of minds detached from practical affairs, as preposterous private conceptions of German destiny, than as the actual plans of responsible rulers. But the rulers of Germany themselves knew all the while what concrete plans what well advanced intrigues lay back of what the professors and the writers were saying, and were glad to go forward unmolested, filling the thrones of Balkan states with German princes, putting German officers at the service of Turkey to drill their armies and make interest with her government developing plans of sedition and rebellion in India and Egypt, setting their fires in Persia. The demands made by Austria upon Servia were a mere single step in a plan which compassed Europe and Asia, from Berlin to Bagdad.

They hoped those demands might not arouse Europe, but they meant to press them whether they did or not, for they thought themselves ready for the final issue of arms.

Austria Pawn Like Serbia.

"Their plan was to throw a broad belt of German military power and political control across the very center of Europe and beyond the Mediterranean into the heart of Asia, and Austria-Hungary was to be as much their pool and pawn as Servia or Bulgaria or Turkey or the ponderous states of the east. Austria-Hungary indeed was to become part of the central German empire, absorbed and dominated by the same forces and influences that had originally cemented the German states themselves. The dream had its heart at Berlin. It could have had a heart nowhere else. It rejected the idea of solidarity of race entirely. The choice of peoples played no part in it at all. It contemplated binding together racial and political units which could be kept together only by force—Czechs, Magyars, Croats, Serbs, Rumanians, Turks, Armenians—the proud states of Bohemia and Hungary, the stout little commonwealths of the Balkans, the indomitable Turks, the subtile peoples of the east. These peoples did not wish to be united. They ardently desired to direct their own affairs, would be satisfied only by undisputed independence. They could be kept quiet only by the presence or the constant threat of armed men. They would live under a common power only by sheer compulsion and await the day of revolution. But the German military statesmen had reckoned with all that and were ready to deal with it in their own way.

Dream Nearly Succeeded.

"And they have actually carried the greater part of that amazing plan into execution! Look how things stand. Austria is at their mercy. It has acted, not upon its own initiative or upon the choice of its own people, but at Berlin's dictation ever since the war began. Its people now desire peace, but cannot have it until leave is granted from Berlin. The so-called central powers are in fact but a single power. Serbia is at its mercy should its hands be put for a moment freed. Bulgaria has concented to its will and Rumania is overrun. The Turkish armies, which Germans trained, are serving Germany, certainly not themselves, and the guns of German warships lying in the harbor at Constantinople remind Turkish statesmen every day that they have no choice but to take their orders from Berlin. From Hamburg to the Persian gulf the net is spread.

"Is it not easy to understand the eagerness for peace that has been manifested from Berlin ever since the snare was set and sprung? Peace, peace peace has been the talk of her foreign office for now a year and more; not peace up on her own initiative, but upon the initiative of the nations over which she now deems herself to hold the advantage. A little of the talk has been public, but most of it has been private. Through all sorts of channels it has come to me, and in all sorts of guises but never with the terms disclosed which the German government would be willing to accept. That government has other valuable pawns in its hands besides those I have mentiond. It still holds a valuable part of France, though with slowly relaxing grasp, and practically the whole of Belgium. Its armies press close upon Russia and over run Poland at their will. It cannot go further; it dare not go back. It wishes to close its bargain before it is too late and it has little left to offer for the pound of flesh it will demand.

Wear For Their Power.

"The military masters under whom Germany is bleeding see very clearly to what point Fate has brought them. If they fall back or are forced back an inch, their power both abroad and at home will fall to pieces like a house of cards. It is their power at home they are thinking about now more than their power abroad. It is that power which is trembling under their very feet; and deep fear has entered their hearts. They have but one chance to perpetuate their military power or even their controlling political influence. If they can secure peace now, with the immense advantages still in their hands which they have up to this point apparently gained, they will have justified themselves before the German people, they will have gained by force what they promised to gain by it: an immense expansion of German power, an immense enlargement of German industrial and commercial opportunities. Their prestige will be secure, and with their prestige their political power. If they failed, their people will thrust them aside, a government accountable to the people themselves will be set up in Germany as it has been in England, in the United States, in France, and in all the great countries of the modern time, except Germany.

"If they succeed they are safe and Germany and the world are undone; if they fail, Germany is saved and the world will be at peace. If they succeed, America will fall within the menace. We and all the rest of the world must remain armed, as they will remain, and must make ready for the next step in their aggression; if they fail, the world may unite for peace and Germany may be of the union.

Why Leaders Cry "Peace."

"Do you not now understand the new intrigue, the intrique for peace, and why the masters of Germany do not hesitate to use any agency that promises to effect their purposes, the deceit of the nations? Their present particular aim is to deceive all those who throughout the world stand for the rights of peoples and the self government of nations, for they see what immense strength the forces of justice and of liberalism are gathering out of this war. They are employing liberals in their enterprise. They are using men, in Germany and without, as their spokesmen whom they have hitherto despised and oppressed, using them for their own destruction—socialists, the leaders of labor, the thinkers they have hitherto sought to silence. Let them once succeed and the men, now their tools, will be ground to powder beneath the weight of the great military empire they will have set up; the revolutionists in Russia will be cut off from all succor or cooperation in western Europe and a counter revolution fostered and supported. Germany herself will lose he. chance of freedom and all Europe will arm for the next the final struggle.

German Spokesmen in U. S.

"The sinister intrigue is being no less actively conducted in this country than in Russia and in every country in Europe to which the agents and dupes of the imperial German government can get access. That government has many spokesmen here, in places high and low. They have learned discretion. They keep within the law. It is opinion they utter now, not sedition. They proclaim the liberal purposes of their masters, declare this a foreign war which can touch America with no danger to either her lands or her institutions, set England at the center of the stage and talk of her ambition to assert economic dominion throughout the world; appeal to our ancient tradition of isolation in the politics of the nations, and seek to undermine the government with false professions of loyalty to its principles.

False Betray Themselves.

"But they will make no headway. The false betray themselves also in every accent. It is only friends and partisans of the German government whom we have already identified who utter these thinly disguised disloyal ties. The facts are patent to all the world and nowhere are they more plainly seen than in the United States, where we are accustomed to deal with facts and not with soph'stries, and the great fact that stands out above all the rest is that this is a people's war a war for freedom and justice and self government amongst all the nations of the world a war to make the world safe for the peoples themselves included and that with us rests the choice to break through all these hypocrisies and patent cheats and masks of brute force and help set the world free or else stand aside and let it be dominated a long age through by sheer weight of arms and the arbitrary choices of self-constituted masters, by the nation which can maintain the biggest armies and the most irresistible armaments,—a power to which the world has afforded no parallel and in the face of which political freedom must wither and perish.

"For us there is but one choice. We have made it. Woe be to the man or group of men that seeks to stand in our way in this day of high resolution when every principle we hold dearest is to be vindicated and made secure for the salvation of the nations. We are ready to plead at the bar of history, and our flag shall wear a new luster. Once more we shall make good with our lives and fortunes the great faith to which we were born, and a new glory shall shine in the face of our people."

GROCERY LEADERS CALLED INTO COURT

Members of Illinois and National Associations to Appear Before Grand Jury.

Chicago, June 14.—The government took the initial step in another drive against the high cost of eating today when subpoenaes were ordered for several wholesalers of canned goods, and officers of the Illinois Grocers' association and National Grocers' association. They were summoned to appear before the federal grand jury.

CARRANZA TELLS 'EM HE'S RUNNING COUNTRY

Mexico City, June 14.—President Carranza sent a reply last night to the house of deputies which had requested that he immediately present for their consideration a law putting in force article 123 of the constitution, which deals with the regulation of labor and which contains stringent provisions.

The president's message in effect indicated that the chamber had gone far outside of its authority in making such a request and that any initiative in the matter should come from him, not from congress. He said that he would be glad at any time to meet delegations from the congress for the discussion of any subject, as provided by the constitution.

JUNK BUYER DROWNED.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 14.—H. H. Fisher, a junk buyer of Cedar Rapids, was drowned near Belle Plaine on Wednesday. The body has not been recovered. His team escaped.

RUSSIAN GENERAL AWAITS TRIAL ON CHARGE OF TREASON

General Rennenkampf.

Rennenkampf, the Russian general who sold Russia's military plans to Germany, thus losing the three campaigns of the Masurian Lakes, and a million Russian lives, is in prison awaiting trial on a charge of treason. Rennenkampf never forgot his German origin despite the fact that his great-grandfather settled in Russia and that honors had been heaped upon the family by the Muscovite government.

3 BILLIONS SUBSCRIBED TO WAR LOAN

Four U. S. Reserve Districts Buy Bonds Enough to Raise $2,000,000,000 Sought for Liberty Loan.

AVALANCHE BURIES BANKS

Full Magnitude of Subscriptions May Not Be Known for Days—Two Districts Under Minimum.

Chicago, Ill., June 15.—Three hundred and twenty-five million dollars, $65,000,000 more than the quota.

This was the official estimate of the subscriptions of the seventh (Chicago) federal reserve bank district when the Liberty loan books closed at noon today.

At 6 o'clock last night the standing of the various sections was Illinois, $136,223,100. Indiana, $21,305,050; Iowa, $20,165,850. Michigan, $44,113,900, Wisconsin, $17,042,250.

Washington, June 15.—The Liberty loan has been tremenduously over-subscribed. When the books closed at noon treasury officials estimated that the total would reach at least $2,500,000,000 and might soar to $3,000,000,000.

Every federal reserve district with the possible exception of Atlanta and Kansas City appeared to have exceeded its minimum allotments. Reports from these two districts were slow in coming in. With thousands of banks to be heard from in these two districts, however, it seemed likely that the minimum allotment would be reached in each case.

Buyers Stand in Line.

Reports from every section of the country told of an avalanche of small subscriptions at the last moment. Scores of small investors were standing in line at hundreds of banks throughout the country during the final hour.

Swelling the huge total by millions came the belated subscriptions of the banks that held back till the last moment. The clerical forces of virtually every reserve bank practically buried under a landslide of 11th hour subscriptions.

Because of this situation the exact total subscription may not be known for many hours. The full magnitude of the country's response even may not be measured for several days.

Scouts Raise $8,234,900.

Boy Scouts of America have obtained subscriptions to the Liberty loan totalling $8,234,900, according to official returns made to scout headquarters at 8 a. m. today. Officials believe the total subscriptions made through efforts of 238,000 scouts will amount to between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000.

Four banner districts—New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Boston—appeared, on the face of returns at noon, to have subscribed the full $2,000,000,000 offering alone. New York, as was expected, led all other districts by a margin of more than double the next highest. This estimate was made on the basis of reports an hour before the books closed in the east.

Frisco Spurts to Finish.

San Francisco started the day with a sensational advance from its previous report of $52,000,000. The first thing officials heard this morning was that instead of being approximately $88,000,000 under its minimum allotment, the district was nearing the minimum and probably would take its quota.

In the Dallas district, the figure stood at $29,000,000 when the day started—$11,000,000 less than the minimum allotment. There were then more than 2,000 banks to be heard from. It was thought their response would easily swell the total to the minimum of $40,000,000.

Crops Cut Two Districts.

Apparent failure of the Kansas City and Atlanta districts to reach their minimum, based on early reports, reflected, officials believed, the failure of the cotton farmers of the south and the wheat growers of the west to respond as fully as it had been estimated they would. It was pointed out that in each district the farmers have not harvested their crops and therefore are not in as strong a position to answer the call as they will be after the harvest.

Districts in which are located the great industrial plants of the country reflected a tremendous demand for the so-called "baby bonds." The $50 issue will be by far the most popular, it is believed. The total number of subscribers to all denomiantions, it is estimated, will exceed 2,500,000. This is 10 times the number of persons in the entire nation who hold securities of any other sort.

The small investor, officials declared today, is to receive the full amount of his subscriptions. Every $50 and $100 bond subscribed for, it was said, is to be issued. This presages a widespread paring down of great individual subscriptions.

New Possessions Subscribe.

Every community flying the American flag, from the Philippines to the Virginia Islands, subscribed to the loan. Fairbanks, Alaska, the most northern town on the continent, sent a generous subscription. From the Panama canal zone subscriptions totaled $250,000.

NEW LOAN BY SEPTEMBER 1.

From The Tribune Washington Bureau.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Unofficially, it is stated here that another sale of bonds may be expected in the next two or three months, probably about September 1. The present indications are that $1,500,000,000 in bonds will be sold then.

Highly gratified with the success of the Liberty bond sale, now concluded, treasury officials have no doubt that the next sale will be even more of a success for the reason that much of the work done in arousing public interest will bear fruit then.

$1,200,000 IN NEW YORK.

New York, June 15.—New York has over-subscribed its quota to the Liberty loan by many hundreds of millions of dollars. Although at the closing hour of noon, the tabulators were at least six hours behind in recording the tidal wave of subscriptions that have been pouring in since yesterday, it was estimated the total participation of the New York federal reserve district would amount to at least $1,200,000,000.

The first sale of the bonds on the New York stock exchange was at par and 1-50. Later one lot of '25,000 sold at 99 and 49-50ths. The next sale was again at par.

CLEVELAND OVER 50 PER CENT.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 15.—Cleveland Liberty loan subscriptions reached $56,000,000 this morning, and it is estimated the total will exceed $57,000,000 by noon.

Cleveland has exceeded her original quota of $36,000,000 by 50 per cent.

NEW ENGLAND SUBSCRIBES.

Boston, Mass., June 15.—New England subscriptions to the Liberty loan as tabulated up to 6 o'clock this morning, showed a total of $235,300,000. The general committee announced that overnight subscriptions would put the total well above the allotment of $240,000,000.

TEXAS TAKES ITS SHARE.

Dallas, Tex., June 15.—Fred W. Hoopes, deputy governor of the 11th district federal reserve bank, today announced his belief that the district had raised its Liberty loan quota of $40,000,000.

FRISCO $3,000,000 OVER.

San Francisco, June 15.—The Liberty loan was fully subscribed in the Twelfth federal reserve district here at noon today. Officials said figures might not be available for days, but that in San Francisco subscriptions ran more than $3,000,000 over the $42,000,000 allotment. The allotment for the district was $166,000,000.

Reports from federal reserve officials in cities all along the Pacific coast showed that the Twelfth district, which had stood at the bottom, was oversubscribing its allotment to the loan.

OMAHA 30 PER CENT OVER.

Omaha, Neb., June 15.—Omaha's subscriptions to the Liberty loan exceeded its allotment by more than 20 per cent, the total being $8,533,650. The allotment was $6,500,000.

New Loan This Fall.

Secretary McAdoo, announcing the oversubscription of the $2,000,000,000 offering of the Liberty loan today, said he did not think there would be another offering of the remaining $3,000,000,000 authorized by congress before this fall.

POSTAL EMPLOYES BUY.

What is looked upon as a record for a single force of employes, was established by Postal employes in their subscriptions to the Liberty loan. Ninety-seven men turned in subscriptions totalling $7,650, or an average of $88 through the rank and file of the entire force.

SWOBODA ARRESTED FOR RECRUITING SPIES

German Reservist Officer Suspected of Firing Ship Held in Switzerland.

Paris, June 16.—Raymond Ruff Swoboday, who was held for some time by the Paris police in the spring of 1915 on suspicion of causing a fire on board the French liner La Touraine, has been arrested in Zurich, according to the correspondent of the Petit Parisien. Swoboda is accused of recruiting spies to work against France.

Raymond Ruff Swoboda, when arrested in Paris in March, 1915, had an American passport and claimed to be an American citizen. At his trial it was said that his real name was Schwind and that he was a German reserve officer. He was finally discharged and ordered expelled from France.

Says U. S. Believing Water Makes It Safe, Sleeps on As German Menace Grows

New York, June 16.—"Self preservation is the first law of patriotism. America must recognize that she is in a war of self preservation," said Isaac Marcosson, American magazine writer, who has just returned from a five months' stay in Europe, when today he summed up the reasons demanded for a red blooded, nation wide participation in the great war.

"I left England thrilled with the thought that I would find America aroused and at work," he continued. "I had watched an American destroyer in a European port. I had seen American troops and American sailors cheered to the echo. I had seen on all sides crowds in great acknowledgment of America's entrance into this fight.

"But to my amazement I find America indifferent even after the terrible atrocities that have been committed. I find frantic appeals being made for enlistments, a deluge of literature urging the nation to subscribe for Liberty loan bonds which should be a self selling proposition. Everywhere the echo of that deadly slogan, 'business as usual.' America is making precisely the same mistakes that England made when there was a mighty flag waving, but with it a deadly inertia begot of self sufficiency.

Her Manhood Wasted.

"The Englishman solaced himself with the idea that England was an island and that the war would soon be over; therefore, why desert his business or his habits? The net result was that the flower of English young manhood was eliminated before England had become aware that Germany had put a ring of terror around Great Britain.

"What happened? Famine stared the nation in the face. There had to be recourse to conscription. Here I find the same fatal self effeciency that came near being England's undoing.

"Millions of Americans are still bitten with delusion that the Atlantic is God's bulwark against the invader. They have forgotten, for one thing, that the U-53, off the coast of Nantucket, annihilated the security that an ocean barrier once offered.

"They do not conceive how an overseas aircraft could carry on its destruction on this side of the ocean.

"In other words, the battle front of Europe is slowly but surely spreading from the old world to the new."

DRAFT MEN FOR GUARD AND ARMY?

These Men Will Be Taken Besides Those Sought for New Force Unless Ranks Are Filled by Volunteers.

SLUMP IN RECRUITING

Lowest Record Since April 1 Starts Officials on New Plan to Bring Bodies Up to War Strength.

Washington, June 16.—In addition to drafting men for the new army, officials said today that it will probably be necessary to draft men to fill up the regular army and the national guard. This view was expressed today in army circles when reports showed that only 1,000 enlisted yesterday, the lowest record since April 1.

Recruiting has been on the slump for some time.

NOTED THIEF GETS $235,000 IN JEWELS

Working as Servant in Wealthy Home, His Opportunity Comes When Employers Leave.

New York, June 16.—Pelham Manor police believe that they have a clue to the identity of the thief who robbed Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hobbs Allen, of Bolton Priory, of jewels valued at $225,000. It is hinted that the man they want is an international jewel thief, whose exploits have been equaled only in fiction.

Recently, a thief known all over Europe, but who never had operated in the United States, was driven here by the exigencies of war. He went to several employment agencies and took several positions. None suited him until he was placed at Bolton Priory a few weeks ago. The police now are searching for this man.

78 MORE SLACKERS ARRESTED IN CHICAGO

Meeting of League of Humanity Raided and Officers and Members Held.

Chicago, June 16.—Seventy-one additional slackers were taken into custody today. All were held for failing to register for the selective draft on June 5. Fifty-eight of them were Chicagoans.

They represented about half of those arrested, the others having been discharged without arraignment.

Sixty men were arraigned before United States Commissioner Mason this morning. Eight officers and members of the League of Humanity were seized in a raid last night at a meeting in a downtown hall which was attended by about 300 persons.

URUGUAY OPENS HER PORTS TO WAR VESSELS

Recedes From Position of Strict Neutrality Made Following U. S. Entrance Into War.

Montevideo, Uruguay, June 16.—The senate decided today that if American warships visit Uruguayan ports they will be treated as nonbelligerents.

Although Uruguay decreed its neutrality in the war between the United States and Germany she expressed sympathy with the United States. Warships rated as belligerents would be permitted to remain in port only 24 hours and would be limited as to the supplies which they might take on.

EXEMPT $200 FROM TAX FOR EACH CHILD

Senate Committee Also Reduces Stamp Tax on Checks in War Revenue Bill.

Washington, June 16.—An income tax exemption allowance of $200 for each dependent child of a taxable parent and reduction of the 2 cent stamp tax on bank checks to 1 cent were decisions reached today by the Senate finance committee revising the war tax bill.

FIFTY-FIVE PER CENT U. S. WOMEN "FLAPPERS"

Chicago, Ill., Fifty-five per cent of the women of the United States are "flappers," according to Mrs. Raymond Robins, of the woman's committee of the national council of defense. Mrs. Robins' definition of a "flapper" is a woman who does not work—women of all kinds, who live at home and are supported by their relatives.

SALESMANSHIP CONGRESS ENDS.

Detroit, Mich., June 16.—The world's salesmanship congress closed its convention here tonight after reelecting Norval Hawkins of Detroit, president.

Edward N. Hurley, of Chicago, former chairman of the federal trade commission, delivered the principal address.

Two hundred men at the University of Iowa during the past year earned $20,000 from positions obtained through the University employment bureau. Figures on the amount earned by students who found their own employment are not obtainable, but Robert E. Reinow, adviser of men, believes that the amount would be very large

The women of the state have organized a state defense council and expect to share in the work of the men's state defense council. A meeting was held in Des Moines recently and the officers of the organization elected and the course of work for the summer mapped out. Leaders in both the state suffrage and anti-suffrage movements were present.

Robert Beaman of Des Moines, aged 12, was accidentally shot through the right thigh by his cousin, Ed. Gathercole, aged 13, while playing in the rear of Gathercole's home, with a revolver. This is the second son of Mrs. Belle Beaman to be accidentally shot within the past eight months. Harry, another son, was shot through the back on Nov. 18, dying the same day.

During the last six weeks of the school year, practically every young woman student at the Iowa State College took some form of Red Cross work. The class of fifty young women taking surgical dressing produced in that time 15 dozen pajamas, three dozen bed shirts, one dozen bath robes, nineteen dozen compress pads and many other articles for hospital use.

One man, who gives the name of Grant Knight, and his age as twenty-nine years, is in the county jail at Atlantic, because he refused to register on June 5th. The authorities are awaiting advices from the federal authorities as to the case. The man had been in the county about ten days and had been working on the Peterson place two miles north of Marne.

The following resolution was introduced by Harry M. Belt of Des Moines at the recent Masonic Grand Lodge at Waterloo, in the interest of bigger crops: Whereas, this government is at war with a foreign nation and it is necessary that all food products possible be raised and saved. Therefore, be it resolved that the Masons of Iowa give the farmers all possible assistance in cultivating and caring for their crops. I therefore recommend that the grand secretary be instructed to send this resolution and such other information as desired to each master and secretary and urge their cooperation in this plan. The resolution was adopted.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK
1915

While the senator hesitated, there was the sound of light, flying footsteps racing down the marble corridor, followed by the appearance of Elsie Downey in the doorway.

"Oh, Mr. Smith," she cried out breathlessly, "I've seen the Simpson man! I met Mr. Waller out front, and he told me to tell——"

"Excuse me for just a few minutes, I beg," Smith interrupted, not remembering for the moment that he had seen her in the Mannersley offices. He turned back to Mallon. "Senator, permit me to accompany you."

Mallon, realizing the uselessness of delaying the encounter, swung open the door and motioned him to go before. The door shut behind the two men, leaving Elise poised in the other doorway, her momentous news unspoken.

CHAPTER XXX.

Elise had been in the room hardly more than five minutes when, above the roar of the crowd at the capitol, she heard the noise of shuffling feet in the corridor outside. There was in the sound of the footsteps something peculiar, as if an afflicted man dragged his feet or staggered heavily under some burden. She ran to the door and looked down the corridor.

What she saw moved her to instant sympathy.

"Bring her here—in here!" she said urgently to the person outside, and threw the door wide open.

The shuffling feet came nearer.

"Poor thing!" Miss Downey commented, awaiting the approach. "Ah, be gentle with her, can't you?"

The man Simpson appeared in the doorway. He practically carried Mary Leslie. He had been drinking heavily, and, as he stepped into the room, his grasp relaxed. His burden would have slipped to the floor but for the assistance of Elise, who sprang forward to help

The Leslie woman barely could summon the strength to put one foot before the other. She could not support her own weight The whiteness of her face was ghastly There was in it no trace of color except that of her carmined lips and the shadow of the blue lids over her closed eyes. Her arms hung limply at her sides, and now and then a dry sob shook her pitifully. She wore a light blue coat suit, the skirt of which was edged with fur, and the plume in her light blue hat was absurdly large. It was as if she had tried to redeem herself with clothes. As Elise caught her, she groaned.

Staggering and half falling between Elise and Simpson, she got as far as the big table against the left wall of the office and sank into a chair, letting her head fall weakly on her limp arms on the table.

Simpson stepped back from her and looked at her sullenly.

Elise turned upon him.

"Did she get hurt in the crowd?"

"Naw," he answered, his tone thick and surly; "she ain't hurt. She's just acting like a crazy woman. I was trying to find some place to put her. I got her into the building all right."

Elise bent over the thin figure.

"She ain't got good sense," Simpson said contemptuously.

He disgusted Elise.

"You horrid man!" he reproved him sharply.

The frail figure, around which she still had her arm, was shaken by a great tremor. To Elise, it felt as if some outside power had seized the woman and tugged at every fiber of her physical make up.

Mary lifted her head slowly and stared straight ahead of her. Elise bending forward, saw the wildness in her eyes, noted her terror stricken look, and caught the trembling of the painted lips. She stared in that dead, unknowing way for a long time while the dry sobs shook her. Then, raising her clenched hand a little way, she struck one blow on the table.

"Oh-h-h!" The moan was slow, heavy, as if the power, which had caught hold of her from the outside, had dragged it out of her.

The music of a band sounded louder than before It roused her.

"There it is again!" she said in a tense, hushed manner, her wild eyes still fixed. "It's rolling over the top of this building like water!" She sobbed again. "It's wonderful. It's awful—terrible!"

She turned her head slowly and looked up to Slise as if only half comprehending her presence. Simpson, surly and stupid, was silent.

"The crowd! The crowd—bigger than the ocean—stronger than a storm!"

Tears came into her eyes, and she growned.

"And I am a bad woman! Oh, I'm a bad woman!"

She wept conculsively and beat on the table in impotent gesture with her thin, gloved hands.

"Ah, don't cry," Elise tried to comfort her, removing the blue plumed hat. "Just rest."

"Say, Mary," Simpson protested, "what's the use of all this foolishness?"

The Leslie woman did not notice him. She started from her chair and dropped back into it again, spreading out her hands on the table.

"The crowd!" she marvelled. "I never saw a real crowd before. Oh, my God! Why didn't I see a crowd like that when I was a girl, a little bit of a girl? They were everywhere. They came from everywhere! The streets filled with marching feet, with flying feet!"

She spread her arms wide, expressing the futility of her attempt to describe all she had seen.

"They came from everywhere," she repeated her tone one of still, groping wonder, "from all the world, down every street, down all the avenues! There were oceans of people—men young and old; girls, laughing children—oh, the laughing children!—and women with babies in their arms, and white haired women. I talked to one white haired woman. She told me whisky had destroyed her husband and her two boys. No wonder there was a light in her eyes! And the bands and the banners! The music! It was like a battle, a wonderful battle."

She stood suddenly erect, her head to one side, listening to the faint roar of the distant crowd.

"There are enough people out there," she said, still standing, speaking straight ahead toward the window, "to tear this building down stone by stone, enough people to build a thousand buildings, enough people to do anything in the world—anything in the world. And th're singing! Did you hear them sing? A million voices, loud-Me Nearer.' Oh, they sang, 'Draw Me Nearer.' Oh, they san, 'Draw Me Nearer'!"

She shuddered and sank back into the chair, her voice a little shrill. She addressed neither Elise nor Simpson. The words, like the sobs, were being wrung from her, as if she were telling her woe to all the world. She talked because she had to talk, and because she suffered. It frightened Elise into stillness.

"I tell you, they sang 'Draw Me Nearer.' They sang that when I was converted, oh, so long ago! And after that a boy in a white robe standing on the east steps—the boy sang. The sunlight was on him, and he was bareheaded, and he had a voice like a woman. It was a beautiful voice. I think it must have reached right straight up to the throne of God. Oh, God, I know it did! He sang, 'Come Unto Him.' He sang, 'Come unto Him, all ye who mourn, for He can hear.' All ye who mourn! And all those people, those people from everywhere, sang it after him, sang it until the bands were dumb. It was an earthquake. It was awful! The boy's voice went right up to the Throne, and the people's voices went right up to the angel's ears. I know they did. It lifted me up."

She put both her hands before her face for a moment and moaned.

"It lifted me up and broke me," she wailed through her trembling fingers, "broke me! It was terrible—it was heaven—it was hell! Before I knew it, I was down on my knees, down on the cold, dirty asphalt, gasping, 'Oh, God—oh, God—oh, God'—and I didn't know why I did it. I had to do it! I was afraid at first, and then I wasn't afraid. The awful force of that singing, those people, went through me like fire—burned me up—lifted me up—and broke me."

She wept silently, the tears streaming through her gloved fingers. The crowd's singing swelled in volume.

"It broke me," she resumed in awe, her hands falling to the table, "because I was a bad woman. And I saw him, on his horse, there on the plaza—he always said he could ride, but I never believed him—I saw him on his horse, and up there on the stand with the bishop, and everybody loved him and cheered him."

She looked up to Elise, while terror triumphed in her eyes.

"Oh," she moaned, "I lied about him—him—and he's all right." A sob checked her utterance. "He's fighting against liquor, and he's good—like all those people out there, like the boy who sang, like the bishop!"

Elise, for the first time, realized who the woman was—the Mary Leslie who had attacked the agitator. And Simpson was there, the man about whom Albert Mitchell had questioned her. She grasped Mary by the arm, and, in her excitement, shook her roughly.

"Who'd you lie about?" she asked sharply. "Tell me! What man?"

Simpson advanced toward the two women.

"Aw, shut up, Mary!" he said threateningly. "What's the use of——"

Elise wheeled upon him furiously.

"Shut your own mouth!" she said angrily, and to Mary: "Who was it?" The sound of the crowd's singing grew while she paused for the reply. "Who was it? Was it Mr. Smith?"

Mary let her head fall on her arms.

"Yes—Smith," she sobbed.

"Come on, Mary," Simpson urged thickly, "let's get out of here."

Mary shook her head in slow refusal.

Elise spring to the oper doorway, banged the door shut, and stood with her back against it. Her blue, doll like eyes defied Simpson.

She turned toward the door on the right, the door through which the agitator had gone, and, still maintaining her position, began to call:

"Mr. Smith! Mr. Smith!"

She waited a moment and shrieked:

"Mr. Smith! Mr. Smith!"

After what seemed an eternity to the girl, the door swung open, and the agitator, followed by Edith, Mrs. Kane and Senator Mallon, appeared on the threshold.

Elise, fighting against the agitation that possessed her, pointed a trembling finger toward the sobbing woman at the table with her face hidden in her arms.

"She knows! She'll tell!" Elise almost shrieked. "Make her tell!"

CHAPTER XXXI.

Mary slowly raised her tear stained face. Her attitude was a study in dreariness.

Edith, with quick intuition, was the first to catch the full meaning of the scene.

"It wasn't true!" she voiced the thought that flashed into her mind.

She went swiftly to Mary and bent over her.

"It wasn't true, was it—your story about Mr. Smith?"

There was in her voice an anguish of appeal. She put her hand on the other woman's shoulder.

"Tell me," she said, a catch in her throat, "tell me it wasn't true."

Mary's fingers writhed against each other on the table. She shook her head in slow denial.

"And you know the truth!" Edith persisted. "What is it?"

"She'll tell, Miss Mallon," Elise assured, coming nearer.

The agitator stood in the center of the room, his chest rising and falling with the deep breaths he took. He looked like a man fighting for air.

"Who am I?" he asked the Leslie woman.

She lifted her glance to Edith's, and, indicating him with a weary gesteur of her hands, said in a low tone:

"I lied about him—but I knew him—in Shanghai."

The hand Edith had on her shoulder shook like a leaf before the wind.

"What do you mean? Tell me! What is it?"

"I knew him," Mary said dully, "but I wasn't his wife. He didn't run away from me."

She paused and shook her head slowly from side to side. Bitterness twisted her lips.

"There wasn't ever anything between him and me. Oh, great God, he was too good for me!"

She ended that with a wail.

Edith emplored her:

"Just what do you mean?"

Mary, with the weariness that seemed to envelop her and be a part of her, waved her left arm toward Simpson.

"Ask him. He knows."

She dropped her head on her arms and groaned.

Smith turned toward Simpson.

"Speak out!" he said imperiously. "Do you hear what she says? She says you know." He stepped closer to the man. "She says you know who I am."

Simpson, stupefied by the whisky he had drunk, and now terrified by the whole occurrence, admitted it.

"Yes, I know."

"Then, who am I?"

"You're John Garland," the other answered. "I am John Gardner."

"Garland?" Smith said wonderingly. He passed the back of his right hand across his brow. "Garland?" he repeated.

Mrs Kane was clutching the senator's arm in a viselike grip, but she did not know it. Mallon did not know it. They, like the others, were caught and held by the volcanic suddenness of the thing.

The agitator asked another question:

"Where am I from?"

"Virginia."

The woman with her head on her arms on the table sobbed audibly.

Smith commanded him again:

"Well! Speak out! What else?"

Simpson answered reluctantly, as if the other's voice and eyes could not be denied.

"You told me you were born in a little place called Wolftown. It is in the Virginia mountains somewhere, 20 miles from a railroad. You had some idea—when you were 16 years old—some idea of being a preacher. And you had read a lot of stuff about it. After that, you got to drinking and left home."

"And then?" Smith's tone showed his utter bewilderment.

"You batted around and just went to the dogs."

Mary lifted her head and shook off Edith's hand from her shoulder. She indicated Simpson.

"He was drunk last night," she said in that dull, dreary tone which seemed now a part of her. "He's drunk now. Let me tell you."

"Please, please, tell us," Edith said gently.

"We were out in Shanghai. Cardner—the man you call Simpson—took me out there It was a little over six years ago. He took me."

She tried to toss her head in scorn, but succeeded only in a gesture that emphasized her misery.

The One Perfect Government.

Mark Twain

Unlimited power is the ideal thing when it is in safe hands. The despotism of heaven is the one absolutely perfect government An earthly despotism would be the absolutely perfect earthly government if the conditions were the same, namely, the despot the perfect individual of the human race and his lease of life perpetual But as a perishable perfect man must die and leave his despotism in the hands of an imperfect successor, an earthly despotism is not merely a bad form of government, it is the worst possible.

PRINCE OF WALES TO MARRY COUSIN?

Princess Maud of Fife.

Edward Albert, Prince of Wales and heir apparent to the British throne, may wed his first cousin, Princess Maud of Fife, according to a report now circulating in London. English people do not like to see the heir to the throne marry a foreign princess. Princess Maud is granddaughter of the late King Edward, being the daughter of Alexandra Victoria, Duchess of Fife.

FRANCE TO ENCOURAGE STUDY OF ENGINEERING

Points to Progress of U. S. and Says Popularity of Engineering Is Responsible.

Paris. (by mail).—Farsighted observers declare that the engineer is the man of the future in France. It is not a mere supposition based upon the eventual reconstruction, but seems rather to be a deduction from the new spirit of the Frenchman. In the words of a professor of the Central Polytechnic school, France "trained its students before the war as if they should all enter the institute," and it is generally recognized as a fact that, in her hour of need, France felt the lack among her scientists of men able to give practical application to their discoveries.

France has had great engineers—a few of them—at all epochs. French engineers pierced the Isthmus of Suez, dredged the South American ports, built the seaports of the Levant, started the Panama Canal, gave the first impetus to the automobile industry and aviation, yet in its industrial enterprises before the war France employed an average of only one engineer for every 100 workmen, where Germany employed four. It is to this situation that many attribute the fact that France was losing its head in the automobile industry and had already passed in aviation by Germany when the war broke out.

The engineers of France came from the Central Polytechnic school of Arts and Trades, the School of Mines, and the School of Electricity, in all of which, professors complain, mathematics, which play the principal role, were taught for their own sake rather than as a means to an end. The elite of every generation in France for a century has thus, according to another professor, been led toward the ideal of mathematic abstractions and has developed a race of scientists, savants and bureaucrats.

To Follow American Plan.

M. Appel, dean of the faculty of sciences and an advocate of a thorough reformation of the educational system, is in favor of the adoption of the American plan of judging technical students at work in the school itself rather than by competitive examination. Senator Gay proposes to complete each of the French universities with a faculty of applied sciences, comprising instruction in all branches that correspond to the industries of the region in which the university is located. France has already a number of these regional technical schools which require only slight transformation in order to conform themselves to the proposed plan.

At Nancy there are the chemical, electrical and colonial institutes, with a brewing school and a dairy school. Lille had, before the German occupation an industrial chemical institute, while Lyons had a school of tanning chemistry and an agricultural institute. At Grenoble there is an electrical institute and a butter making school, while Toulouse has an electrical and chemical institute. These institutions in the opinion of experienced educators lack cohesion and completeness. Senator Gay proposes to give them official status to enable a more thorough organization.

"It was in America that old Albion learned to reform its methods," said M. Houlevigue, professor of the faculty of sciences at Marseilles. "It is to America, also, that we must go for guidance if we want the man of the future to be equal to histask."

M. Houlvigue points to the progress made in America during the last half century, before which most of the knowledge of technical science in the country was that gained by men with tools in their hand. "That is why America has introduced more of the practical into its technical education than European countries. We must profit from that lesson in France," he adds.

Economical motive power will be absolutely required in France after the war, and this, in the opinion of the best authorities, will be found only in the development of France's water power in the Alps, the Jura, the Vosges and the Pyrenees, and the development of three resources alone will call for the services of a great number of competent engineers.

As an object lesson of the necessity of looking more to the practical than to the theoretical, men who are considering this question point to the new under-secretary of state for transportation, M. Claveille, who before the war was general manager of the Western State railroad. Claveille never went to a technical school. He learned engineering in the hard school of experience, and in this great emergency, when France was facing a most serious crisis as a result of the congestion of her transportation lines, he was the only available man to solve the problem. They point also to the fact that, when it became necessary to intensify the production of munitions, the government was obliged to resort to the services of a college professor, Albert Thomas, while the railroads and waterways were, during the first two years of the war, in the hands of a man of letters.

War Names Translated.

From the Los Angeles Times.

Many of the names that appear in the war news have real meanings which are translatable into English. Of course many others are mere names that could not be translated, like Boston, Baltimore or Yonkers. Many of those in the Balkan countries are interesting. Here are a few examples, with their English meanings, the authority for which is Stephen Brozovich, the polyglot editor of the Croatian daily published in New York:

Dobrudja, the place from which everything that comes is good.
Bukovina, beech forest.
Belgrade, white city.
Transylvania, the land at the other side of the forest.
Bucharest, city of pleasure.
Rotherturm pass, red tower pass.
Cernavoda, black water.
Petroseny, Peter's hay.
Sepsiszentgyorgy, St. George of Seps' (Hermanstadt).
Jiul, mountains.
Zimnitza, chills.
Rahova, walnut town.
Struma river, stirrup river.
Strumnitza river, little stirrup river.
Monastir, the monastery.
Belaschitza mountains, white mountains.
Yablomitza river, poplar tree river.
Vasarhely, the market place.
Ostrova, Harpoon town.
Demir Hissar, Demir's castle.
Ochrida lake, the lake between the cliffs.
Uskuh, compact town.
Gladova, hungerville.
Brsa, quick
Radievatz, happy town.

Suspicious.

They hadn't been married very long when one evening Mr. Jones came home to find his bride in tears.

"My darling—my darling!" he exclaimed in dismay. "What ever has happened? Oh, don't weep like that! Tell your husband what is wrong."

"O-o-oh, John!" she gasped, as she choked back her sobs. "I—o-o-oh, I've lost my diamond engagement ring!"

And again she buried her face in her handkerchief. Then the silence roused her curiosity and she looked up to see her husband smiling strangely at her.

"Do not cry," he said in level tones, "I found it this morning in my trousers' pocket!"

Why She Is Hated.

Governor Whitman said at a banquet in Albany:

"Germany has the whole world against her because she has attempted to change the eternal verities. These eternal verities—that you mustn't shell a hospital ship, that you musn't murder babies, that you mustn't betray your trusting friends, and so forth and so on—all these things Germany has tried to change. But she has tried in vain.

"Germany reminds me of the child who used to hold out a dollar or two from his envelope every week. His wife suspected him, and on suspicion sure, she got a ready reckoner to check him up by.

"The next pay day, after consulting the ready reckoner, she said

"'Are you sure that's all, George?'

"George turned red.

"'Of course it's all,' he said, confusedly, with a cough.

"'Well, George, I got a ready reckoner here, and, according to it, I should get more.'

"'Let's see your ready reckoner,' said George.

"He examined the book, then tossed it contemptuously aside.

"'That ain't no good,' he said. 'It's last year's.'"

The DESTROYER

By BURTON E. STEVENSON

CHAPTER ONE (Continued.)

"Americans!" burst in Brisson. "Bah! They are not Americans! Germans, perhaps, or Austrians; but Americans, no! Those men, Gabrielle, have something to conceal!" and Brisson, frowning darkly, went back into the house.

Meanwhile the two pedestrians made their way rapidly along the dark and silent street without exchanging a word. There was in their faces a strange excitement, and they stared straight ahead, as though they dared not meet each other's eyes. At the end of a few moments, they came out upon the quays. Here the darkness of the narrow street gave place to the gray of the approaching dawn, and one of them took his watch from his pocket and looked at it.

"Nine minutes!" he said in guttural English, and in a voice strangely thick, as with some deep and barely repressed emotion.

The other nodded, and with common accord they turned to the right toward the great basin, where three or four men-of-war lay at anchor. The light increased from minute to minute, the horizon turned from gray to pearly white, and over the hills to the east a golden halo marked the spot where the sun would rise. They stopped to look at it, and then, stepping back into the recess of a doorway, directed their gaze toward a great battleship, anchored perhaps 300 yards away. As the minutes passed, they seemed scarcely to breathe, and their lips were twitching with nervous excitement.

Suddenly over the trees shot a long ray of yellow light, gilding the house tops, gilding the mast heads of the vessels in the harbor; and then, as though in answer to a signal, came a muffled roar from the anchored battleship. There was an instanst's silence, then the shrill voices of sentries sounding the alarm, the whirring of a gong * * *

A second roar drowned all lesser sounds, and then the high, thin notes of a bugle echoed across the water. The deck of the ship was alive with men; from her open ports wisps of angry smoke swirled upward into the morning air * * *

Above the babble of excited voices, rose a shout of command, the bugle shrilled "Sauve qui peut! Sauve qui peut! Sauve qui peut!" and the crew began leaping over the side; and then, straight in front of where stood the breathless watchers, a mighty column of black smoke leaped high into the air, mushroomed and drifted slowly away before the breeze. At the same instant came a frightful, rending crash, which seemed to shake the earth, and a foam capped wave swept across the harbor and dashed angrily against the quay. For one tense instant, all nature held her breath, and then came the splash and clatter of debris falling into the water and on the rocks, the rattle of broken glass from the houses along the quay; and finally, quivering through the air, rose the shrill, inhuman cry of men in mortal anguish.

The smoke, drifting lazily away, disclosed a mass of twisted wreckage, where, a moment before, La Liberte, the pride of the French navy, had swung at anchor.

"Ach Gott! Es ist doch wahr!" breathed one of the men, and stared rigid, fascinated; but the other laid a trembling hand upon his arm.

"We must hasten!" he whispered. "We must not stay here!"

"True!" agreed the other, and with a last glance at the wreck, strode away along the quay.

Already the city was awake; already frightened faces were peering from shattered windows, half clothed men were bursting into the streets, and voices shrill with fear were demanding to know what had occurred. But our travellers heeded them not. At the first corner they separated, and one of them made his way rapidly up into the town, while the other hastened along a dark and narrow lane parallel with the quay, and stopped at last before a tall, decrepit house, whose plaster, black with age, was flaking from its wall. On the door step sat a girl of 18 or 20, a dark shawl about her head, from whose shadow her face peered, strangely white.

"Is it by this way one gains the Frejus road?" he asked in English.

"Straight on to the end of the street, then to the left," answered the girl in the same tongue, speaking it readily and without accent.

"Thank you. This for your father," and thrusting his hand quickly into his pocket, he drew out a fat envelope, sealed with many seals, placed it in the girl's hand, and hurried on.

An hour later, the two travellers, reunited, Toulon well behind them, strode along a beautiful road skirting the Mediterranean, which stretched, a sheet of greenish-blue, away to the south. But, strangely enough, they did not even glance at this panorama. Instead, they walked with heads down, as though still fearing to meet each other's eyes.

Back in the narrow Rue du Plasson, the girl, her face still very white, reentered the house, closed and bolted the crazy door, and slowly mounted the dark staircase. From the street outside came excited cries, hoarse shouting, the clatter of running feet; but she did not stop to listen. Indeed, she did not seem to hear, but dragged herself up from step to step as though a weight was on her feet.

The house was of four stories, and she did not pause until she reached the top one. A stream of yellow light poured through an open door, and she entered and closed the door behind her. A lighted candle stood on a table in the center of the narrow room, but already the rays of the sun were beating against the single window. Besides the table, the room contained two chairs, a rusty stove, and a cupboard in which were a few dishes. Against one wall stood a cot, and the back of the room was curtained off, no doubt for the girl's sleeping chamber.

She stood for a moment staring listlessly before her, as though trying to remember what she should do next; then she laid the envelope on the table, blew out the candle, started a fire in the stove, and placed a kettle upon it. Finally she drew a chair to the window, sat down, and looked out across the harbor.

Opposite the house was a long, low building, the wine market, so that her view of the harbor was unobstructed. It was alive with boats, circling around or speeding towards a black and shapeless mass, above which some shreds of smoke still lingered. Her lips were moving as she stared at it, and her face was bloodless; and she pressed her hands to her breast, as though in pain.

At last the singing of the kettle roused her. She seemed to pull herself together; then she rose, made the coffee and placed some rolls upon the table. Finally she picked up a knife, and with the handle smote sharply against the wall. A moment later, the door opened and a man came in.

At first glance, one thought him very old, for his hair was white as snow, his body shrivelled and bent, his face lined and sallow. But at the second glance, one perceived that these were not the marks of age but of the ravages of the fiery spirit which dwelt within the body and which peered from the burning eyes. At this moment, they gleamed with a luster almost demoniacal.

"Breakfast is ready, father," said the girl. "And—and the man came past, as you expected, and gave me that for you," she added, with a little gesture toward the sealed envelope.

The man advanced to the table, picked up the envelope, and walked on to the window. For a moment he stood staring out across the harbor; then there was the sound of ripping paper, a moment's silence, and he thrust the envelope into his pocket and turned back to the table.

"It is well!" he said, and sat down. "It is well, Kasia!"

"I am glad of that, father," she answered, in a low voice, and poured his coffee.

He ate rapidly and as though very hungry; but the girl made only a pretence of eating. At last the man looked at her.

"We leave at once," he said. "We are to take the first boat for America. Are you not glad?"

"Very glad, father."

"Why is it you so love America, Kasia?" he asked.

"You also love it, father. It is the land of freedom—even for us poor Poles, it is the land of freedom!"

"The land of freedom!" he echoed. "And I love it, as you say. It is because of that I hasten back; I have in store for her a great honor, which will make her more than ever the land of freedom! For she is not free yet, Kasia—not for poor Poles, nor for poor Jews, nor for the poor of any nation. The poor cannot know freedom—not anywhere in the whole world. They must labor, they must sweat, they may not rest if they would live, for the greater part of what they earn is stolen from them. But I will change all that! Oh, you know my dream—no more poverty, no more suffering, no more cruelty and tyranny and injustice—but all men, all the nations of the world, joined in brotherhood and love! This day at dawn I struck the first blow for freedom! Do you know what it was, my daughter? Did you hear the roar of the waters as they opened? See!"

He caught her by the wrist and dragged her to the window.

"See!" he cried again, and pointed a shaking finger toward the black hulk in the harbor.

But she did not look. Instead she shrank away from him and pressed her hands before her eyes, and shook with a long shudder.

And after a moment, the light faded from her father's face, and left it old and worn; his eyes grew dull and moody; his lips trembled.

"Every cause must have its martyrs," he said, as though answering her thought, and his voice was shaking with emotion; "even the cause of freedom; yea, that more than any other, for the battle against tyranny is the most desperate of all!"

And dropping her wrist, he went slowly from the room.

Striking Though the Air.

From the Indianapolis News

Those Americans who recall that the first airplanes to be used in a military campaign was used on the Mexican border by Americans troops in 1911 are amazed to learn that the allied powers are turning out about 4,000 airplanes a month, and that in many quarters this is considered the most important branch of the army. But such is the case, and such has been this country's part in developing the airplane in its early stages, that the allied powers expect great things of us. Whether we shall measure up to the expections is a serious question, for today the United States has practically no air fleet.

According to a statement issued by the Aero Club of America, entente and American military authorities who have studied the subject are agreed that the addition of 10,000 aviators today to the allies' present aerial forces would insure blinding German batteries and preventing German aviators from conducting operations over or near the allies' lines. In the air battles preceding the last advance on the west front, the British and French aviators clearly demonstrated their superiority. But they did so at great cost, for their losses in men were large. And it is estimated that, owing to hard service, the life of an airplane is only six weeks. Hence the need for men and machines.

Owing to the necessity of training officers for the land forces and for registering and choosing men to fill out the American land contingent, little public attention has been paid to the air service. But the government is working hard to meet the need of the allies for more aviators. It has summoned the best engineers in the United States to help in designing and building machines, and has sent out calls for men between 21 and 30 to enter the aviation training camps. But it is by no means prepared, and whether it will be by this time next year depends to some degree on the willingness of young Americans to serve in this, the most exciting and useful branch of the service.

Seward Prosser.

Seward Prosser, prominent banker and director of many big business enterprises, is chairman of the Red Cross war finance committee which proposes to raise $100,000,000 during the week of June 18-25. This is the largest amount America has ever been asked to contribute to war relief of any sort. Mr Prosser will personally direct the work in New York.

KEEPING THE CITY ANCIENT

Rothenburg, Germany, Requires That New Buildings Shall Be Built in Old Style.

There is less sameness, more personality, to be found among the different cities of the German empire than in any other great modern state. Often you can travel a few miles from one city to another and it is as if you had crossed an international boundary and stepped into a new land. This fact is due in large part to the fact that German unity came so late. Many of these same little cities were independent and autonomous for as many centuries as they have been parts of the German empire for decades. They have built up a tiny nationalism peculiar to themselves, flavoring their Germanism with a spice that is all their own.

Such a city above all others is Rothenburg, little red Rothenburg, with its grim walls and towers, its air of ancient sleepiness carefully preserved, its 10,000 good burghers, who are Rothenburgers before all else, says the National Geographic Magazine. Almost every German cherishes a friendly affection for Rothenburg; it is such a homely, comfortable place, with a neatness and a miniature tessellated beauty that it is dear to the German heart.

Rothenburg is a city almost every house of which is quaint and interesting. Most of the houses are centuries old, and when one has to be replaced municipal regulations ordain that it shall be replaced with one that is built in ancient style, and blends harmoniously with the whole. The fine discipline the burghers of Rothenburg lay upon themselves out of their own artistic sense of the fitness of things, rather than as a bait for the tourists, for as a matter of fact, few tourists visit Rothenburg.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply on the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

At little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding skin. Just think! You can lift off your corns and calluses now without a bit of pain or soreness. If your druggist hasn't freezone he can easily get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

Too Much.

George Ade said at a wedding breakfast at St. Joseph:

"Once, in putting on a new play of mine, the manager refused to have a young married couple in the cast.

"'I'll take on one or the other, George,' he said, 'but not both.'

"'Why not both?' said I. 'They're both clever.'

"'That may be,' said he, 'but the public, George, don't care to see a man making love to his own wife.'

"'Looks too much like acting, eh?' said I."

CLIMBED STAIRS ON HER HANDS

Too Ill to Walk Upright. Operation Advised. Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This woman now raises chickens and does manual labor. Read her story:

Richmond, Ind.—"For two years I was so sick and weak with troubles from my age that when going up stairs I had to go very slowly with my hands on the steps, then sit down at the top to rest. The doctor said he thought I should have an operation, and my friends thought I would not live to move into our new house. My daughter asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had taken it with good results. I did so, my weakness disappeared, I gained in strength, moved into our new home, did all kinds of garden work, shoveled dirt, did building and cement work, and raised hundreds of chickens and ducks. I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and if these facts are useful you may publish them for the benefit of other women."—Mrs. M. O. One Result of War.

The "plant your bit" idea is bringing one distinct change into the lives of many New Yorkers. The repugnance of citizens of this big town to the idea of carrying bundles and packages is disappearing before the onslaught of seed planting.

It is a common sight now to see a nattily clad spatted and cane-bearing gentleman lugging up paper bags of onion sets or rhubarb roots on the subway to be installed in miniature backyard gardens or even on roofs or in window boxes. It isn't too much to expect that New York will yet become a market-basket town like Washington, D. C., and other cities where the women, regardless of position or affluence, go down to market every morning and do their own buying.—New York Sun.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine — double strength — is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.

Started Right in to Fight.

"They quarreled immediately after the wedding ceremony."

"That so? While the guests were there?"

"Yes, right in the presence of everybody. It seemed a disgraceful thing to do until I caught the idea."

"What was the idea?"

"It seemed he wanted to convince all of us that he was not marrying her to escape war."

Canadian Farmers Profit From Wheat

The war's devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and wheat near $2 a bushel offers great profits to the farmer. Canada's invitation is therefore especially attractive. She wants settlers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves by helping her raise immense wheat crops.

You can get a Homestead of 160 acres FREE and other lands at remarkably low prices. During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax.

Mixed farming as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses full of nutrition are the only food required for beefer dairy purposes. Good schools, churches, markets convenient, climate excellent.

There is an extra demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. The Government is urging farmers to put extra acreage into crops. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or DISTRESSING ACCIDENT—Last Saturday evening, while Little Miss Gwendlewyn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tanner, was playing about the farm she fell in such a manner as to cause a compound fracture of her left arm close to the wrist. She was rushed to town by auto and after consultation by local doctors, it was decided best to take her the Park hospital at Mason City at once. They were unable to reduce the fracture that evening and before the arm could be set Sunday, gangrene had set in and in order to save the childs life it was necessary to amputate her arm close to the shoulder. The arm was broken so badly that the bones were protuding which is likely the reason the arm became infected. Her life was feared for awhile but she is recovering nicely from the shock at present. The young Miss and her parents have the sincere sympathy of their many friends.

Last winter some kinds of bituminous coal sold for $9.00 per ton at one time. Should corn get as low as 60 cents per bushel, which it probably will, it would be cheaper to burn corn than coal, taking the hauling both ways into consideration. would not that start the "slow-pokes" in congress? That would send an investigation of the coal business that would discover why $3.00 at the mines swells more than double in a one hundred mile haul. There wouldn't be a thousand cars of coal on track in Cedar Rapids, Des moines and marshalltown, held there for weeks in order to keep the prices up. What in thunder are Cummins, Kenyon, Woods, Haugen and others in Washington for if they can't get an investigation of the coal thieves that will get the nigger out of the dump and keep him out? And there is no relief in sight. Coal is up and going higher. Nothig is done or has been done to regulate the business. It's enough to make populists socialists and a close run to anarchy of the consumers of coal. If nothing else will do confiscation of the coal mines and government control will be demanded next.—Britt Tribune

Garner Signal Sells Out

A deal was recently made whereby E. F. Kluckhohn sold the Garner Signal to Frank Clark recently of the Algona Advance Mr Kluckhohn has been publishing the Signal for a number of years and will undoubtedly reenter the newspaper game in some college town where his daughter and son can continue their school work.

We have known Mr. Clark for a long time and he will give Garner and Hancock county one of the best papers they have ever had, if the business men of Garner wake up. It takes money to run a real newspaper and Brother Clark is capable of doing it and will see that they get it providing he receives sufficient patronage at a "et live" rate

GERMAN ATROCITIES-Andy Olson, First Minnesota Field Artillery recruit While in Minneapolis with the Hutchinson recruits I happened onto something that the other home boys did not see and that made my blood boil. After serving on the border. Jack Maloney, a Minnesota guardsman, received an honorable discharge and went straight to Canada and enlisted and was sent to France. While on scout duty he was captured by a party of German soldiers on flying hike, and they had no time to take him to the rear. But they didn't propose to let Jack do any more fighting. An officer ordered a soldier to take a sabre and whack off his thumb and all but two small fingers on both hands, and then they left him to bleed to death, which he nearly did before reaching his own lines. As he held up his mutilated hands and told the story to his old friends there in Minneabolis, the tears rolled down his cheeks. He left Minneapolis, a perfect specimen of physical manhood and is now a wreck, his life blighted. Does this make me want to stay out of the war game? No. It makes me want to get in it—right into the thick of it. They can't order me to Europe too soon. I want a chance to help punish the Prussianism that whacked the hands off poor Jack Maloney, that shoots trained nurses and tears men, women and children from their homes in Belgium and France and transports them like slaves to Germany.—Hutchinson, (Minn.) Leader.

Red Cross Drive Now On

On account of the press of other matters and following closely upon the Army Y. M. C. A. drive, the committee having the Red Cross subscription in charge, for the east half of the county will not attempt to make the collection of the amount allotted until some time next week.

The amount allotted this county by the State Board was $6,900.00. Of this amount the east half of the county must raise $3,450.00, which has been divided among the townships as follows:

Concord	$1,200
Ell	400
Avery	400
German	250
Twin Lakes	250
Ellington	400
Madison	300
Garfield	250

This is one of the most necessary causes in connection with the war, as it is not a question of raising funds to make war but of raising funds to make the war in which we are engaged less destructive to human life and health.

This Red Cross work will help to bring our Hancock county boys back home with whole limbs instead of cripples, and in good health instead of diseased.

The committee desires to urge upon the people of every township that they see that their allottment is raised, and that neither Hancock county nor any township in the county be classed as slackers. The Committee

NOTE—The various committees appointed by the chairman of this township, F A Arnold, gave the township a pretty thorough canvas. Wednesday and the allotted amount was easily raised. If you were not approached it is not yet too late to donate to this most worthy cause. It makes no difference what YOUR opinion is regarding this war; there are only two sides and two sides only, either you are an American and supporting your government or you are a "slacker", "kaiserite" and are disloyal to the good old U. S. A. which either you or your forefothers took a vow to support and defend. If you do not believe in doing your duty be a man and let the proper authority know so you can either be deported or sent to some detention camp where you belong. Some will say that this article is out of place, but we say no. There are people in every community who can well afford to donate to Red Cross work but refuse to do so, that would not be so bad if they did not put up a hyphenated argument and insult the solicitors. Remember, that the Red Cross is for the benefit of suffering humanity and are neutral. It does not make any difference to them when they have an opportunity to render aid, whether you are German, American, English, French, Russian or even an Irishman, the Red Cross is ready to take care of you and relieve your misery. So subscribe today and help care for some wounded brother, maybe your neighbors or your own boy, who knows Even if the allotted amount has been raised it would be an honor to this community to raise twice the amount. A list of those subscribing from this township will be published next week. Will your name be there or will it be among those missing who could easily afford to contribute?

Infant Is Called

Alice Mabel, infant daughter of Mr. Mrs. R. W. Baack was born Monday morning, June 25th and was called home on the afternoon of the same day. Though her stay in this world was short does not lighten the weight of sadness for her parents and today their is sorrow and gloom where before there was laughter. That is the way of this world and God's call must be heeded. The sympathy of the many friends are extended to the sorrow stricken parents in this their hour of darkness and grief. The little remains were interred in Calvary cemetery Tuesday afternoon.

Flies are More Dangerous Than You Think

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But, at least, we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease-carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

THE KLEMME TIMES

M. M. MAGNER, Publisher.

KLEMME, IOWA

The United States navy has the distinction of being somewhat older than the government itself, for nine months before the actual Declaration of Independence congress authorized the construction of two "national" cruisers and appointed a committee to purchase vessels to form the nucleus of a fleet. Within three months of its appointment this committee got together 14 armed vessels and appointed a personnel of officers, among whom was the famous old sea dog, Paul Jones. During the war of the revolution the infant navy captured as many as 300 prizes, but suffered so heavily that by the time peace was declared it had almost ceased to exist. A new start on a more ambitious scale was made in 1794.

Authority has been voted by St. Matthew's German Lutheran congregation to the trustees to sell at auction the church property, built at Hagerstown, Md., in 1871. It is thought the money will be divided among the former pastor, the Rev. E. C. Ide, who resigned because of old age, the benevolent institutions of the Lutheran General Synod and some of the indigent members of the church.

It is believed that the rolling stock, roadbeds, rails, sleepers and ballast of the 28,516 miles of railroad in Germany will be practically renewed after the war. This will furnish iron foundries, manufacturers of railway material, and stone quarries with contracts for several years and provide thousands of skilled mechanics and laborers with employment.

The residents of the monkey house object seriously to being disturbed after dark, and if one of the keepers happens to take a light to their quarters they scold him unmercifully. On the other hand, it would probably take a dynamite bomb to arouse the rhinoceros, and it is not uncommon, the zoo keepers say, to find the rats biting holes in his thick hide.

A windmill constructed from a wagon wheel and barrel staves, a gas pipe for driving shaft, and two wooden pulleys with belts, has been attached by a South Dakota man to his wife's washtub. With this contrivance wind does not only the family washing, but also duns the chicken feed grinder, an emery wheel, an egg beater and a churn.

A decoction of the juice of the grape, which is called "dibs" by the Arabs, was called by the same name as honey by the Hebrews. It forms an article of commerce in the east. It was "dibs," and not ordinary bee honey, which Jacob sent to Joseph (Genesis viii, 11), and which the Tyrians purchased from Palestine (Exodus xxvii, 17)

John E. Baker, of York, Pa., and cousin, Daniel Baker, of Baltimore, have offered the government a plantation of 500 acres free of charge along the Potomac river as a site for a training cam, or a mobilization point The property is located 24 miles south of Washington It is one of the oldest homesteads in America

When J Droucker Plank of Phillipsburg, Pa. a lone recruit, arrived at the railroad station to leave for the army, there was a band and a crowd of his friends, who serenaded him The leader of the band has declared that whenever any of the citizens leave for government service the band will give them a fitting sendoff

The family of A E Spencer, station master of Oakland, Cal., has been in the transportation business for 137 years. Evidence of this is in Spencer's possession and is in the form of a ticket issued by Spencer's great grandfather in 1780 to one Ann Smith for a stage trip from Portsmouth to London.

In the interior of an old maple tree cut down in South Newfane, Vt., on Frank C Kelsey's land, were found pieces of the ends of an old board fence with nails which fastened it to the tree when it was much smaller The tree had grown outside the nails and ends of board six inches or more.

"A Snore Guard" has been formed in Company 2 at Ft. Sheridan, Ill. Complaints have been made of hearty snores disturbing the blissful slumber of the tired rookies. George V. Seibold and W. S. Wood formed themselves into a committee of two to put a muzzle on the snorers.

Pittsburgh golfers have launched a campaign among devotees of the links to organize a hand grenade squad. The muscular action of a golf player and a bomb thrower are virtually the same. They say that trenches will be easy after their experience in bunkers and sand traps.

If you wish to make starch and let it get cold before starching the clothes, try this plan After starch is made and while still hot, sprinkle cold water all over the top, as though you were sprinkling clothes. You will find no scum on top and can use every speck of it.

James Schreeder, of Highland Falls, N. Y., reported that in fishing eight hours he landed from the Hudson river a catch which weighed altogether, according to his scales, nearly half a ton. He caught shad, herring and striped bass weighing from one to 12 pounds each.

One-tenth of the income of the Evangelical union of Spaniards, an organization recently formed in Buenos Aires, Argentina, to give material and spiritual aid to all protestant Christians of Spanish parentage, is devoted to the cause of religious liberty in Spain.

An apple tree in the front yard of the Joseph Zavis farm, near Dover, Del., blossoms each spring with pink roses exactly like those growing on a rose bush, with the exception that they grow in clusters like ramblers. The tree bears no fruit.

One hundred and seventy-three members of the Boadil Caravan of the Order of the Alhambra signed an enlistment roster at a banquet held in Chicago, offering themselves to President Wilson for any branch of service.

A Worcester woman who bought a pair of blue silk stockings found on washing them that she had a pair of pale yellow stockings, and also a pair of gray stockings became blue after being washed.

Four months ago there was not a single foreigner or a person of foreign birth in Clay county, Kentucky, but three German Jews have since settled in Manchester and established a store.

The eagles go to sleep just about the time their neighbors in the owl cage are waking up, while the bears during the winter months apparently sleep all day and night, too.

With prices soaring everywhere, Middletown, Del., has the distinction of being a town where a price has come down, dealers having reduced milk from 3 to 6 cents a quart.

PROTEST USING FUND FOR NEW CANTONMENT

Cedar Rapids Seeks to Stop Diversion of $1,000,000 State Defense Money.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 23.—Telegrams signed by a number of prominent business men were sent to Governor Harding today, warning him not to use any of the $1,000,000 fund for Iowa defensive purposes to build the army cantonment at Des Moines.

Part of the fund is to be used it is rumored in construction of sewers, bridges and other work at the camp. The telegram said the use of money for such purposes was unlawful and would spell his political death. Business men in other cities are to be urged to send similar messages.

FAMILY OF FOUR SLAIN; TRAGEDY ON IOWA FARM

Toledo, Ia., June 23.—The entire Ludicek family consisting of Mrs. Joseph Ludicek, her two sons, James and Albert, and daughter Helen were found dead shortly before noon today at the Ludicek farm eight miles northeast of Toledo by Joe Buresh, a soninlaw of Mrs. Ludicek.

A rifle shot had been fired through the head of each. The weapon, a 22 caliber target rifle, was found beside the body of Albert, the eldest of the dead sons, 21 years old, who the coroner believes responsible for the tragedy while temporarily insane. The coroner after learning the circumstances decided that no inquest would be necessary.

Albert Ludicek's body was found lying on the kitchen floor, while his brother and sister were found in their beds upstairs and the mother in her bedroom adjoining the kitchen.

LEMARS TO HOLD RALLY FOR RED CROSS TONIGHT

LeMars, Ia., June 23.—The first concerted onset by the LeMars and Plymouth county chapters of the National Red Cross society will be in the nature of a country wide rally which will be held in a theater Friday night. Attractions will include a program by the LeMars military band, songs by a double quartet, a speech by J. U. Sammis, and popular songs by the audience. Practically all of the fore part of the week was occupied in forming commitees and in instituting chapters in the smaller towns of the county. Rain prevented the staging of a concert and public demonstration.

FINE PERSUADES FARMER TO KEEP HIS MOUTH SHUT

Boone Ia., June 23.—"Keep your mouth shut," was told to Zacharia Hughes, an engineer by Mayor Baker when the former was hauled before the municipal tribunal for alleged treasonable utterances, and he is keeping it shut for fear he will land in jail. He paid a fine of $25.

"Not a man, not a dollar for war," was the notice on a button which he wore He was warned to take off the button and began a tirade against the belligerents, and he was brought into court and fined $100, which was reduced to $25 after he had promised to keep his mouth shut.

WRIT OF ERROR SECURES RELEASE FOR LOCKHART

Washington. D. C., June 23.—The circuit court of appeals here yesterday granted a writ of error in the case of Andrew F. Lockhart, publisher of Chain Lightning, who was sentenced to Leavenworth penitentiary for alleged violation of the law in sending forbidden matter through the mails. Attorney Seth Tweedale, of Aberdeen, procured the decision which released Lockhart from prison under bail to await a review of the case in the upper court.

HAWARDEN PLANS GREAT INDEPENDENCE CELEBRATION

Hawarden, Ia., June 23.—The greatest Fourth of July celebration ever planned has been arranged by the Community club of Hawarden. The finance committee has raised about $1,200 and arrangements have just been made with Aviator Smith, of Chicago for afternoon and evening flights. Smith will fly in a new type of military tractor biplane. There will be a parade in the morning, followed by an oration by the Rev. Wallace Hamilton, of Sioux City. Hawarden is certainly enthusiastic over the prospects for the Fourth.

LEMARS—After having been in poor health for about two years Sieben Siebens, who had lived in Plymouth county for 29 years, died here yesterday. Mr. Siebens was 79 years of age. Death was due to heart trouble. He was a well to do farmer and is survived by a daughter and two sons.

JEFFERSON—Lyle Rake, 10 years old, son of Chief of Police Rake, was badly burned about the hands last night when he fell from a tree he was climbing and caught hold of an electric light wire carrying 2,300 volts. He will lose one hand as a result of the accident.

CEDAR RAPIDS—Prof. B. H Bailey, of the department of zoology of Coe college, died this morning, aged 40 years. He had been with the college for 15 years.

COUNCIL BLUFFS—Mrs. M. Nelson, South Seventh street, reported to the police that burglars entered her home with a skeleton key, moved the furniture and stole a $50 rug.

ONAWA—Plans are being made for a patriotic celebration to be held in Onawa on July 4. Among the speakers will be Harvey Ingham, of Des Moines.

FIRST FARM LOAN BONDS TO BE ISSUED IN JULY

Washington, D. C., June 23.—The first issue of farm loan bonds, it is announced, will be offered the public about July 1. From $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 of the bonds, bearing 4½ per cent interest, probably will be issued within a year.

The 12 federal land banks, through the farm loan board, have concluded an arrangement with a group of investment bankers under which half of the issue, up to $30,000,000 during the next six months, will be marketed by the bankers.

It is understood that the bonds will be sold at par.

CHARGE WHOLESALE SLACKING.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 22.—Warrants for the arrest of 102 persons charged with failure to register June 5 for the selective draft were issued here by D. M. Hammack, United States commissioner. Deputy United States marshals began last night a search for the alleged draft evaders.

The United States attorney's office announced that a campaign of education among Mexicans and other aliens in southern California counties would be made to inform them of the necessity of registering for military service.

5,000 MEN REQUIRED ON CANTONMENT JOB

Des Moines Firm Gets Contract —To Work Night and Day —Ready September 1.

Washington, D. C., June 22.—The war department today awarded the contract for the cantonment at Des Moines to Charles Weitz & Sons, of Des Moines. The Des Moines firm won out over various outside contractors. The war department announced that Maj. M. A. Butler, of the quartermaster's corps, would be in charge of construction, and Capt. Joseph C. Kay his assistant. The Des Moines delegation to get the contract awarded locally was greatly pleased.

The value of the contract is between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. It will very according to whether the war department wants certain requirements fulfilled or otherwise. These contracts allow the contractor cost, plus a profit that will range about 8 per cent. Mr. Weitz, who is here, conferred with Colonel Little of the quartermaster's corps about details. Representative Dowell arranged the conference.

Mr. Weitz has practically all plans of procedure mapped out and as soon as he got the contract sent out a big list of prepared telegrams to material men and others. He said about 12 subcontracts will be let. He will need about 5,000 men. He agrees to have the cantonment ready for occupancy about September 1. He said work will go on day and night. Boy scouts will be used as messenger boys and practically all construction in Des Moines, apart from this, will be halted more or less completely until the cantonment is built.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ENDS ROCK VALLEY SESSIONS

Rock Valley, Ia., June 23.—The 27th annual convention of the Epworth League of the Sheldon district, northwest Iowa conference, convened at Rock Valley Tuesday and Wednesday.

A very interesting program was rendered. The keynote address was ably given by Rev. S. H. Turbwille, of Spirit Lake, and Dr. Edwards, returned missionary from South America, gave the principal address at the assembly, speaking on missions.

The convention passed resolutions upholding the president and governor in their defense of the government and pledged loyalty to the nation in this hour of need.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS IN SESSION AT CAPITAL

Des Moines, Ia., June 23.—Iowa members of the United Spanish War Veterans opened their 11th annual encampment here today, with an extensive business and social program to occupy their attention until adjournment tomorrow night.

The five ladies' auxiliaries of the state opened their sessions at the same time, and the state department president, Mrs. Hattie M. Agard, of Dubuque, will organize the auxiliary department, which has been permitted since the organization of the auxiliary to Camp Lawton at Des Moines recently

Gov W. L. Harding will be guest of honor at a dinner and entertainment tonight and will be the principal speaker. The dinner will be followed by the annual ball.

HOLSTEIN DRUGGIST NEW HEAD OF STATE SOCIETY

Dubuque, Ia., —une 23.—The Iowa Pharmaceutical association, which has been in annual session here since Monday morning, completed its work yesterday afternoon and adjourned after selecting Fort Dodge as the place for holding the 1918 convention.

The following officers were elected. President, Thomas Watts, Holstein; first vice president, John G. Becker, Dubuque, second vice president, George Judish, Ames, third vice president, T. W. Dowds, Guthrie Center, secretary, Al Falkenhainer, Algona; treasurer, J. M. Lindley, Winfield.

HAWARDEN MAN KILLED WHEN MOTOR OVERTURNS

Hawarden, Ia., —une 23.—E. H Brown was instantly killed due to the overturning of a Ford car on the Harrisburg road six miles south of Sioux Falls Tuesday night. He was accompanied by John Storts, of the Hawarden Ice company, who escaped without a scratch, being thrown clear of the car. It took several minutes to extricate Brown from underneath the car and it was found that his skull was badly crushed and he also suffered internal injury. He leaves a young widow.

CORRECTIONVILLE PRODUCES LIBERALLY FOR RED CROSS

Correctionville, Ia., June 23.—A great Red Cross rally was held at the opera house Tuesday evening, Dr. Jepson, of Sioux City, delivering the address. More than $1,000 was secured and team work through the community today will add largely to this sum. The largest subscription was made by Attorney Earl Edmunds, $100 Large numbers of $50 and $25 subscriptions were made.

RED CROSS CAMPAIGN AT ONAWA BRINGS RESULTS

Onawa, Ia., June 23.—In a vigorous campaign by the local Red Cross chapter and the national council of defense league, over $3,000 was raised here Tuesday. An automobile tour of the county for the purpose of gaining subscriptions began yesterday.

ELECTRIC PAD FIRES BED; CHEROKEEAN BADLY BURNED

Cherokee, Ia., June 23.—John Potter, of this city, had an experience recently which might have resulted far more serious. Mr. Potter had placed an electric pad under his shoulders and had fallen asleep. In some manner the current ignited the bed clothing which burned his shoulders severely. The floor of the room also caught fire and if Mr. Potter had not been awakened by the burning bed clothing the fire might have caused serious consequences. Mr. Potter's injury, while quite painful is not believed to be serious.

WILL BEGIN WORK SOON ON CHEROKEE POSTOFFICE

Cherokee, Ia., June 21.—In a statement made public today it is believed that the new government building to be erected at the corner of Second and Will streets will be under way before the close of the present season.

Postmaster Wiweke has received a letter from former Congressman Steele, announcing that the contract for the new building will be awarded July 15 Plans for the building were prepared some time ago and the funds necessary have already been appropriated.

PART OF IOWA CORN CROP IS TOTAL LOSS

Many Fields Must Be Plowed Under or Abandoned—Gardens Hurt by Frost.

Des Moines, Ia., June 22.—That Iowa's corn yield may be somewhat reduced by bad growing conditions this spring and because it is too late to replant is indicated in today's report of the Iowa weather and crop service for the week ending June 19. The report in full says:

"Another cool week has further retarded the growth of corn, but abundance of sunshine and comparatively dry weather has been favorable for field work over the greater part of the state, and has greatly improved the color and general condition of the crop. Bottom grounds, however, are still in bad condition. Much replanting has been done, and more will be done if possible, but a considerable of the original corn acreage, especially in the southern counties, will be used for sorghum, Sudan grass, millet, etc., and some will probably have to be abandoned. Small grains, grass, potatoes and truck crops are doing well. Rye, early oats, timothy and clover are heading and the first cutting of alfalfa is being cured. Cold rains during the blooming period were injurious to strawberries. Other fruits are reported to be in good condition generally, although high winds have caused apples and pears to fall badly Frost in the northern counties on the morning of the 15th damaged garden truck, and in some localities on low ground nipped corn and oats."

EPWORTH CONVENTION AT SCHALLER TOMORROW

Correctionville, Ia., June 22.—The Ida Grove district convention of the Epworth League will meet in annual convention at Shaller, June 21-22. An address of welcome to the visiting delegates will be made by Miss Mildred Dakin, president of the Shaller league and response by Miss Inez Schroeppel, of Holstein. The Rev. Dr W H. Spence, of Fort Dodge, representative of the Epworth League board of control, will deliver the address the first evening which will be followed by an informal reception for all delegates. Some 200 or more are expected to be in attendance.

A program on the problem of "Efficiency" will be put on Friday in which Rev S. M. Van Cleve, of Ida Grove, Rev. M P Arrasmith, of Sac City, Rev J V. Madison of Quimby, Miss Carrie Bartlett, a missionary at home on furlough from China, Rev T K Holliday of Nemaha, Mrs W F McQuitty of Correctionville, will take part The Rev J R Tumbelson, of Galva, has charge of the song services The closing address will be given by Dr E M Evers of Des Moines The business session of the convention for the election of officers and transaction of other business will be held Friday forenoon

CONFERENCE BEGINS ON VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Iowa City, Ia., June 22.—A conference on vocational education opened today at the University of Iowa under the direction of the extension division and the college of education with those in attendance including many persons from various parts of the state who are interested in this subject.

The conference will discuss many problems arising in vocational education due to the stimulation of the war and the awakening of interest in the education of the workers. It will continue until tomorrow night.

Special attention was given to the Smith-Hughes bill which provides for a federal appropriation of $7,000,000 for states contributing the same sum for the promotion of vocational education

SENATE TO PROBE PRICE OF COAL

Interstate Commerce Committee Wants to Know About Extending Control Sought for Direction of Food Supply.

Washington, June 23.—Inquiry into production, prices and transportation of coal, steel, copper, and other basic materials over which the government supervision may be proposed during the war, was decided upon today by the Senate interstate commerce committee. Coal will be the first subject taken upon next Tuesday.

Chairman Newlands explained that as present legislation contemplates control only of food, the committee will consider whether such control should be extended to coal, iron, steel, their products and other raw materials as well as their transportation.

Fear Trick in Senate.

Administration supporters of the food bills rearranged their battle lines today to make sure that the Senate does not kill the second bill on the ground that the first bill is enough.

Fearing that should the first, or production bill, with its clause against food hoarding be finally enacted while the Senate debates the second, or control bill, it might be contended that the provisions of the first bill are sufficient, the House leaders today decided to let the first bill remain in its present stage and thus force the Senate to enact all the program before any of it gets to the critical stage of conference between the two houses.

Should House leaders be able to delay the appointment of conferees on the first bill until after passage of the second by both houses they expected to get most of the administration's program on the statute books.

The commission also might find it necessary to fix the price of manganese, limestone and other elements entering into the manufacture of pig iron, which in turn enters into the manufacture of steel.

Indications multiplied today that the legislation would be enacted by July 1, as urged by President Wilson. Representative Haugen, of Iowa, and former Speaker Cannon, led the fight for the inclusion of shoes, clothing, farm machinery and cotton seed in the list of controllable articles. An attempt by Representative Scott, of Iowa, to inject a gasoline and fuel oil amendment into the bill failed, but Representative Lever said one would be put in later.

Washington, D. C., June 23.—Senator Johnson of South Dakota will speak in the Senate in support of the food control bill and endeavor to explain some features which, he said, were misunderstood. For one thing, he points out that it is not the purpose of Mr. Hoover to fix ironclad prices or to deprive dealers of fair profits. The plan is to prevent extortion and excessive profits, and to fix limits on profits by percentages. Senator Cummins wants provisions put into the law which shall definitely limit the amount of profits to reasonable percentages, to those named in the statute, thus preventing extortion. Senator Cummins wants the measure extended to include clothing and other necessities, and to be more specific and far reaching as to coal.

HIDE POISONED CANDY FOR FRENCH CHILDREN

Methodist Minister Says He Knows Germans Do This—Orgies Held in Graves.

New York, June 23.—The Rev E. M. Byssche aroused the city's Methodist preachers at their regular meeting to a high pitch of indignation by telling of his knowledge of poisoned candy which he said the Germans manufactured and ordered distributed by soldiers in northern France and Belgium. He said he had seen both the candy and its effects upon children, especially in the towns of northern France recently vacated by German troops.

"There can be no doubt about who made the candy or who put it into secret places where children would be likely to find it. I speak of things I saw."

"Only a little less is the going into vaults in cemeteries, throwing out bodies of the dead and making of the places scenes of revelry and drunkenness."

U. S. DOCTORS AND NURSES REACH FRONT

Base Hospitals Taken Over—Aid Given British After Battle of Messines Ridge.

British Headquarters in France, June 23.—(by the Associated Press)—American doctors, nurses and enlisted men, within the last fortnight have taken over six of the British base fied hospitals, releasing the English staffs for duty near their front. American surgeons also rendered valuable aid in the forward casualty clearing stations during the battle of Messines. The Stars and Stripes fly with the British union jack from each hospital flagstaff, the two ensigns fluttering side by side in the cool breezes that sweep in from the sea.

The British selected their hospital sites with the greatest care and have developed them with a completeness that has come from nearly three years' field experience. Some of the general hospitals are made up of tented wards accommodating 40 to 60 beds each. Others are constructed of a series of huts. The operating theaters are splendidly built and seem to lack nothing in the way of surgical equipment.

Originally planned for 1,040 beds each, the general hospitals have been practically all enlarged to 1,400 beds and during a crisis can accommodate 2,000 patients. The units which have taken over the various hospitals were organized by the American Red Cross as United States base hospitals, and with the declaration of war these staffs were turned over to the regular army for service as required.

Each unit has brought along an organizing director who was a surgeon in civil practice, but now takes command as a major in the United States reserve. The cammanding officer in each unit is a regular American army surgeon, while the subordinate members of the staffs are made up of regular army surgeons and doctors commissioned from civil life. The nurses are all graduates of well known training schools and will probably be supplemented soon by voluntary aid detachments of young women workers such as are now attached to the various British staffs. The noncommissioned orderlies and privates were practically all taken from civil life, but in keeping with the doctors and nurses have settled into their new work with marked efficiency and enthusiasm.

PRETENDED DELEGATES DECEIVE GERMANY

Say U. S. Financiers Caused War When Other Nations Failed to Defeat Teutons.

Copenhagen, June 23.—Most of the newspapers of Germany today print long special dispatches discussing the arrival at Stockholm, Sweden, of the three "American" socialist representatives, Boris Reinstein, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Dr. Max Goldfarb, of the New York Forward, and D. Davidovitch. The newspapers, however, carefully refrain from reproducing the information in the Stockholm journals as to the non-American nationality of these men, who have come to participate in the international socialist peace conference.

The German newspapers reprint prominently Reinstein's statement that the declaration of war by President Wilson was the "work of capitalists in the interests of Wall street, with which President Wilson is closely allied, "and that it was "ordered because Wall street believed Russia might conclude a separate peace with Germany, giving Germany the victory, which had to be prevented at any cost."

SOCIALISTS COMMUNICATE.

Copenhagen, June 23.—A Budapest dispatch says that the Hungarian socialists have received a telegram from N. C. Tcheidse, the Russian socialist leader, announcing the convocation by the Petrograd council of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates, to an international socialist conference at Stockholm from June 28 to July 3. This is the first chronicled direct communication between the belligerents.

BRITISH SHIP BRINGS IN NO GERMAN PRISONERS

Washington, June 22.—Reports of a British steamer arriving at an Atlantic coast port with prisoner from a German raider, sunk or captured at sea, were declared by navy depart mnt officials today to be without foundation. They had conferred by telephone with naval officers at the port in which the steamer arrived and were assured that while a British vessel had come into the harbor they were unable to find any truth in the reports that she carried prisoners from a German raider.

BURLESON READY TO DELIVER GOODS FOR ALL STORES

Post Office Department Has Already Made Experiments Which, Officials Say, Insure Success if Tried.

TO TAKE ALL EQUIPMENT

Government Wants to Use Private Delivery Facilities in War—System Would Eliminate Waste, Backers Say.

New York, June 23.—The postoffice department of the United States is ready and willing to take over the delivery service af all the retail dry goods stores in New York and every other city in the United States, according to E. L. Howe, executive secretary of the National Dry Goods association, who said the announcement was based on statements made to him in Washington last week by Postmaster General Burleson.

Experiments Already Made.

The proposal of the postmaster general, he said, was that the retail dry goods stores surrender their delivery equipment to the government for at least the duration of the war, and then mail their packages according to parcel post rates, special arrangements for handling the business being made by the postoffice department. Mr. Howe added that the department had been experimenting in the retail delivery service in several cities with sufficient success to demonstrate the practicability of the undertaking. He was not at liberty to name the cities where the experiments had been made.

The plan, which has Mr. Howe's strong indorsement as a war measure, will be submitted to the retail trade, the merchants in any locality being left free to decide for themselves whether they will adopt it. The attitude of the New York merchants is still in doubt, as few of them, apparently, have heard enough of the details of the plan or studied it long enough to come to final decisions. A canvass of the managers and proprietors of some of the city's largest stores today revealed this situation.

Plans to Reduce Cost.

The suggested method of delivery, according to Mr. Howe, is only the beginning of a movement for the elimination of waste and all unnecessary cost and labor in the retail business of the country.

"Many radical things will be done," he said. "The National Retail Dry Goods association will soon appoint a committee of business men representing, not the association, but the dry goods trade, which will meet in Washington to confer with the commercial economy board of the council of national defense. The committee will discuss and formulate a decision upon war measures and recommend the universal adoption of those which appear for the good of the country. Such subjects as retail deliveries, the return goods privilege and the elimination of store wastage of material and labor will occupy the committee's time."

If the postoffice department took over the retail delivery system of this or any other city, according to Mr. Howe, it would make two deliveries daily, handling C. O. D. packages as well as all others.

NAVY TO CLEAN UP NEWPORT AT ONCE

Franklin Roosevelt Arrives to Take Up Work When State Officials Make Denial.

Newport, R. I., June 23.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin Roosevelt, arrived here today, threatening to clean up Newport. He took a hurried glance around and then declared that Governor Beacham and the mayor of Newport did not know what they were talking about if they deny that conditions are bad.

Roosevelt told a correspondent here that he made the trip to clean up the place because Secretary Daniels wants a cleanup of the disreputables after the state and city declare that there are none. He also complained of the inhospitality of the people leaving their large homes empty while the naval recruits are living in hurriedly constructed houses.

The correspondent who has been here a week, learned that houses of prostitution flourished even in the best sections of the city, and that they were operated in a wide open manner, and also that booze was being peddled to the soldiers.

ALLIED BLOCKADE ON GREEK PORTS IS LIFTED

Washington, June 22.—Lifting of the allied blockade of Greece was announced in a brief cablegram to the state department from Minister Droppers at Athens. This is taken here to mean that the allies are satisfied with the Greek situation and that there is no further need to apply repressive or punitive measures.

Cordial cooperation between the powers guaranteeing Greek independence and the new Greek king, Alexander, is expected.

TOLL OF THE PLUNGER.

Paris, June 23.—Five French merchantmen of less than 1,600 tons each were sunk by submarines or mines during the week ending June 17, according to an official statement issued today. No vessels of greater tonnage were sunk. Five merchantmen were unsuccessfully attacked by submarines.

New York, June 23.—The Danish steamship Orion, a vessel of 1,848 tons gross, register, was sunk by a German submarine, June 4, in the North sea, according to officers of a Dutch ship which arrived today. The crew was saved.

London, June 23.—The sinking of the Norwegian steamer Cedrick is reported in a Central News dispatch from Copenhagen, which credits the announcement to the Norwegian foreign office. The captain and 12 men are said to be missing.

SILENT PICKETS AT LAST BARRED

After Two Days of Riots, Stubborn Women Are Arrested for Violating Traffic Rules.

Washington, June 23.—Police today put an end to all picketing at the White House following two days of rioting. Major Pullen issued strict orders against permitting the militants to flaunt their banners or to stand before the White House. Formal notice was served on the militants at 9.30 o'clock this morning telling them that they must refrain from standing in front of the White House.

Then Major Pullen strung a line of officers and policewomen from the suffs' headquarters a block away, up past the White House and along the avenue which the mansion fronts.

"The period of leniency has passed," Major Pullen said after issuing the order. The time of probation it at an end.".

The orders against picketing came after inspector Grant and Alice Paul, the slim, frail, leader of the cause, had a conference held over the telephone.

Just what she told the officials was not made public, but there were suggestions made, they that were such as to startle the nation, and will be published later.

Miss Lucy Burns, of New York, and Miss Catherine Morey, of Boston, carriers of a banner, who refused to move from in front of one of the White House gates, were arrested and taken to police headquarters.

At police headquarters the two banner bearers were informed that they had been arrested for blocking traffic and unlawful assemblage. They were released on their own recognizance.

"Treason" Exhibit Ended.

It developed that the suffragists took their banners out again today under advice of counsel, but that they had sprung a surprise on the police. Instead of banners bearing inscriptions, characterized as "treasonable and offensive" they bore banners inscribed with phrases from some of President Wilson's addresses.

The banners which led to the arrests today carried this sentence from the president's war message.

"We will fight for the things we have always held nearest our hearts—for democracy—for the rights of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own government."

Leaders at suffrage headquarters were undecided after the arrest of Miss Burns and Miss Morey whether another effort would be made to display a banner.

KILLS LOVER'S WIFE AND TRIES SUICIDE

Teacher's Note to Victim Calls on Her to Give Up Husband.

Waukesha, Wis., June 23.—Miss Grace Lusk, high school teacher, who yesterday shot and killed Mrs. Roberts, wife of Dr. David Roberts, former state veterinarian, and then tried to kill herself by sending two bullets into her body, probably will recover physicians said today.

To Chief of Police McKay, Miss Lusk said:

"I am sorry for Mrs. Roberts. I hope my wounds are fatal. I never thought I could do it. I loved Dr. Roberts and want him now and always."

A letter evidently written by Miss Lusk to Mrs. Roberts was made public. It read in part:

"You must have known for a long time that your husband's affections had passed from you; that he cared for some one else. That is sufficient annulment of any marriage vow that ever was given.

"That is the way you respectable folk—good, moral women—do things in order to keep your reputation and live lives of ease.

"In the eternal triange four souls require for their solution the elimination of one character. The two who should remain are the two whose affection is mutual."

SALE OF RUSS ANTIQUES ROUSES IRE OF GORKY

Petrograd, June 22.—The Novoe Vremya prints a big advertisement from an unnamed American corporation which declares that it has assigned $20,000,000 for the purchase in Russia of antiques, pictures, porcelain and tapestries. Maxim Gorky, has issued a furious protest describing the plan as "robbery of our national treasures." He demands a law similar to that in Italy, forbidding the exportation of works of art.

RUSS FACTION WANTS ALL COUNCILS DISSOLVED

Petrograd, June 22.—A resolution has been adopted by a small faction in the soldiers' and workmen's congress calling for the dissolution of the duma and the council of the empire. The action is based on the ground that in the early days of the revolution a group of duma members took advantage of their parliamentary position to become the center of a tumult which was anti-democratic.

Nineteen Shots Are Fired, Two Landing on Enemy, Which Had Already Failed to Sink British Ships.

An American Atlantic Port, June 22, —Capt. Jesse Foster, of Baltimore, commander of the Garland line steamer ——, said today that he believed the —— had struck a U-boat on June 4 England, en route to an Atlantic port.

In a story written today by the wireless operator on the ship, he said:

"We left Liverpool on our homeward voyage June 2. We were running at night without lights. The guns were cleared for action. We received "S. O. S." messages from two British vessels attacked by submarines but in each case they escaped after a gun battle.

"We could plainly see the shells from these British vessels as they dropped but could not see the submarines with whom they were fighting.

Sees Torpedo Coming.

"We were on a zig zag course and making full speed when the lookout saw a life boat. We stopped to see what was in it. It was empty.

"About 20 minutes after passing the empty lifeboat or about 6:30 p. m. ship's time, one of the gunners sighted a torpedo headed straight for us. He shouted to the bridge: 'Here she comes; torpedo portside.'

"The chief officer who was on the bridge shouted to the quartermaster 'hard starboard.' We swung off. The torpedo had a red head about 16 inches in diameter. She was about 10 feet long.

"The torpedo struck us on the port side a glancing blow amidships right near the engine room. Our ship was empty and we all thought she had exploded from the terrific noise she made when she hit.

"Simultaneously the ship's whistle blew short and successive blasts which was signal to abandon ship and man the life boats which were launched at once.

"The captain, who had remained on the ship, found the torpedo had failed to explode. All hands were then ordered back on the ship."

"We were lying perfectly still for at least an hour.

Submarine Gives Chase.

"When the commander of the submarine saw our crew coming back from lifeboats and climbing upon deck he immediately gave up his chase of two other British merchant ships and started for us again. The submarine was about 2,000 yards off our starboard.

"Suddenly came the command, 'Man the guns.'

"The chief gunner gave the range from the bridge.

"When about 600 yards off our starboard quarter a shell from our forward gun hit her and she submerged. Again she appeared and our aft gun hit her and blew away her periscope. Another shot from our forward gun fell right on top of her. There was a shower of black specks which rose high in the air followed by a great commotion, bubbles of water and a light blue smoke arising from the stern of the U-boat where a second before had been the eyes of our enemy.

"Nineteen shells in all were fired, which is the secretary of the navy's military salute."

EFFORTS FOR CABINET IN AUSTRIA FAIL

Clam-Martinic Asks Charles to Try to Find Another Premier.

Amsterdam, June 23.—Count Henry Clam-Martinic, premier of the Austrian cabinet, which recently resigned, has failed in his attempt to reconstruct the ministry, according to a dispatch from Vienna. The count has asked King Charles to invite some one else to form a cabinet.

RUMANIAN MISSION ARRIVES IN AMERICA

After a Visit to Washington, Members Will Try to Recruit for Army Here.

A Pacific Port, June 23.—A Rumanian mission to the United States arrived here today.

Count Kassile Stoica, representative of the Metza, and Gazaile Lucaci are the members of the mission. Count Stoica wore the uniform of a lieutenant in the Russian army.

After visiting Washington the members expect to stimulate recruiting for the Rumanian army, which was said to number 600,000 men.

FORTY OF 55 OPPONENTS OF DRAFT UNDER ARREST

Dallas, Tex., June 22.—Federal officials announced today that 40 of the 55 men recently indicted here for alleged seditious conspiracy against the enforcement of the selective draft law, have been arrested. Among those taken into custody yesterday and today, it was said, were Z. L. Risely, state president of the Farmers and Laborers' protective organization and W. T. Webb, state secretary of the sicialist party.

"Be a Hope Spreader"

No army can remain at the front unless there is a still bigger army back of it, doing business, making clothes, making guns, making shells, raising food and building "hope."

"Be a Hope Spreader"

Keep in mind that our revolutionary "forefathers" were forced to face hundreds of discouragements, where we face one, but they won out just the same, so will we.

"Be a Hope Spreader"

This big stock of clothing makes it easy for you to dress well, to have the best without paying too much, this last is very important. Shoddy, unsatisfactory clothing makes a fellow "feel like the dickens", you couldn't be a "hope spreader" in that kind of clothes. You get value here, as other people do, always, that helps in being a hope spreader.

Some of the things it will require to build the big cantonment at Camp Dodge: Twenty-six million feet of lumber. Twenty carloads of nails and hardware. Sixty carloads of roofing. Ten cars of electric light poles and wiring. Five miles of railway sidings. One hundred and ninety-two cars of stoves, ranges, tanks, piping, refrigerators, etc. Five thousand barrels of cement. Twenty-five miles of insulated wire. Two thousand shower heads. The cantonment will be a complete city in itself.

The movement to place stained glass memorial windows in the Little Brown church at Bradford, immortalized by the song "Little Brown Church in the Vale," has brought forth many protests. The latest protest was received from Milo M. Quaife, superintendent of the Wisconsin State Historical society, who was an attendant at this church in his boyhood. Mr. Quaife considers it an act of vandalism to change the old historical church with its old-fashioned windows by adding modern stained glass ones so out of keeping with the rest of the old church and its historical associations which is dear to the entire state and known throughout the entire country.

Thirty-one persons from Muscatine attended the state convention of the G. A. R. at Davenport.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

GRIM GAS BATTLES FOUGHT

Asphyxiating Shells Fired in Great Quantities by Both Sides in Struggles on British Front.

Andre Tudesq, writing of the battles on the British front says there was such an expenditure of asphyxiating shells one day that six hours after the last deluge of them suffocating smells were still passed through.

Lavish expenditure of gas on both sides form a characteristic of the furious attack and counter-attacks which have been delivered day and night round these two villages. The mask is here as precious as the grenade or the rifle

As in a frightful carnival, in the manner of Edgar Allan Poe, one could see in the night on the slopes west of Fresnoy entire regiments in masks, fighting and killing each other in the midst of black vapors which were rendered more fantastic by the light of the moon

The hand-to-hand struggle thus took on most singular forms. Throwing away their arms the combatants would fly at each other's throats and try to tear away each other's masks. Few prisoners were taken in these encounters and the wounded are fewer still. Death alone receives the lion's shar."

CHAPTER II.

FRANCE IN MOURNING.

To. M. Theophile Delcasse, minister of Marine, and first statesman of the republic, slumbering peacefully in his bed at Paris that morning, came the sound of urgent knocking. He sat up in bed and rubbed the sleep from his eyes, for he knew that not without good cause would any one dare disturb him at that hour. Then he stepped to the floor, thrust his feet into a pair of slippers, his arms into the sleeves of a dressing robe, and opened the door.

"A telegram, sir, marked 'Most Important'," said his valet, and passed it in to him.

It was from Vice Admiral Bellue, commander at Toulon, and a moment later M. Delcasse had learned of the terrible disaster.

He ordered his carriage and dressed rapidly with trembling hands. He was shocked and distressed as he had rarely been before. Would these disasters never cease? First the Jena, now the Liberte—both ships the pride of their country, the last formidable word in marine architecture! He gulped down the cup of coffee which his valet brought him, seized hat and gloves, hastened to his carriage, and drove straight to the Elysee palace.

The president was already up, and his broad face, usually so placid and good humored, was convulsed with grief as he greeted his minister. He held in his hand a telegram, which he had just opened.

"See," he said, after the first moment, "the sad news is already abroad," and he held out the message.

Delcasse took it and read it with astonished eyes. It was from the German emperor, and expressed his grief at the catastrophe, and his sympathy with France, which he had directed his ambassador to call at once in person to convey more fully.

"The kaiser is certainly well served!" muttered Delcasse, reading the message again, his lips twitching with emotion. "There is something ironical in this promptness. He must have had the news before we did!"

The president nodded gloomily. Then the other members of the cabinet came whirling up, and were convened at once by their chief in secret session.

Not many hours later, as a result of that session, a special train rolled out of the Gare de Lyon, and headed away for the south, with a clear track and right-of-way over everything. Aboard it were the president himself, the minister of marine, the minister of war, and a score of minor officials. There was also a thin little man with white hair and yellowish-white beard—M. Louis Jean Baptiste Lepine, prefect of police, and the most famous hunter of criminals in the world; and in the last car were a dozen of the best men of his staff, under command of his most trusted lieutenant, Inspector Pigot.

At each station, as the train rolled on, great crowds gathered to meet it—crowds strangely silent, inarticulate with grief, furious, suspicious of they knew not what. Terrible rumors were abroad — rumors of treachery, of treason striking at the very heart of France. No one dared repeat these rumors, but nevertheless they ran up and down the land. The Jena and now the Liberte! True, the board of inquiry, which had investigated the destruction of the Jena, had decided that that catastrophe was due to the spontaneous combusion of the powder in her magazines. France had accepted the verdict; but now a second battleship was gone. It would be too much to ask any one to believe that this was spontaneous combusion, also! Such things do not happen twice.

And at every station telegrams were handed in giving fresh details of the disaster—horrible details. The ship was a total loss; of that splendid mechanism, built by years of toil, by the expenditure of many millions, there remained only a twisted and useless mass of wreckage; and in that wreckage lay 300 of France's sailors. Small wonder that the president sat, chin in hand, staring straight before him, and that the others spoke in whispers, or not at all.

At Dijon, which was reached about the middle of the afternoon, there was a tremendous crowd, thronging the long platforms and pressing against the barriers, which threatened at every moment to be swept away. The president went out to say a few words to them, but at the first sentence his voice failed him, and he could only stand and look down upon them, convulsive sobs rising in his throat. Suddenly a little red legged Turco, weeping too, snatched off his fez and shouted "Vive la France!" and the cheer was taken up and repeated and repeated, until it swelled to a vast roar. As the train rolled out of the station, the crowd, bareheaded, was singing the Marseillaise.

M. Delcasse's eyes, behind his heavy glasses, were wet with tears.

"It is the same people still!" he said, pressing the president's hand. "They are as ready to spring to arms as they were 100 years ago. Now, as then, they need only to know that their country is in danger!"

His voice had grown vibrant with emotion, for the passion of his life was and always had been revenge upon Germany. He made no effort to conceal it or to dissimulate. Alsace and Lorraine were always in his thoughts. To placate Germany, indeed, France had once been compelled to drive him from the Quai d'Orsay, where, for so many years, he had been to his contemporaries a sort of Olympian in the conduct of her foreign affairs. But even in retirement he remained the most powerful man in France; and now he was back in the cabinet again, a giant among Lilliputians, building up the navy, building up the army, strengthening the forts along the frontier, increasing the efficiency of the artillery, experimenting with airships, devoting his days and nights to the study of strategy, the discussion of possibilities, always with the same idea, the same hope! And now, this catastrophe!

As he sat gnawing his nails, the president glanced at him, read his thoughts, and shook his head.

"No, my friend," he said, sadly, "the country is not in danger or, if it is, the danger is from within, not from without. This is an accident, like all the others."

"You believe so? But it seems to me that we have had more than our share of accidents!"

"So we have," the president agreed. "Let us hope that this will be the last—that it will teach us to guard ourselves, in future, from our own carelessness."

"England, America, Germany," Delcasse went on, speaking half to himself, "these nations, with navies greater than ours, never have such accidents. Small explosions, sometimes, it is true, wrecking a gun or damaging a turret—but never destroying a whole ship! Is it merely because they are never careless?"

"There was the Maine," the president reminded him.

Delcasse's hand went to his moustache to hide the ironic smile upon his lips. In that close cropped head of his, along with many other such secrets, was that of the cause of the catastrophe in Havana harbor. In all the chancellories of Europe, it was agreed that the Maine had been destroyed by the spontaneous explosion of her own magazines. Four men kne wthe truth, and Delcasse was one of them, there had been a fifth, but an assassin's bullet killed him.

In an instant Delcasse's face was composed, and his eyes, behind their immense glasses, as inscrutable as ever. The president, so ingenuous and child like, must never suspect the truth!

"True!" Delcasse agreed. "There was the Maine! I had forgotten that!" and he relapsed into thoughtful silence.

Evening came, and still the train rolled southward, past Macon, past Lyons, past Vienne, everywhere greeted by surging crowds. At the latter place, Delcasse arose and, with an almost imperceptible nod to Lepine, entered the last car. The prefect followed him, and a few minutes later, they were closeted together in a compartment, where, at a word from his superior, Inspector Pigot had joined them.

"And now," began Delcasse, when the door was closed and the train had started again, "tell me what you think of this affair, Lepine."

The lattle gray man spread his hands wide with a gesture of helplessness.

"At this moment I know no more than you, sir," he answered; "probably not so much. By morning, I shall have a report ready for you."

"We shall not arrive until after midnight," the minister pointed out.

"Nevertheless, my report will be ready, sir," said Lepine, quickly. "Between midnight and dawn there are six hours."

Delcasse looked at him. He knew that this little man never made an empty promise.

"Did you go through the papers at the time of the Jena disaster?" he asked.

"I did, sir. I assisted the investigating board."

"You are, then, familiar with the theories in that case?"

"There were four theories," answered Lepine. "The first was that the ship had been blown up by treachery; that is always the first thought! But in the case of the Jena, it was quickly discovered that treachery was impossible, unless it was that of the highest officers, for only they had access to her magazines. That was unthinkable, for all of them had served France for many years. More than half of them were killed. I myself investigated the life of every one of these men, for it was necessary to be absolutely certain—but not a breath could be raised against them."

"And the second theory?"

"That there had been carelessness of some sort. That, too, was disproved, for no one had entered the magazines for many hours previous to the explosion. It is a rule of the service that, except when in use, the keys of all magazines shall be in keeping of the commander, who is responsible for them. At the inquiry, the commander of the Jena testified that the keys had not left his possession during the two days preceding the accident. There had been no occasion to enter the magazines during that time. The Jena, you will remember, was at anchor in Toulon harbor, just as the Liberte was."

Delcasse glanced at his companion keenly.

"Does that fact suggest nothing to you, Lepin?" he asked.

"Nothing, sir," said Lepine firmly. "I have thought of it all day, and I can see in it nothing except coincidence."

"Coincidence! Coincidence! I detest the word. I do not believe in coincidence!" muttered the minister

"Nor I," agreed Lepine; "but even less do I believe in vague theories and vague suspicions. We must have a firm foundation before we begin to build."

"Well, and the third theory?" said Delcasse, at last.

"The third theory was most interesting. It was that the explosion had been caused by waves from the wireless telegraph. It was asserted that these waves had upset the unstable equilibrium, either chemical or electrical, which sometimes exists in the components of modern powder, and that the explosion had resulted."

"And this theory also was disproved?"

"The most exhaustive tests failed to confirm it."

"Ah," said Delcasse; "but to fail to confirm a thing is not to disprove it."

"Our wireless experts agreed in pronouncing the theory absurd."

"Wireless waves penetrate metal, do they not?"

"Every metal except lead."

Delcasse turned this over for some moments in his mind.

"If that had been the cause," went on Lepine, at last, "there would have been other explosions, many of them — and our navy would not have been the only one to suffer. The whole atmosphere is charged with such waves, of every length and every degree of intensity."

"Perhaps you are right," agreed the minister. "What was the fourth theory?"

"The fourth theory was that finally adopted by the board. It was that a certain kind of powder, known as 'B' powder, degenerates under heat, and becomes, in time, extremely combustible, so that it will sometimes explode apparently without any exciting cause."

"In what manner was the truth of this theory demonstrated?" demanded Delcasse.

"In a most convincing manner. A certain amount of this powder, which the board was examining, did explode in this way, under their very hands. Had the amount been larger, not a member of the board would have escaped. But, sir, you know all this as well as I."

"I wish to refresh my memory," Delcasse explained. "I wish to see if your memory, which I admire so much, agrees with mine. Now tell me this: what was done to prevent a recurrence of such an accident?"

"The powder in all French magazines was overhauled, and that which there was any reason to suspect was destroyed. To prevent future deterioration, the magazines of all our battleships were equipped with a special cooling apparatus. In this, we were soon followed by all other nations."

"And yet," said Delcasse, in a low voice, "the latest and best of our battleships blew up this morning!"

"I have brought my best men with me, as you suggested, sir," said Lepine. "If there were any suspicious circumstances attending this explosion, depend upon it, they will be laid before you when you awake!"

"Do not wait for me to awake!" cried the minister. "If any such circumstances comes to light, wake me—wake me on the instant!"

Lepine bowed.

"I will do so, sir," he promised.

It was some time past midnight when the train reached Toulon; but apparently no one of her 100,000 inhabitants had thought of sleep. The streets before the station were crowded from house front to house front. The carriage containing the president and his ministers had the greatest difficulty in proceeding. Everywhere there were cries for vengeance, shouts of treason, threats, wild imprecations. Men stood with arms extended cursing the heavens. The Place de la Liberte was massed with people, facing the fountain in honor of the revolution, bareheaded, singing the Ca Lra. It seemed as though the wheels of time had rolled back a century, and that at any moment the Seagreen Incorruptible himself might arise to thunder denunciation. But at last the president and his staff reached their hotel.

M. Lepine, after final instructions to Pigot, joined them there, and listened to the reports made by the surviving officers of La Liberte. They were in despair, these men, ready to kill themselves at a word; their faces were blackened, their uniforms in tatters, their hands torn and bleeding, for they had labored all day at the work of rescue. They spoke between sobs, but it was little they had to tell.

Commander Jaures, it seemed, had been absent on leave, the second in command was ashore, so that Senir Lieutenant Garnier was in charge of the ship. Just before dawn, the watch had discovered a small fire in one of the store rooms, but it was so insignificant that no one thought of danger; the fire was not near the magazines, in any event, the magazines were all securely closed—the officer in charge had seen to that. Suddenly, apparently without cause, there had been three explosions, about a minute apart, first of the forward magazine, then of the after magazine, then of the man magazine—it seemed almost as though they had been fired at spaced intervals, like a heavy gun. There had been time to get the crew on deck, but the final explosion had come before the boats could be lowered. It had broken the ship in two; the forward part had turned over and sunk with all on board; the after part was a mere mass of twisted wreckage. The explosion had been so violent, that the neighboring ships also suffered—La Republique so seriously that it was only by hurrying her to a dry-dock she was kept from sinking. No one had any theory, any explanation; there had been no warning, no premonition. An instant, and it was over. But all agreed that the fire could have had nothing to do with it.

From the Kansas City Star.

"Well, I wish him luck," said Mr. Jones the other night, after reading in the evening paper an account of the wedding of a popular member of the local football team. "But," he added, in a ruminating tone, "marriage is very much like football."

"Don't talk so ridiculous," snapped Mrs. Jones. "However can you compare football to marriage?"

"Why," replied Jones, "it looks so easy to those who haven't tried it!"

In the Shell.

From the St. Louis Globe.

"How's the grub here?" a new boarder asked genially, rubbing his hands, at the dinner table of a boarding house.

"Well, sir, we have chicken every morning for breakfast," an old boarder grunted.

"Chicken every morning?"

The new boarder positively beamed.

Chicken every morning? And how is it served?"

"In the shell!" grunted the old boarder.

"You were dotty about flowers. You used to tell us about a field you loved. You said you loved it in the spring. You said in the spring it was nothing but green velvet crusted with dandelion gold. You said that the morning you left us in Charlie's place. You said you wanted to go back and walk barefooted through the powdered gold. You said you had done that when you were a barefooted boy."

"Ah!" The agitator made the exclamation a note of anguish that was terrible to hear.

They—the Leslie woman and the others—watched him. He crouched farther forward, his eyes closed. His right arm shot out from his side at right angles to his body, the palm of his hand out and the fingers open as if he tried to lean on something. His left arm went up slowly, crooked, and hid his face. For a long moment he kept that position. Then, very slowly, he lifted his head, a fraction of an inch at a time, until only his forehead and his eyes, open now, were visible above the forearm that screened his face.

There was in his eyes a look of wonder—wonder which just escaped being fear.

"I think," he said hoarsely, "I think I shall see."

He swept the circle of their faces with his glace. Edith's eyes caught his gaze and held it.

"The barefoot boy!" he whispered, the wonder still in his eyes. "How clean he is—how marvellous!"

He stood erect, his arms dropping to his sides, his ardent gaze still upon Edith. He smiled tenderly. And, suddenly, he stood before them again as they had known him, with all his power, all his strength, all the charm of his brilliant personality full upon him.

Outside there was the sound of a hymn from 1,000 throats.

Edith put out both her hands, as if she prayed.

"Ah!" she cried. "You remember! You remember!"

He went to her in one swift step and took her hands. She could feel his tremendous elation vibrant in his fingers. His thought, his concern, was for her alone. She was very pale.

"I do," he said, his voice clear and strong. For him, the others did not exist. "And I am glad I remember. Do — you — understand?"

Her gaze clung to his, and a little color, like the beginnings of a pink rose, came back to her face.

He let her hands go, and turned to the Leslie woman, who sat staring up to him.

"It's all right, Mary," he said gently. "You have been very kind —very kind"

He turned again to Edith.

"There is," he said, caressing her with the words, "so much I have to tell you"

They walked to the window and looked out at the fountain. The roar from the crowd was louder. There was in it a new note, like exultation.

The others left the room.

"My soul has come back to me," he said, taking both her hands in his.

"And it is a beautiful soul, isn't it?" she whispered.

She leaned closer to him, so that he caught the fragrance of her hair.

"There is nothing," he answered, drawing her closer still, "to keep me from you."

The voice of the crowd could be mistaken no longer. The thousands were exulting!

"And everything——" she began, but did not finish the sentence.

Cholliewollie, jubilant, wild with joy, had flung open the door and catapulted himself into the room.

"We've won! We've won!" he shouted. "They've run the white ribbon up the flagpole! Two-third majority—and a lot to spare—!"

He stopped abruptly.

"Say," he concluded a little lamely, "what's up?"

The agitator smiled brilliantly.

"Old fellow," he answered affectionately, "we've won both fights."

Edith held out her hand.

"Congratulate us," she invited. "We're going to take a trip. We want to find a field powdered with dandelion gold."

THE END.

NEW FLAG ADDED TO ENTENTE STANDARDS

Koritza, Albania.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—A new flag, the flag of the new "Republic of the Skipetars" has made its appearance among the standards of the entente allies along the Albanian-Macedonian front. It is the old standard of the Scandenbergs, of red with a black two-headed eagle and the little army of 750 men of the republic of the Spiketars, composed of six companies are fighting under it at the front by the side of the Senegalese and colonial cavalry, that compose the French occupying force in this district. The new banner already has received its baptism of blood. Five hundred men of the new republic aided the French to repulse a sharp attack by Albanian tribes operating with the Austrian regular troops at Moscopol.

Thus far the new republic includes only the city of Koritza with a population of 38,000 and the surrounding region, comprising altogether about 90,000 inhabitants. It is located in that part of Albania in which the longing for liberty and tranquility has been most developed through repeated pillaging by neighboring Albanians and continual oppression by foreigners.

The Albanians, accustomed to summary and primitive means of administration and justice are taking to republican ideas and the parliamentary regime, and considerable unsuspected oratorical talent has been discovered in this land where powder only has talked heretofore.

The idea of forming the Skipetar republic is due to Colonel Descoins, commanding the French forces stationed here. When he assumed command of the post he called all the notables of the town together and talked to them in this vein.

"Skipetars, my friends, until December 1912 you suffered under Turkish regime. In May, 1913, it was the Greek army that mistreated you, then until March 1914, you became familiar with the inconveniences of Greek civil administration; in July, 1914, it was the noxious buffoonery of Prince de Wied that was imposed upon you, in December, 1915, it was again the Greek military occupation, in October, 1916, it was the Greek royalist civil administration, and in November, 1916, the Venezelist followed in December by the French military occupation with Greek civil authorities. You ought to have enough of all these experiments, and I have a very simple suggestion to make to you Why don't you govern yourselves" You are Albanians. Be Albanians then, and nothing else Cease all intrigues and occupy yourselves with your own self government. French troops are here to defend the territory, that's all Be honest men, I'll be the gendarme"

This plain talk appealed to the Skipetars, who at once formed a republic with a parliament of 14 members and a president whose tenure of office is a fortnight

Prosperity has come in with the republic. A coal mine at Koutza is being exploited and, aided by the military authorities, the Skipetar government is preparing to develop copper and iron ore deposits, declared by engineers to be rich and extensive.

Johnnycake!

From the Madison State Journal

We're eatin' Johnnycake these days, several times a week, and Oh, Boy!

Don't understand how we ever let the Johnnycake habit of our childhood get away from us.

We advise you, Mr. Man and you Mrs. Woman, to get the Johnnycake habit, too.

There's something about the good, golden corn bread that you'll never get in white bread, or rye.

There's a roughness to the tongue and the palate that, the diet experts tell us, puts roughness in the bone and sinew of the human chap—such roughness, or robustness, as we need these days.

But you don't need that excuse to worship before the shrine of Johnnycake—good old Johnnycake, like mother used to make.

Phoney Stuff.

"I want Main, one double nought, nought."

"What?"

"One thousand Main. Ten hundred, Main. Now do you get it?"

"Oh, you mean Main one, ought, double ought Why didn't you say so? Line's busy"

But Not at Home.

The man next door was repairing a chewed-up inner tube belonging to his auto tire equipment. George was watching him. The man laboriously pumped and sweated and fumed and fretted as he worked. He was glad of one thing. He was not out on some lonely, dusty, country road. At last he was through.

"George," he asked, as he rested in the "shade of the old apple tree," "does your father ever have any old tire trouble?"

"Yes," answered honest George, "but he never fixes any of them at home."

Willing to Be Good.

Albert Chevalier tells the following:

"One night," remarked the famous comedian, "in a certain music hall where there was a notoriously bad orchestra, the manager suddenly appeared on the stage and apologized for the absence of a favorite comic singer whose name was a great feature.

"The manager explained that he had every reason to believe that the artist in question would positively appear later on; and then, by way of throwing oil on troubled waters, suggested, in order to avoid a wait, that the audience should be favored with a little music.

"As he announced this, a pathetic voice in the gallery was heard:

"Oh, I soy, Mr. Manager, we'll be good if yer don't let the band play!"

ANY CORN LIFTS OUT, DOESN'T HURT A BIT!

No foolishness! Lift your corns and calluses off with fingers—It's like magic!

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn, can harmlessly be lifted right out with the fingers if you apply upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

For little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain.

This simple drug dries the moment it is applied and does not even irritate the surrounding skin while applying it or afterwards.

This announcement will interest many of our readers. If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to surely get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

Too Sick To Work

Many Women in this Condition Regain Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Convincing Proof of This Fact.

Ridgway, Penn. — "I suffered from female trouble with backache and pain in my side for over seven months so I could not do any of my work. I was treated by three different doctors and was getting discouraged when my sister-in-law told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her. I decided to try it, and it restored my health, so I now do all of my housework which is not light as I have a little boy three years old." —Mrs. O. M. Rhines, Ridgway, Penn.

Mrs. Lindsey Now Keeps House For Seven.

Tennille, Ga.—"I want to tell you how much I have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About eight years ago I got in such a low state of health I was unable to keep house for three in the family. I had dull, tired, dizzy feelings, cold feet and hands nearly all the time and could scarcely sleep at all. The doctor said I had a severe case of ulceration and without an operation I would always be an invalid, but I told him I wanted to wait awhile. Our druggist advised my husband to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has entirely cured me. Now I keep house for seven and work in the garden some, too. I am so thankful I got this medicine. I feel as though it saved my life and have recommended it to others and they have been benefited".—Mrs. W E. Lindsey, R. R. 3, Tennille, Ga.

CURIOUS FEARS OF SOLDIERS

One Dreads That His Charcoal Burner Will Be Destroyed Although Indifferent as to Himself.

It is extraordinary what curious fears some soldiers have. One fighter always dreads that his charcoal fire will be destroyed by a shell. He always places the burner in the most protected part of the trench, but remains quite indifferent in regard to his own personal safety.

Another extraordinary fear of a soldier at the front is that of having his bootlaces untied. Nothing else has terrors for him, from bayonet fighting to asphyxiating gases. But he is quite certain that if his bootlaces are loose he will trip over them and break his neck. He always examines his laces to see if they are properly fastened. Another soldier who has been through the thick of the fighting is terribly frightened of going through a wood, and would rather walk miles round it than half a mile through it. He has the fear that some day a tree will suddenly fall and crush him.

Many soldiers have a horror of losing their identity disks, or of being unidentified if they are killed, and buried in a nameless grave. One man is known to carry little scraps of paper in every pocket, giving his name and regiment, so that his body may be recognized if he is killed.

Swedish Drill.

They were in the squad under training at a certain military center who furnished a contrast not uncommon these days. One was tall and wiry, the other short and puffy, and an hour of Swedish drill had set the lesser of the two to blowing hard.

"I can't stand much of this," he whispered. "I'm simply all out," and at that moment the drill sergeant intimated that he would give them another spell before they dismissed.

This was too much The podgy patriot felt it was time to protest.

"I'm really awfully sorry to seem unmilitary in addressing you, sir," he said, "but this Swedish drill is more than I can face in my present condition; besides," he added, dolefully, "I never knew we were at war with Sweden."

Point of Ownership.

"Let me drive a while. Half of this car is mine."

"Didn't you agree to take the rear half and let me have the front half?"

"Yes."

"Well?"

"Well, the steering wheel belongs to the front half, and that gives me the right to drive all the time."

Its Style.

"The anti-trust laws of the future will have teeth."

"Humph! You must mean that for biting sarcasm."

Test Association Picnic

The Klemme Cow Testing Association held their annual farm tour and picnic Tuesday and they could have not chosen a finer day from the weathers standpoint, but too good weather serves to keep down the attendance as the farmers are anxious to make every good day count.

They had a most enjoyable and profitable time with about one half of the members of the association present. The following parties from the extension department delivered valuable lectures. Dr Rice on vetrinary topics. Prof McKee on alfalfa and grain crops and Prof. Thomas on dairying.

The Holstein herd belonging to R W. Elder was visited. Mr Elder has a very valuable herd of Holsteins that has averaged over 300 pounds of butter fat per animal since he joined the association. Emil Beier's fine herd of Short Horns was also visited. Mr has the honor of owning the high cow for 1915-16, which produced over 400 pounds of butterfat for a net profit of $91 00 above cost of feed. The Chas. Elling place north west of Garner was also visited. Mr. Elling owns an exceptionally fine dairy barn, also a fine herd of Holsteins. The Mat Love herd of Guernseys were looked over. Mr. Love has a fine herd and owns the high cow for 1916 17 which produced 450 pounds for a profit of $100 00 above cost of feed. The picnic dinner was also held at the Mat Love home and was much enjoyed.

Grange-Techant

Last Saturday evening at the home parsonage of Rev. McConnell in Garner took place the marriage of Mr. Paul Grange and Miss Julia Techant.

While their friends have been expecting their marriage for some time, the young couple managed to give them the slip at that. Paul worked at his usual duties all day, driving up to Garner in the evening to meet his bride who had been visiting relatives at George, and after their marriage remained in Garner all night, coming to Klemme, Sunday morning to announce their marriage.

The bride came here a few years ago from Hamburg, Germany, and is a charming young lady and will make a good helpmate for the young man she has chosen to honor with her hand.

The groom came here from Ruthven three years ago as assistant manager for the Northern Lumber Company. He is honest, industrious and has made a large number of friends and a valuable man for his employers.

The happy young couple will soon be at home to their many friends in the rooms over the State Savings Bank recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Bier.

The Times takes great pleasure in joining with their host of friends in wishing for them a life of much joy and prosperity.

The Owl Valuable to the Farm.

Do you know a monkeyface owl when you see one? Perhaps you know it as the barn owl. Anyhow, if you see one hanging around don't kill it. It's worth six or eight cats to you on the farm or suburban place, according to the state biologist of Washington.

As "She Is Spoke" in Canada.

Two French-Canadian citizens were traveling down a river in a houseboat. One of them knew the river and the other did not. They anchored for the night on a bar. Along toward daylight the craft went adrift. Three hours later the motion awoke one of the travelers. He poked his head out of the door. An entirely strange section of scenery was passing. "Baptiste! Baptiste!" he yelled. "Get up! We ain't here!" His comrade roused himself and looked out. "No, by gar!" he said; "we're 12 miles from here."—The Argonaut.

Few Lebanon Cedars.

There are now only about 400 of the cedars of Lebanon left in the grove from which Solomon obtained the wood for the Temple at Jerusalem. The best preserved are about 100 feet high and 47 feet in circumference at the base. They are more than 2,000 years old; in fact, tradition says they never die, having been planted by God on the third day of the creation, and that they will perish only with the end of the world.

Sandcrabs for Chickens.

The owner of a chicken ranch in California feeds his fowls on sandcrabs. These he catches in a trap which Popular Mechanics describes as like a large dustpan with a wire screen bottom. He often gets as much as a peck of crabs at a dip. He boils them, dries them in the sun and grinds them to a coarse meal. The chickens grow fat and lay well on this diet.

When Authors Write Best.

The time when an author may do his best work is a much-disputed question and an interesting one. It depends, of course, largely upon the moods and temperament of the individual, but perhaps more largely still upon his habits. The common belief of many authors, however, has been that their best work is done at night.

Hanseatic League.

The Hanseatic league is said to have been the first trade union. It was established in the thirteenth century by certain cities of northern Germany for their mutual prosperity and protection. The diet which used to be held every three years, was called the Hansa. This league was virtually broken up in 1630.

Clinched His Assertion.

"Anything new in the show?" asked the local manager. "Yes," answered the visiting agent. "The biggest supply of new songs, new faces, new jokes ever shown in captivity. Just to show you the trouble we've taken with that show, we've been collecting all that material for the last ten years."

Take Warning From Corns.

Corns really are warning signs that we are ill treating our feet, either by wearing tight shoes which in time deform the bones of the foot or by wearing shoes which permit the foot to slide, thus submitting the surface of the foot to intermittent pressure.

Foolish Striving After Happiness.

We all seek happiness so eagerly that in the pursuit we often lose that joyous sense of existence, and those quiet daily pleasures, the value of which our pride alone prevents us from acknowledging.—Sir Arthur Helps.

KLEMME CHAUTAUQUA COMMENCES SUNDAY

This is Chautauqua season and our town has the distinction of being a Chautauqua town. Not every town has the honor of belonging to the Chautauqua class. To be a Chautauqua town is a high mark of intelligence, morality and christianity, and in these war times is also a high mark of patriotism. The Chautauqua in operation is an antidote for bigotry, ignorance, hypocrisy and egotism, and it is sure to leave its patrons bigger, broader and better.

There is no better way to boom our town than to boost our Chautauqua, so let every one who is loyal to his home town become a patron of our Chautauqua.

The talent we have engaged this year is of a high order. They are all seasoned Chautauqua people. They are men and women worth while. It pays to hear them, and better still to get acquainted with many of them. These people come from all parts of the country, [illegible] Chautauqua empirically [illegible] itan. Each is highly [illegible] particular. One or [illegible] the [illegible] dive[illegible] stimulate and [illegible] will be highly [illegible] ing. Every [illegible] Nowhere, except on the Chautauqua platform, can so much be had for so little, that is intellectual, entertaining, inspiring and helpful.

Think of it—six great days of two programs daily with two sets of talent on each program—the whole Chautauqua from the opening session to the close of the last session at the wholesale price of $1 50 for a season ticket which is transferable—may be used by some other member of your family, or by some neighbor when you can't go. This should be the great event of the season for our town. Let us make the attendance a record-breaker—exceeding any gathering that has ever come together in our town. We are pleased to present to our readers the official program and much concerning the different attractions which will appear from day to day with many of their pictures taken from photos.

We herewith print the official program.

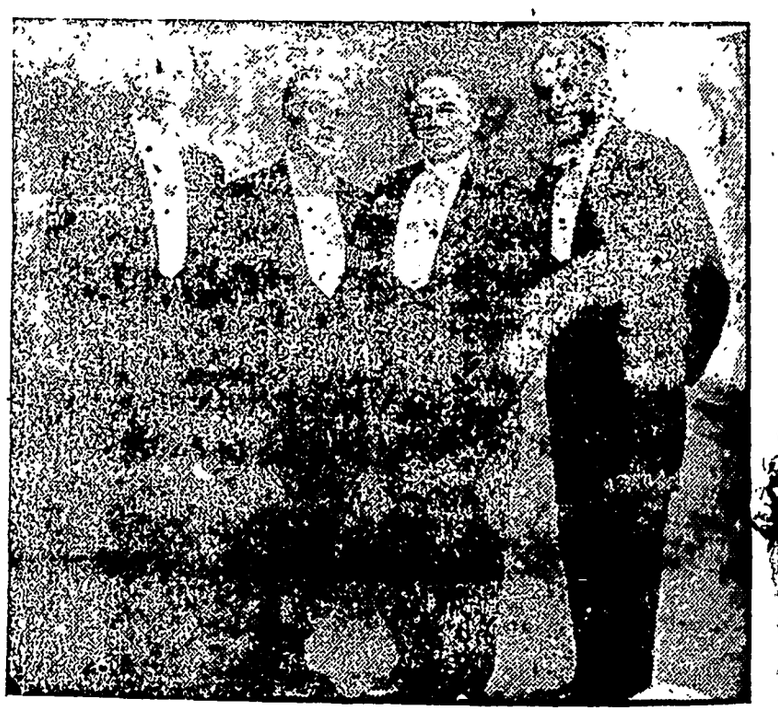
DR. ARTHUR E. GRINGLE.

Mr. Gringle is one of the best speakers on the lyceum platform I ever heard. His lecture was a work of art, both as to content, and masterful and eloquent manner in which it was delivered. He holds the rapt attention of his audience from start to finish. He has a wonderful command of the English language and clothes his thoughts in beautiful form. I take pleasure in recommending Mr. Gringle to all who are looking for the best to be had in his line. Very truly,

E. G. Bauman, Mgr.
Prin. of Public Schools.



THE KELLAM MALE QUARTETTE
Martinsburg, West Virginia

The meeting opened with singing by the Kellam Male Quartette, which has the reputation of being the best the country affords. They made a decided hit with the audience and were called back time and again to the platform and not until the manager of the Chautauqua, announced that they would appear after the lecture, were the people contented.—Martinsburg, W. Va., Times.

(Second Day.)

THE VENETIANS AND HAZEL FOLSOM DAGGY

Hazel Folsom Daggy, Prima Donna Soprano; Mrs. Margaret Gray and Lucile Chidester. (Americans who traveled abroad and made a special study of the types depicted.

THE HEART OF AN ALIEN MOTHER
A Musical Story

A real heart story is this charming costumed fantasy by "The Venetians". Shakespeare could find no more romantic setting than he chose for his "Merchant of Venice"; this is the scene of this musical story. Mrs. Gray has spent much time in Venice and brought some [illegible] settings with her.

Body Found in River

The remains of Miss Manda Skovlin were found last week in the Mississippi river near Fort Snelling, Minnesota. Word to that effect being received by relatives here on last week Thursday. Relatives left immediately for Minneapolis and a telegram was received on Friday stating that they had identified the remains and would return on the train Friday night. Identification was made certain by articles of clothing which the deceased was known to have worn when she left the sanitarium one morning some eight months ago for a walk. She had gone to the sanitarium for treatment and it is now thought that during a period of temporary mental aberration she ended her life by drowning. It has been a very sad case and the members of the immediate family and the many relatives have the sympathy of the entire community during this trial. Funeral services were held from the Norwegian church on Sunday afternoon, being in charge of the pastor, Rev. Jensen, and burial took place in the Belmond township cemetery. The uncertainty of the disappearance is thus removed, and while death is always sad, it is at times a great relief to those left behind to know of a surety where their loved ones are. The deceased was a popular young lady in this community and will be greatly missed by her many friends. Time alone will assuage the grief of relatives, who for solace, can look only to Him who notes the sparrow's fall and who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb—Belmond Herald-Press.

Pringnitz-Schoenwetter

At the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Schoenwetter of Garner on Wednesday of last week took place the marriage of their daughter, Miss Anna to Mr. Emil Pringnitz, Rev. Gauger of the Garner German M. E. church performing the ceremony. Only a few of the relatives and near friends were present.

The bride was born and raised in German township and her friends in this vicinity and at Garner where she has lived with her parents the past few years are numerous.

The groom hos lived in Twin Lake township with his friends nearly all of his life and is one of the prosperous young farmers of that vicinity and is highly respected by everyone.

They have gone to housekeeping in the groom's farm home in Twin Lake township amid the best wishes of a host of friends with which the Times takes great pleasure in joining.

LOOK HERE EVERYONE!

For 10 days or until the 16th of July, we will pay you $13.00 per ton for your old and new iron. Bring it in at once and have the use of the money.

Red Cross Drive Now On

On account of the press of other matters and following closely upon the Army Y. M. C. A. drive, the committee having the Red Cross subscription in charge, for the east half of the county will not attempt to complete collection of the amount allotted until some time this week.

The amount allotted this county by the State Board was $6,000 00. Of this amount the east half of the county must raise $3,450.00, which has been divided among the townships as follows:

Concord	$1,200
Ell	400
Avery	400
German	250
Twin Lakes	250
Ellington	400
Madison	300
Garfield	250

This is one of the most necessary causes in connection with the war, as it is not a question of raising funds to make war but of raising funds to make the war in which we are engaged less destructive to human life and health.

This Red Cross work will help to bring our Hancock county boys back home with whole limbs instead of cripples, and in good health instead of diseased.

The committee desires to urge upon the people of every township that they see that their allottment is raised, and that neither Hancock county nor any township in the county be classed as slackers. The Committee

Auto Accident Sunday

An auto accident which could have easily resulted in death for some of the participants occured near the Wm. Lau place south of town Sunday afternoon. A man and his wife and young daughter of Thor, whoes names we were unable to learn, were going at a pretty good rate of speed in a Ford car when they ran off from the grade and turned over twice. The top being up undoubtedly saved the occupants from more severe injury, but every one of the parties were more or less injured, the lady perhaps receiving the more severe injuries. O. W. Larsen who was driving north seen the accident and arrived in time to give first aid and offered to bring them to town for medical aid but a second car from Thor happened along and the man thought it would be best to proceed towards home with them although his wife was unconscous at the time. That lady should be real proud af her tender hearted husband, but as he was in a dazed and excited condition perhaps he couldnot be held accountable for his actions.

Flies are More Dangerous Than You Think

Flies breed so fast it is difficult to stamp them out. But, at least, we can keep them out of our houses.

And we ought to keep them out—not only for our comfort, but for our health. Many people don't realize what great disease-carriers flies are. They often come laden with disease germs directly to our food.

Screen the house and porches well and you prevent disease. Also you add to your comfort and peace of mind.

It does not cost much to screen a house. Let us screen your house.

KLEMME, IOWA

There is much to mystify the average American in the mixup that has developed between Japan and the United States concerning the state department's recent note to China; and the mystery is not lessened by the British foreign office's polite refusal to join the United States in its representations to the Chinese government. On its face, our government's note seemed innocent enough and altogether legitimate. It has always been America's policy to support the integrity of China and to deal with it as an independent state. But the Japanese conception of Japan's special position with reference to China has been developing very rapidly. Obviously, a situation exists that calls for the most careful handling. In the circumstances, nothing could be more welcome than the approaching visit to Washington of a Japanese diplomatic commission. The two governments should make an exceptional effort to reach a definite understanding.

Very drastic is the commandeering by the government of all the new ships under construction in American shipyards. But happily the president was not forced to do this under his "war powers", congressional sanction for the act had been granted in a federal statute. It was a vitally necessary interference with ordinary business, as was shown by the British government's hearty cooperation in approving the transfer of its own contracts, aggregating 1,000,000 tons of new shipping, to the United States government. Of course, the two governments have a complete understanding as to the future use of these vessels By commandeering them in the yards, the United States authorities, that is to say General Goethals, will be able to quicken construction and increase substantially the total amount of tonnage to be turned out in the next year and a half. A very important step in the defense against the German submarine has thus been taken

If further evidence were needed that a demand for indemnities is among Germany's undisclosed peace terms, it is given in the statement of the Saxon minister of finance, that in view of the fact that war was forced upon Germany it "has a claim before God and on the ground of justice for indemnities; that should be the reparation which President Wilson had declared as the right of the victor" Germans, therefore, need not feel that in lending money to the government they were making sacrifices, because the costs of the war would have to be borne by the enemy In this matter of war indemnities somebody is being very badly deceived, it is for the United States to make sure that the German government cannot carry out its threats of brigandage.

There are 40,000 dependents of Canadian soldiers in England unable to return to Canada owing to the lack of passenger accommodation on the few steamers running to Canada They came soon after their men folk when the latter enlisted and, in some cases, the men already have returned to Canada wounded or discharged from the army Others were relatives of soldiers who have been killed there, are anxious to return to relatives.

British second hand vessels are not bringing the high prices of a year ago and buyers are holding off in view of the new conditions and increased taxation of profits proposed in the last budget While Scandinavian and Japanese second hand steamers are selling up to £50 a ton, three British steamers agregating 20,000 tons recently sold at £12, 10 shillings a ton. per ton.

There would be no trouble in drafting the new army if all wives were like those whom the war department is beginning to hear from. They write confidentially that there is no good reason why their husbands should not go to war, in spite of their disinclination to do so, and that the war department would make no mistake to draft them into the service

The national board of underwriters calls attention to the numerous fires caused by leaving small electric devices in circuit who not in use. The actuarial bureau of the national board reports that in one day 100 fires out of a total of 2,000 were traced to this cause, and it is estimated that fully 30,000 fires a year have such an origin

For the purpose of facilitating army recruiting, the people of New Zealand have adopted distinguishing names for the two lots of men who are serving. Those who volunter are called "The Wents" and those called up by ballot or conscription "The Sents." On arrival at camp there is little or no friction between the two.

A substitute for fire clay, patented in France, employs blue pottery clay, 1 part, common salt ½ part, coal ashes, ¾ part, fine said, ¼ part, and glass, ⅛ part. These ingredients are well ground together and are then mixed with water to the required consistency.

Maine has just had its smallest Grand Army encampment of about 100 veterans. This does not mean any lessening of interest in the order on the part of those who fought in the union army, but represents the increasing toll that time has been taking.

Germany's secret service need not overstrain itself in getting word to Berlin that the Liberty loan has been oversubscribed. All the censors in the world could not keep that news from the kaiser and his minister of finance.

A special session of the diet has been summoned for June 21. The session which will extend about three weeks, is made necessary by the dissolution of the house of representatives last winter. A new house was elected in April.

The Philippine hat industry, which boasts hand-made products akin to those of Panama, in 1916 more than doubled the value of its 1915 exports and established a new high record with a trade exceeding $600,000 in value.

An electrically ignited pipe which lights the tobacco at the bottom of the bowl instead of at the top, thus avoiding the collection of moisture in the stem, is the newest in smokers' inventions.

The maximum draft age in this country is 31 and Canada is considering the drafting of men as old as 45, but there is still the consideration that Germany is using every available man between 16 and 60.

Exports of Philippines leaf tobacco in 1916 soared over previous high record by several million pounds, reaching a total of nearly 40,000,000 pounds for the year.

POWERS MUST SERVE TERM, COURT RULES

Cherokeean Who Accidentally Shot Merle Conley Is Held on Concealed Weapon Charge.

Cherokee, Ia., JUne 30.—Word has been received in the city that the supreme court has affirmed the decision of the Cherokee county court in the case of State vs. Fred Powers, in which Powers was charged with the carrying of concealed weapons, and was sentenced to serve two years in the state penitentiary.

The discharge of a revolver in the hands of Powers resulted in the death of Merle Conley, while they with other young men were standing on Main street on the evening of Thursday, October 28, 1915. It will be remembered that Powers was arrested and tried on the charge of murder but was acquitted. He then was arrested on the charge of carrying concealed weapons and on conviction was sentenced to serve a two years' term of imprisonment. The case was appealed to the supreme court. A cash bond was filed and Powers released from custody.

IOWA AVIATOR, REPORTED KILLED, ONLY WOUNDED

Paris, June 30.—Corporal James Nor-Lafayette flying squadron, who has LaFayette flying squadron, who has been reported killed in an encounter with German airplanes, has fortunately escaped death Though he is badly wounded, there are hopes of his recovery

Hall was flying over the German lines when attacked by a German biplane. After a short encounter, seven other German machines came to the assistance of the biplane and in this unequal fight Hall was shot through the lung He managed, however, with great courage and cooiness to bring his machine down within the French lines. He fainted just before landing but had strength enough and presence of mind to cut off the gasoline and ease the landing so that the machine was not destroyed.

Hall was picked up and taken to the Soisson's hospital where he now is under treatment In addition to the wound in the lung he received a bullet cut across the forehead, which is of an insignificant nature. The doctors are hopeful of his recovery and the military authorities are deeply interested as Hall is considered one of the most daring members of the Lafayette squadron.

"BLUE LAWS" CANNOT BE ENFORCED, HAVNER TOLD

Council Bluffs, Ia, June 30—Attorney General Havner faced an embarrassing situation here yesterday when he appeared before the state convention of county attorneys and was informed that the "blue laws" cannot be enforced At the close of a discussion by the attorney general on the relations that should exist between the attorney general and the county attorneys the subject of the "blue laws" was brought up.

One attorney asked Mr Havner point blank what he would do if he were a county attorneys Havner was plainly embarrassed Some thoughtful person moved to close the subject which was promptly done, much to the relief of the attorney general The county attorneys told Mr Havner they sympathized with him, but that public sentiment was against the ancient statute The following officers were elected by the county attorneys: President, C E. Swanson, Council Bluffs; vice president J E Burnstedt, Webster City, secretary-treasurer, T. C. Whitmore, Atlantic

IOWA CORN CROP TO SHOW HUGE INCREASE

Production Estimated at 34,000,000 Bushels Over That of Last Year.

Ames, Ia., June 30.—Iowa has bought its share of Liberty bonds, and Iowa has contributed liberally to the Red Cross.

But the state's greatest contribution to the war is not either of these.

Iowa this year is producing 34,000,000 bushels of corn, more than normal production, and it has been repeatedly asserted that good is as necessary as bullets in winning the war.

The estimate of 34,000,000 bushels increase is the combined judgment of extension men of Iowa State college, who have been active workers in the campaign to increase production. They have gathered evidence from all corners of the state indicating that 1,000,000 more acres than usual have been planted to Iowa's most important crop.

Not only in corn, but in garden truck there will be great increases in production, according to the Ames men. The proportion of increase in production of town lot gardens will be even greater than the proportionate increase in corn.

"A census has been taken of vacant lot and back yard gardens in Sioux City by mail men," said R. K. Bliss, director of extension. "The report of this survey is that garden stuff worth $200,000 will be reased on 8,537 patches."

In Des Moines, where an expert employed by the city has been busy ever since plowing time, it is believed this garden total will be close to $500,000. Every city has increased gardening in some degree.

In the volunteer food army, organized by Ames authorities by mail, there are now 15,000 enlistments, and names of recruits are being received at the rate of 300 a day. In this total are 3,000 who signed up to do gardening, 6,000 to do wartime canning, 6,500 for home thrift, 4,000 for pork production, and 5,800 for poultry production.

There are 6,000 more boys and girls in the canning, corn, pig and calf clubs than were enrolled a year ago. The total enrollment is 17,200.

Ames estimates that 150,000 persons will have been taught by its demonstrators how to can foods when fall comes, and that Iowa will enter the winter with 40,000,000 quarts of canned stuff, a surplus over last year of 16,000,000 quarts.

Extension men say the problem of farm labor for the planting season was well solved through county organization A labor shortage is just beginning to be felt, but agricultural authorities feel confident they will be able to cope with it unless the draft hits the farms too hard.

While he is helping to feed the world by producing a bumper crop of corn, the Iowa farmer incidentally is greatly helping himself If the Ames estimate of 34,000,000 bushel increase is correct, at present prices, it means 52,000,000 more cold, round dollars in the farmers' bank accounts than usual.

This is close to $2 for every man, woman and child in Iowa.

FOOD PROBLEM NATIONAL NOT STATE, HARDING TOLD

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 30.—District judges of Iowa, at their annual convention here in connection with the state bar meeting, received a letter from Governor Harding, in which he urged the judges to take up the matter of the extraordinarily high prices that are charged for foods and fuel. The judges took the matter up and gave it some serious consideration, and later on in their session a committee named for the purpose will report on the best means of dealing with the problem.

Nearly 20 district judges from all portions of the state are here attending the convention, including Judge W G. Sears and Judge George Jepson of Sioux City. The following officers for the coming year were elected last night: President, Judge Thomas Arthur, of Logan; vice president, Judge John W. Kintzinger, of Dubuque, secretary and treasurer, Judge Shelby Cullison, of Harlan.

Judge W. J. Springer, of New Hampton and Judge H. E. Fry, of Boone, are officiating at this convention as the retiring president and secretary-treasurer respectively.

Judge Cullison, the new secretary and treasurer of the state association, is the very latest pattern in judges, having been named by Governor Harding about May 1, to take Judge Stevens' place on the district bench.

The judges in resolutions on the governor's request for price regulation, agreed to help enforce all laws, but thought the problem was national rather than state.

CORPORAL HALL, OF COLFAX, MEETS DEATH IN FRANCE

Paris, June 29.—Corp. James Hall, of Colfax, Ia., a member of the Lafayette Escadrille, which is composed principally of American aviators, is believed to have been killed in an encounter with seven German airplanes, according to the Herald. He was shot through the lung. His machine fell within the French lines.

Corporal Hall, who was the author of "Kitchener's Mob" joined the American squadron a short time ago after being wounded in the British army and discharged He brought down a German airplane four days ago.

Sub-Lieutenant Dorme, one of the most skilfull French aviators, who has been credited officially with bringing down 23 German machines, has been missing since he few over the enemy's lines on May 25 on a scouting mission. His fate is unknown.

NEW EXEMPTION BOARDS ARE NAMED BY HARDING

Des Moines, Ia., June 30.—Governor Harding today wired to President Wilson to rescind his order confirming the appointment of the registration board of Iowa for exemptions and has sent to the war department new lists of names.

The original intention was to make the registration board also the exemption board.

A number of officials have resigned since the registration day and others are disinclined to serve on the boards. The governor has submitted a complete new list. Many of those included are men who served on the registration board and many more are new names altogether.

SLACKER PRISONER GOES ON HUNGER STRIKE AT BLUFFS

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 28.—Wilmer Rosenberg, alias Grant Knight, a registration slacker has gone on a hunger strike in jail here. "I will not eat until I am given my freedom," he said. He has not eaten since Monday, though yesterday he forgot and drank a cup of black coffee. If he is looking for sympathy he will be disappointed as the county jail officials are determined to stand pat. The prisoner says he did not register for military duty because of "conscientious scruples."

CONFIRMS DES MOINES ON ADVICE OF BARRY

General, After Personal Visit to Property, Holds Site Is Satisfactory.

Washington, D. C., June 29—Des Moines, Ia., was finally confirmed today by Secretary Baker as the site of one of the 16 national army cantonment sites after receipt of a supplemental report from Major General Barry, commanding the central department.

The general stated that after personal examination of the ground he was entirely satisfied of its suitability for military purposes.

Des Moines, Ia., June 29.—Upon receipt of word that General Barry had pronounced the Camp Dodge cantonment site at Des Moines satisfactory contractors resumed plans for quick mobilization of employes here. Contractor Weiz, who is in Washington, is expected to return at once and work will start within a few days. Already there is a tremendous demand for land adjoining the camp site on the part of those who wish to conduct eating stands, pop corn counters and various devices to gather in the nickels.

ALL CROPS IMPROVED WITH BETTER WEATHER

Des Moines, Ia., June 29.—The weekly report of the Iowa crop service bureau for the week ending June 26 says

The weather during the last seven days was exceptionally favorable for farming operations and the growth of crops. The temperature was about normal and the rainfall was generally light, except in the northern counties, where heavy showers occurred, accompanied in some localities by severe wind squalls which did some damage to crops. Corn cultivation progressed rapidly and most fields are fairly clean. Much replanting was done on late, overflowed bottom lands, but some fields intended for corn will be devoted to catch crops. All small grain continues to do well Early oats, rye, barley and winter wheat are heading and in southern counties early oats are well filled. First cutting of alfalfa secured in good condition with fair yield. Meadows have improved, but the hay crop will be light. Potatoes and all garden truck are in excellent condition, and a good crop of early potatoes seems to be already assured. The set of apples and other tree fruits is generally good south of central Iowa, but over the northern counties the set is lighter on account of cold rainy weather during the blooming season The June drop of apples is not yet over, but is expected to be about normal The damage to grapes by winter killing in Pottawattamie county is not as great as was anticipated A good rain would be very beneficial in the southwestern and south central counties.

O'BRIEN COUNTY EXCEEDS RED CROSS FUND QUOTA

Primghar, Ia., June 29 O'Brien county will exceed its share of the Red Cross campaign fund by quite a bit when full returns are in Those already received pass the mark considerably. The towns that waged the most spectacular and successful campaigns were Hartley and Sutherland Hartley which is a strong German town, enrolled two-thirds of its population in the Red Cross, secured a big subscription and through a large patriotic meeting a supper and a dance added to the fund One citizen of wealth who failed to assist got himself into temporary trouble and was soon converted Sutherland adopted the plan of making each subscriber of $100 or more an additional member of a committee to find the next man to do likewise and thus rolled up the largest fund in the county

RED CROSS BRANCH IS ORGANIZED AT WASHTA

Washta, Ia., June 29—A branch of the Cherokee county Red Cross society was recently organized at Washta A well attended and enthusiastic meeting was held. Several citizens from Cherokee were in attendance, among them were A. R. Molyneux and Guy M Gillette, who gave inspiring talks. The organization was completed and the following officers were elected. Chairman, Mrs A. D. Robertson; vice chairman, Mrs. M McGregor, secretary, Miss Daisy Dunn; treasurer, Miss Lura Fogleman. A relief committee was also organized which begun work immediately and promises good results.

HIS OWN CAR STOLEN AS HE RIDES IN ANOTHER

Hawarden, Ia., June 29.—Night before last a Ford car register No. 224846 was stolen from the main street of Hawarden when the owner, Mr R. E. McCalf, was invited to take a ride in another car. So far no trace of the thief has been found. All of the police of the neighboring cities were immediately notified by telephone. This is the second time this spring that a new Ford car has been stolen of which no trace has been found.

CITY OF CHEROKEE SUED FOR DAMAGES OF $2,500

Cherokee Ia., June 29 John Cook of this city brought action in the district court against the city of Cherokee asking for a judgement of $2,500 for injuries said to have been sustained in a fall on the sidewalk on Beech street, on March 17, 1917. He claims that he suffered great pain and that the injuries sustained are permanent and that he will be prevented from earning a living in the future.

CHEROKEE—Kenneth Mullen, of this city, met with rather a serious accident recently when he lost the second and third fingers of his left hand as the result of getting them caught between two drawbars. Mullen was riding on the footboard of the engine and was opening the coupler and failed to remove his hand in time and it was caught between the couplers and badly smashed.

CEDAR RAPIDS—When Red Cross workers called at the home of Mrs. S. H Hindman they found that one of her three sons has joined the national guard another is with the signal corps and the third is preparing to enter the navy. Also her two daughters will leave for France as Red Cross nurses. And in addition to this the committee received a substantial contribution to the Red Cross fund.

PRIMGHAR—The Primghar council has let contracts for new paving that aggregate $50,000. Paving in business blocks is to be done with pressed vitrified brick blocks, with an asphalt filler. In the residence sections the paving will be of concrete with metal joints and expansion filler. The work is to be completed by October 1.

CIGAR DEALERS SEEK RESTRAINING ORDERS

No Action to Collect Tax Pending an Appeal to the Supreme Court.

Des Moines, Ia., June 28.—Cigar dealers and owners of property where cigarets are sold were confident today that the supreme court tomorrow will issue an order restraining the county appraisers and collectors from collecting the taxes assessed against them. The mulct tax law which levies a tax of $300 against them was upheld in the district court yesterday. Under an agreement with the cigar dealers, the county officials have decided to take no action pending the appeal to the supreme court for an injunction. About $35,000 in back taxes is involved. The Des Moines case is expected to serve as a test for the entire state.

COUNTY W. C. T. U. MEETING IS LARGELY ATTENDED

Cushing, Ia., June 28.—The Woodbury county W. C. T. U. meeting held in Cushing was one of the most successful in the history of the organization. A large number of delegates from all parts of the county were present. Morning afternoon and evening sessions were held. Mrs. M. E. Patterson, of Sioux City, one of the national field workers was the principal outside worker present. On Friday evening the W. C. T. U. forces combined with the Red Cross workers from Sioux City and Correctionville and a splendid offering for the W. C. T. U. and $1,000 for the Red Cross was subscribed. One of the features of the convention was a gold medal contest, the first place being won by Mrs. Carl Peterson, of Sioux City. Mrs. Ruth Whitmer, of Anthon, was elected president; Mrs. O C. Foster, of Correctionville, vice president; Mrs. C E. Lowery, of Cushing, secretary; Mrs. N. M. Lease, treasurer.

MONONA COUNTY RAISES THIRD MORE THAN SHARE

Onawa, Ia., June 28—Because of delay in organization and the fact that the work at the present time is progressing so splendidly, it has been decided to prolong Red Cross week, which was to have ended yesterday According to returns received this morning the town of Whiting has raised over $1,200, which brings the quota of Monona county up to $12,000. or $3,200 more than the amount originally expected. A patriotic celebration in the interests of the Red Cross was held here. Judge Kennedy, of Sioux City was among the speakers, and the music was under the direction of Miss Elsie Kilbourne, of Sioux City.

ODEBOLT RAISES $2,500 IN DAY FOR RED CROSS

Odebolt, Ia., June 28.—Two teams of Red Cross workers cleaned up this section in a great drive Saturday—working among a very large throng of shoppers until nearly midnight. As a result the $100,000,000 fund is expected to show up Odebolt's quota of $2,500 by Tuesday, while the Odebolt chapter has pushed its local enrollment to about 600, and put nearly $1,000 more into the Red Cross treasuries—local and national. Odebolt also bought $55,000 of the Liberty bonds—more than its quota.

HOFFMANN LOSES PLACE.

Berne Switzerland, June 26.—Gustave Ador, was elected a member of the federal council today to succed Dr. Hoffman, who recently resigned on account of his connection with the effort to arrange a separate peace between Germany and Russia. Fourteen deputies voted for Dr. Hoffman, but there was a large majority for Mr. Ador.

ROOT RECEIVES REPORTERS.

Moscow, June 26.—Elihu Root, head of the American mission which is visiting Russia, received in Moscow journalists and delivered to them a talk on the discipline in the American army.

Mr. Root explained that the American officers either are educated in a special military school or have risen from the ranks, in the latter case only after they have passed the required examinations. Such a thing as the election of officers by the men was unknown in the United States. There were no soldiers' committees there and no participation by soldiers in courtsmartial.

GERMANS REPORT GAIN.

...Berlin, June 30. (via London).—Ger... forces yesterday captured French ...sitions on both sides of the Malan... road, on the west bank of ...use, the Verdun sector, over a ...dth of 2,000 yards and a depth of 500 ...rds, the war office announced today. ...The Germans stormed a 300 yard wide French position in Avocourt wood. More than 550 prisoners were taken at both points.

London, June 30.—British troops today in an offensive, gained their whole objective, says a telegram from British headquarters in France. The British captured German forward positions on a 2,000-yard front south and west of Oppy, in the Arras sector.

The official statement says the British captured prisoners and machine guns. They also continue to gain ground south of the Souchez river and have entered the town of Avion, about two miles south of Lens.

GERMANS GAIN FOOTING.

Paris, June 30.—Picked German troops made a heavy attack last night on the Verdun front near Hill 304 and Avocourt wood, after especially severe shelling. Today's official statement says the attack was disorganized by the sharp reply of the French artillery, and that the Germans obtained a footing at only a few points in the first line.

This morning the Germans made another violent effort east of Hill 304. It failed completely.

The Germans were active on the Aisne front also. All their attacks were repulsed.

TOLL OF THE PLUNGER.

Paris, June 30.—Two French merchantment of more than 1,600 tons and three of less than that size were sunk by submarines or mines in the week ending June 24, according to the weekly announcement issued here today. In that time there were 1,088 arrivals at French ports and 969 sailings.

London, June 30.—The Elder-Dempster steamer Addah, was torpedoed without warning and sunk by a German submarine on June 15. The submarine fired on the captain's boat, killing eight men.

GUARD WILL GO SOUTH ON CALL

Will Not Spend Winter at Home Stations—Drafting It Into Service Delayed.

Washington, D. C., June 30.—National guard regiments will be sent forward to their divisional mobilization camps in the south immediately after they have been drafted into the federal service. Heretofore it had been expected that because of lack of tents it might be necessary to keep many regiments at their home armories or state mobilization points for an indefinite period.

The exact date of the application of the draft to the guard is still under discussion. The war department is debating the advisability of postponing the application of the draft until August 5 and covering the entire guard at that time in one operation.

GERMAN CONSULS TO NORWAY QUIT POSTS

Resignations Believed Due to Revelations in Plot to Destroy Neutral Shipping.

Christiana, June 30.—German councils of Stokke and Arendal have resigned, according to a report circulated here today.

Probably the resignations are due to revelations in the German bomb plots recently uncovered in Norway, when it became known that German secret agents with infernal machines and bombs had attempted to blow up the shipping facilities in that place by trying to place them aboard Norwegian ships.

QUEEN SEES DANGER LONG AS WAR LASTS

The Hague, June 29.—In a speech from the throne at the opening of the extraordinary session of parliament today Queen Wilhelmia, referring to the almost unanimous declaration of the states general in favor of a revision of the provisions of the constitution dealing with suffrage and education said:

"It is for the states general to decide whether the work thus begun shall be completed. Should this year pass without the conclusion of peace, manifold sacrifices will continue to be demanded of the Netherlands people, and we are confident that the sacrifices will be made cheerfully.

"Our relations with foreign powers are favorable. There are many reasons for gratitude, but let us not forget that so long as the war wages, dangers threaten country and the people may again be called upon to use their utmost strength for liberty and independence. That God may guard them, is my earnest prayer."

ARGENTINA READY TO END NEUTRALITY

Sinking of Toro Brings Crisis Which May Compel Government to Act.

Buenos Aires, June 30—Argentine appears likely to announce revocation of her neutrality between Germany and the United States within a few hours. The Toro, which was recently sunk by a sub, has apparently brought the government to a crisis.

IOWA RED CROSS FUND NEAR $1,500,000 MARK

Des Moines, Ia., June 30.—A. E. Kepford and James E. Weaver, state directors, predicted today that the Iowa donation to the Red Cross will go to at least $1,500,000 and may go $250,000 beyond that mark.

BREAKS HUNGER STRIKE.

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 30.—Wilmer Rosenberg, held as conscription slacker, broke his hunger strike today at the county jail, eating for the first time since Monday.

TEUTON RETREAT TO FOLLOW FALL

Hindenburg Expected to Yield Much French and Belgian Soil When Lens Is Captured.

London, June 30.—How much of a "strategic retreat" the Germans will announce after the fall of Lens occupied a prominent place in official discussion here today, the fall of the city being accepted as a foregone conclusion.

Steady Progress Made.

It was conceded that there will be some desperate fighting, prolonged over a number of days, before the coal metropolis falls into the hands of the allies.

Further "bites" into the Teuton position west and south in the suburbs of the city indicate steady progress by the British.

The belief here is that with Lens gone Field Marshal Hindenberg will stage another retreat to "prepared positions" along a line running restfully to Zonnebeke, 15 miles north of Lille, down to in front of Lille, south to Carven and connecting with the famous Droucourt switch line in front of Doual, Cambrai and St. Quentin.

From the Droucourt south the Germans would continue to hold their gained territory.

Would Release More Soil.

The suggestion that their withdrawal to the north would release at least 150 square miles of Belgium and French territory to the north was received with rejoicing.

The retreat would be explained away to the German people on the basis that "it would straighten out the German line," it was believed. It would, without a doubt, since the lines about Lens and at Vimy ridge and of Messines has been jagged.

Lens was reported today to be practically in ruins from the German scheme of destruction. Ordinarily it is a city of 25,000 population, the center of the richest coal fields of northern France, surrounded by 200 square miles, and yields 15,000,000 tons of fuel a year; so that victory to the allies has not only a potent moral one but likewise most valuable in relieving the coal famine.

DUTCH WARSHIPS TO GUARD TRADE

Armored Cruiser in U. S. Port, First Within 10 Years, on Mission Kept Secret.

An Atlantic Port, June 30.—A Dutch armored cruiser, the first warship flying the flag of Holland to come into this port for more than 10 years, arrived here today. The warship will remain for several days. Officers of the ship declined to disclose the mission of the vessel, but it was reported that she is to act as convoy for a number of Holland passenger and freight vessels now about ready to leave American ports.

BOOST COAL SUPPLY BY PROHIBITION, URGED

Taking Liquor From Miners Will Add 25,000,000 to Year's Output, Morrow Says.

Washington, D. C., June 30.—Eliminate strong drink from the coal producing states, J. D. A. Morrow, of the Pittsburgh Coal Producers' association, told the Senate interstate commerce committee today, and coal production can be increased 25,000,000 tons a year with an adequate car supply.

Alcoholic liquor is one of the worst enemies of the miners in western Pennsylvania, said Mr. Morrow, and it is impossible to get men to work more than a few days a week even when the car supply permits. The same trouble exists in Illinois and Ohio, and also was felt in Indiana until the state became "dry."

U. S. SOLDIERS LODGED IN TOWER OF LONDON

London, June 15.—(by mail)—The yeoman of the guard, or "beefeaters," as they are more familiarly known, who stand guard in their costumes of black and red, over the Tower of London, are still talking about their guests, the American soldiers who came over with Major General Pershing. They were the first American troops ever quartered in the famous stronghold. During their five days' stay in London, the advance guard of the American army slept, ate, and made friends in the place, which Americans first think of as the spot where spies are shot.

Inside the walls of the place which has played such an important part in England's history were gathered khaki clad men from all parts of the United States, destined to be the first of the American army to participate in the European war.

WITH AN ARM SHOT OFF, HE'S BACK IN TRENCHES WITH AN ARTIFICIAL ONE

London, June 10, (by mail).—When a German explosive bullet, near Ypres last summer, blew away Lieutenant A. A. E. Batchelor's left arm, the Saskatoon boys who made up his battalion said good-bye to him, as they thought, for good. Today Lieutenant Batchelor is on his way back to his battalion, wearing an artificial arm. The task of convincing the war office he could handle his job, he said, was the hardest thing he has had to do since the war began.

PERSHING GREETED BY ALSACE COMMITTEE

Paris, June 30.—Major General Pershing yesterday received a delegation from the Alsace-Lorraine republican committee. Referring to the American commander's Alsatian ancestry, the vice president, M. Staerling, told the general how proud they were that a descendant of their little country had come to fight for the triumph of their inalienable rights and the restoration to France of the lost provinces.

General Pershing was visibly moved. He said he was most happy to greet representatives of the valiant people who had suffered so deeply because of fidelity to their country and that he had a warm place in his heart for Alsace the land of his fathers.

BRAZIL WILL HELP ENEMIES OF KAISER

Favor to U. S. in War Now Extended to Include All Entente Nations.

Rio Janeiro, June 30.—Brazil has revoked her decree of neutrality in the war between the entente allies and Germany.

Brazil, having previously revoked its policy of aloofness, so far as it affected the hostilities between the United States and Germany, now has come definitely into the open and announced that it can no longer be considered neutral.

The Brazilian government, by act of congress late in May authorized the revocation of Brazil's neutrality in the war between Germany and the United States. In notifying the Brazilian legations of the sanction of the revocation, Nilo Pecanpa, the foreign minister, in a note, said Brazil up to that time had refrained from taking sides in the European conflict, but that the republic could not remain indifferent from the moment the United States found itself involved in a struggle for the rights of the people and when Germany meted out indiscriminately to Brazil the most brutal treatment.

A dispatch from Rio Janeiro, June 9, said diplomatic exchanges with representatives of the entente powers were in progress and that practical results might be expected shortly. It was added that war ships of the entente would be permitted to visit Brazilian ports without adhering to time limits imposed by neutrality.

BRUSSILOFF PLEDGES RUSS ARMY TO FIGHT

General Scott and Staff Soon Will Visit Rumania to Greet Rulers for America.

Petrograd, June 30.—Elihu Root, head of the American commission and Foreign Minister Tereschtenko returned to Petrograd yesterday after a brief visit to staff headquarters, where they were welcomed by General Brussiloff, in the name of the Russian army, which, declared the commander in chief, would continue, with all the powers at its disposal, not only to fight for its own cause—that of fortifying liberty recently acquired—but at the same time hand in hand with America, to fight for the right of all nations to shape their destinies in accordance with their own desires.

Uses Emperor's Palace.

There was little in the small country town of Mohilev to correspond with a conventional view of a general staff headquarters. There is nothing left to arrest the attention of the observer except the emperor's residence which is now used by General Brussiloff and the military hotel where members of the staff are quartered. Otherwise it is a peaceful village nestling on the bank of the Dnieper, 200 miles from the firing line.

Wednesday noon the commission lunched with General Brussiloff and soon thereafter Major General Scott and aides, military members of the commission, escorted by Russian general staff officers, departed for Kiev. After a short tour of the southwestern front, Major General Scott will go to Rumania and will greet the king and queen in the name of the commission and the American government.

COLORADO MINERS TO STRIKE AUGUST 1

Delay of Letter and Failure of Wellborn to Attend Meeting Rouse Workers.

Denver, Colo., June 30.—Miners in the southern Colorado coal field of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company will be called out on strike August 1 unless there is a satisfactory settlement of their difficulties with the company, James F. Moran, president of District No. 15, United Mine Workers of America, announced last night.

Officers of the district asked the national officers two weeks ago for permission to call a strike, when J. F. Welborn, president of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, failed to attend a meeting called by the miners who declared they wished to confer in the interest of harmony. Mr. Welborn had written a letter to Mr. Moran setting forth the company's attitude, but the letter was delayed and action was taken by the miners.

HUGE RESERVOIR FORMED.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 30.—The gates in the new $2,000,000 federal dam near Fort Snelling were closed late today, forming a five-mile "lake" which will make Minneapolis the head of Mississippi river navigation. Electricians are connecting up the power by which the gates of the lock are to be operated, and it will be possible for Mississippi boats to make lockage by the first of the week, according to Capt. George W. Freeman, in charge of the work at the dam.

CONSTANTINE'S BROTHER TO WED RICH U. S. WOMAN

London, June 29.—Special dispatches from Athens say Prince Christopher, brother of former King Constantine, of Greece, is coming to London to marry a rich American woman. The Daily Chronicle gives the name of Miss Lits, without details as to her identity.

The prince, who is 29 years old and an ex-sub-lieutenant of the Grecian infantry, has twice been reported engaged, each time to a wealhy American woman.

THE WAR AT A GLANCE.

The entente powers must fight on until they have reached the end they set out to attain when they accepted Germany's challenge to civilization, declared David Lloyd-George, the British premier in a speech at Glasgow today. To permit the war to come to an end a single hour sooner would be "the greatest disaster that ever befell mankind," he added.

These utterances possess notable significance at this moment, when there have been suggestions that the allied powers fighting Germany might agree to some revision of their previously declared war aims and at a time when hints have been coming out of Germany that next week's session of the German reichstag might witness some new statement on the subject of peace by Chancellor von Bethman-Hollweg.

Possible point to the suggested German peace movement is given by reports of mysterious political happenings within the German empire. The impression has been given that the expected developments would be of a dramatic nature and the press seems to have been completely muzzled, so far as discussion of political topics in concerned.

In the field of military operations the important developement at present is the cumulative pressure which Gen. Sir Douglas Haig is applying to the German lines about the coal city and mine fields of Lens.

The operation now seems to have taken on a somewhat broader scope, suggesting that the British commander in chief is aiming at the far flanks of the Lens position in a wide, encircling movement, while keeping up the push here and there on the immediate environments of the city.

On the French front the Verdun district has again sprung into prominence. The Germans have been making some gains on the French.

SAYS ACCUSED WOMAN WAS BELIEVED WIFE

Inquest Held Over Bride of 10 Months Reveals Possible Murder Motive.

Brookline, Mass., June 30.—An inquest was held today into the death of Mrs. Pauline Keyes, wife of George H. Keyes, a real estate operator, whose body with bullet wounds in the head and hand, was found in her apartment here on June 19. Miss Harriet A. Varney, who was arrested in Upton on June 26, pleaded not guilty to the charge of having murdered Mrs. Keyes and is now in the county jail at Dedham awaiting a hearing on July 6. Relatives of Miss Varney have told the police that she was believed by them to be the wife of Keyes.

RUSS DELAY HOLDS UP GENERAL MAUDE'S MEN

Removal of General Yudevitch by Slavs Stops Offensive in Mesopotamia.

London, June 30.—The military correspondents of the Times gives a detailed account of the present conditions of the British forces in Mesopotamia, showing a complete contrast with the revelations in the report on the Mesopotamia, an expedition made public Tuesday night in the blue book. The correspondent says the army there now is admirably provided and medical arrangements are thoroughly satisfactory.

The writer says events in Russia considerably influence the British position in Mesopotamia and in consequence of the inaction of the Russian army in the Caucasus, the situation of General Maude, commander in chief, is radically changed. If the Russian offensive under General Yudevitch, ex-commander in chief of the Caucasus, had been prosecuted, the Anglo-Indian army would now form the left flank of the Russian line. General Yudevitch was removed and no offensive occurred.

IOWAN APPOINTED TO VOCATIONAL BOARD

Labor Lobbyist Gets Long Term on Federal Vocational Body Named by President.

Washington, June 30.—President Wilson today appointed the board for vocational education which will have charge of the federal government's participation in that work as provided in the recent bill passed by congress. The members are: Arthur E. Holder, of Iowa, three years; Chas. A. Greathouse, of Indiana, two years; James Phinney Munroe, of Massachusetts, one year.

Arthur E. Holder, formerly of Iowa, at one time deputy state labor commissioner, has been made head of the vocational education board. Mr. Holder for some time has been legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor.

URGES CONSERVATION OF DAIRY STOCK IN IOWA

Des Moines, Ia., June 30.—State dairy commissioner W. B. Barney is home from Washington, and acting under advices from Herbert C. Hoover, food commissioner, will urge a conservation of dairy calves and heifer calves in Iowa. "The supply is getting short," says Mr. Barney, "and such countries as England, France and Holland will find their herds completely gone by the time the war ends."

EMBEZZLER SENTENCED.

Philadelphia, June 30.—Jesse Williamson II, well connected and a social leader, was today sentenced to not less than eight nor more than 24 years imprisonment and pay a fine of $1,000 on indictments charging embezzlement of approximately $725,000 of trust funds of the Pennsylvania company for the insurance of lives and granting annuities, of which he was secretary.

TEUTON COLONIES TO PICK MASTER WHEN WAR ENDS

New Plan Laid Down by Lloyd-George in Glasgow Speech, Spurning German Talk of a Peace Conference.

WAR OBJECTS UNCHANGED

To End Struggle Without Realizing Ends Sought Would Be Disaster, He Tells Scotch Audience.

Glasgow, June 30.—Premier Lloyd George, speaking at Glasgow today, on the question of peace, said that in his judgment the war would come to an end when the entente armies had reached the aims which they had set out to attain when they accepted Germany's challenge. If the war ended a single minute before, he said, it would be the greatest disaster in the history of mankind. The premier said textually:

"No doubt we can have peace now at a price. Germany wants peace—even Prussia ardently desires it. They said: 'Give us some indemnity for the wrongs we have done, just a little territory here and a little there and just a few privileges in other directions and we will clear out.' We are told that if we are prepared to make peace now Germany will restore the independence of Belgium. But who has said so?

"No German statesman has ever said he would restore the independence of Belgium. The German chancellor came very near to it, but all the junkers fell on him and he received a sound box from the mailed fist.

"The only terms on which Germany has suggested restoring Belgium are not those of independence but of vassalage. Then came the doctrine of the status quo and no annexation and no indemnities. No German statesman has accepted even that."

Not After Colonies.

"But what did indemnity mean? Indemnity is an essential part of the mechanism of civilization in every land and clime. Otherwise, what guarantee have we against a repetition? Then it is said that is not what you are after. You are after our colonies and probably Palestine and Mesopotamia. If we had entered into this war purely for the German colonies, we would not have raised an army of 3,000,000 or 4,000,000. We could have got them without adding a single battalion to the army.

"Our greatest army is in France. We are there to recover for the people who have been driven out, their patrimony, the land which belonged to them.

As to Mesopotamia, it is not and never has been Turkish. You have only to read the terrible reports to see what a wilderness the Turks have made of the Garden of Eden. What is to happen to Mesopotamia must be left to the peace conference and there is one thing that will never happen to it. It will never be restored to the blasting tyranny of the Turks.

Colonies Up to People.

"The same observation applies to Armenia. As to the German colonies, that again is a matter which must be settled by the great international peace conference. When we come to settle who must be the future trustees of those uncivilized lands we must take into account the sentiments of the peoples themselves and whether they are anxious to secure the return of their former masters or whether they would rather trust their destinies to other and juster and gentler hands. The wishes, desires and interests of the people themselves of all those countries must be the dominant factor in settling their future government.

"Peace must be framed on so equitable a basis that the nations would not wish to disturb it. It must be guaranteed by destruction of Prussian military power so that the confidence of the German people shall be put in the equity of their cause and not in the might of their armies. A better guarantee than either would be democratization of the German government.

DUMA DECLINES TO ACCEPT DISSOLUTION

Rejects Plea That It Has Been Succeeded by Congresses as Lawmaker.

Petrograd, June 30.—The duma today formally refused the request of a number of elements in Russia that it dissolve on the grounds that it was superseded as a legislative body by the all Russian congress and those of the workmen and peasants.

ATTACKS THREE WOMEN HE INVITED TO SUPPER

Laconia, N. H., June 30.—Miss Elizabeth Sucss, assistant matron and Miss Dorothy Davis, a teacher at the state school for feeble minded here, were suffering today from wounds on the head and nervous shocks, received when their companion, Miss Alice Black Richards, head teacher at the school, was murdered in a cottage on the shore of Lake Winnisquam last night. Morris P. Bradford, who had been with the women and gave himself up to the police, is held and will be given a hearing today.

According to the brief statement obtained from Miss Sucss and Miss Davis, the three women had accepted Bradford's invitation to take supper with him at the cottage. There Bradford attacked them, they declared. He bound all three hand and foot, cut Miss Richards' throat, struck the other two over the head and cut their hair off.
